MR. BEECHER'S DEATH.

An Incident Which May Account for the Fatal Stroke of Apoplexy.

NEW YORK, March 12.—A gentleman of this city sends to the Sun an account of an incident which he thinks may account for Mr. Beecher's fatal stroke of apoplexy. He writes that on Thursday evening, when Mr. and Mrs Beecher were in this city selecting furniture for the Plymouth Church parlors, they got on a Third Avenue car, on which they rode up town. They arose to leave the car as it approached 39th street. The conductor pulled the strap. Mr. Beecher, who appeared to be vigorous in health, did not wait for the car to stop, but got off while it was yet in motion. In doing so he came down hard on his heel. It was an awkward step, and it seemed as if Mr. Beecher had felt the shock somewhat severely. He pressed his right hand to his heart for a moment, and then buttoned his overcoat and pursued his way. Symptoms of apoplexy developed slowly during Thursday night and Friday morning.

His Last Sermon.

Mr. Beecher's last sermon was concluded in these words:—"We are all marching thither. We are going home. Men shiver at the idea that they are going to die; but this world is only a nest. We are scarcely hatched out of it here. We do not know ourselves. We have strange feelings that do not interpret themselves. The mortal in us is crying out for the immortal. As in the night the child, waking with some vague and nameless terror, cries out to express its fear and dread and its cry is interpreted in the mother's heart, who runs to the child and lays her hand upon it and quiets it to sleep again, so do you not suppose that he who is goodness itself cares for you? Do you suppose that he whose royal name is Love has less sympathy for you than a mother has for her babe? Let the world rock. If the foot of God is on the cradle, fear not. Look up, take courage, hope, and hope to the end."

His Own Prediction Verified.

Mr. Beecher was once asked by one of his myriads of correspondents: "How shall I feel when I come to die?" The great preacher replied, characteristically: "You will probably feel stupid," referring to the kindly provision of nature in benumbing the faculties when putting her children to their last sleep. His prediction has been closely verified in his own case, the coma of apoplexy being one of the states which he describes as 'stupid"—a condition of sleepiness followed by insensibility and death.—New York World.

A Prayer for Reporters.

In the Minnesota Senate the other day the chaplain startled that august body by closing his prayer with a word for the newspaper men. He said—"And now, dear Lord, bless the reporters, whose nimble pens catch our every word almost before it is uttered. Like Thyself, they are omnipresent and almost omnipotent. If we take the wings of the morning and fly to the uttermost parts of the earth they are there. They meet us in the jungles of Africa; they waylay us in the solitary canyons of Colorado, and when at length we find the latitude of the magnetic pole, behold they are there. May their light and goodness be equal to their power, and when the general assembly of Heaven convenes let no reporter be excluded. Amen!"—Rochester Democrat.

A Light Weight.

Francis A. A. Tooke is the happy father of the smallest boy in Prince Edward. The child weighs two pounds and is as lively as a cricket. It was born on election day, Feb. 22nd, and as it was assisted into this world by one of the parliamentary candidates, Mr. Tooke is seriously considering the propriety of calling it "Boodle."—Belleville Intelligencer.

Captain Ead's Ship Railway.

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 12.—It is said at the Mexican legation that the death of Captain Eads will not interfere with the status of the concession made to him by the Mexican Government for a ship railroad across the peninsula of Tehuantepec.

The Twelfth Day and no Work—Bills Introduced—The Budget Promised—Public Accounts.

FRIDAY, March 11.—The House met at 3 o'clock. Several petitions were presented, also the reports of the Niagara Falls Park Commission and of the Commissioners on the Consolidated Statute, and a number of bills were intrpduced.

THE BUDGET.

Mr. MOWAT said that the Treasurer would make his financial statement on Tuesday.

PUBLIC ACCOUNTS.

Mr. MEREDITH asked when the Public Accounts Committee would be called together?

Mr. ROSS said that if they desired they could meet next Tuesday.

The House adjourned at 3.45 p. m.

DASHED INTO ETERNITY.

A Series of Fatal Accidents Reported from Prince Edward County.

Details of a shocking coasting accident which happened at Roblin's Mill on Friday night, reached the city on Saturday. The steep embankment to the rear of the flour mill has been a favorite resort of coasting parties all winter. Sleighs, especially bobs, dash down the steep incline at lightning like rapidity. On Friday night a party of three young men were merrily enjoying themselves with a pair of bobs. Byron Bush, aged 18 years, was steering. In making a descent a runner of the leading sleigh cut through the crust and Bush could not control it. The party dashed full speed into a stump. Poor Bush's head was knocked into jelly. Death was instantaneous. The others escaped unhurt. The deceased was a son Smith Bush, Rossmore, and was working at Samuel Allen's carriage shop, Roblin's Mills.

Added to this is the report that a child was drowned in a mill pond at Melville, while another lost its life at the union school house from falling into a well.—Belleville Intelligencer.

A GREAT IRON DEAL.

All the Mining Property in Ontario Included.

NEW YORK, March 12.—An immense iron combination is being formed here which aims at nothing short of owning and controlling all the known valuable iron deposits of Canada, now being ascertained to be the richest iron country in the world. The Central Ontario railway which runs from Trenton on Lake Ontario, through the centre of Canada; and all the iron interests connected with it are to form part of this scheme, the road is to be extended 150 miles through the heart of the district to a junction with the Canadian Pacific Railway at Lake Nipissing. The capital of the company is to be 10 millions, more than two-thirds of which has already been pledged. The syndicate, it is said, will own more than a hundred different properties at various points in Canada and mineral development, even greater than that on Lake Superior, is predicted.

Among the principal movers in the matter are Senators Payne, Stevenson, Burke and S. J. Ritchie, all of Ohio; Erastus Wiman, A. B. Broadman and other prominent parties in New York.

THE FREE PRESS GANG.

Some of the American newspapers have an Ottawa correspondent whose capacity for lying is phenomenal. He manufactures interviews to order and represents Cabinet Ministers as saying whatever it suits him to communicate. The latest specimen of his skill in mendacity and mischiefmaking is an interview—bogus of course—with the Minister of Customs. In order to produce the requisite amount of sensation and to insure the publication of his trash, he makes that official say that the Dominion Government has under its consideration a retaliatory bill, giving the details, which they propose to lay before Parliament at its next session Such a lie as this is by no means harmless. It is calculated to generate ill feeling between the people of the two countries and to cause anxiety and inconvenience to business men on both sides of the line who place faith in it. A stop should be put to this business of sending false news to foreign newspapers. The Ottawa scoundrel is incorrigible, but if the newspapers which he deceives have any principle they will discharge him forthwith and employ in his place some one who will send them news that can be relied upon. If after this they publish his reports, no other conclusion can be arrived at than that they are as mendacious as he is, and the lies which their Ottawa correspondent telegraph them are the kind of news that they require.—Montreal Star (Ind.)

MINDEN.

DIPHTHERIA.—We were exceedingly sorry that this dreaddisease had broken out in the family of Mr. Walter Smith, of the township of Anson, and carried off a fine little girl of 11 years of age. We understand this was the only member of the family that has taken it and we sincerely hope the remainder of the children will escape the disease. Mr. and Mrs. Smith have the sincere sympathy of a large circle of friends in their sad bereavement.—Echo.

OMEMEE.

ACCIDENT.—Last Friday while Walter, son of Mr. A. Feir, Ops, was working on the roof of one of their mills he slipped and fell to the ground a distance of about sixteen feet, receiving severe spinal injury. Under the skilful treatment of Dr. Cochrane, Omemee, the young man is gradually recovering.

A KING DETHRONED.—Last Monday while George, son of Mr. Adam Spence, of Emily, was playing "King of the castle" at the school-house, he fell and broke his right leg. Dr. Cochrane who was immediately sent for reduced the fracture and the little fellow is doing as well as could be expected.—Herald.

PETER BRUNDAGE.

A Strange But True Story of a Boy's Captivity.

A few weeks ago, in the Western part of Prince County, P. E. I., an old man died, whose story brings vividly before the mind the difficulties and dangers which the earlier settlers in these Maritime Provinces had to encounter. Peter Brundage, as he was always called, though his real name was Charles Brundage, was about 80 years of age at the time of his death. When a child of three or four years of age, living with his parents over in New Brunswick, he was carried away by the Indians. At that time the country was but imperfectly settled and the Indians were still numerous and oftentimes troublesome. They roamed about, sometimes begging, sometimes robbing, and during their wanderings occasionally they came to the house of Peter's parents. One time they called, and going away, carried with them the young boy. His disappearance was not observed at once, and when it was found that he was missing all search for him proved fruitless. Years passed by and no tidings were received of the lost child; his family had almost ceased to look for him. His brothers and sisters married and settled some in New Brunswick, others on this Island. One day a strolling party of Indians came to the house of one of Peter's sisters, whose attention was attracted by a youth, who, though dressed as an Indian and talking their tongue, was unmistakably of white parentage. Through the smoke tanned face shone clear, blue eyes, and though he was almost as dark in colour as the Indians whom he was with, yet it was clear that the skin was not that of a Mic-mac. The sister was struck by his appearance and at length recognized her long lost brother. We have not been able to learn why it was he was not at once taken from his captors: it may be that in the then thinly settled state of the country he could not be rescued. Certain it is that he remained with the Indians; but the boy had now found out his real condition and race, and he was desirious of making his escape. But this the Indians effectually prevented. Several times he ran away from them but was as often pursued and captured. We well remember, years ago, poor old Peter telling the writer of one of these attempts to escape. He got away from the Indians who pursued him with dogs. He thought to hide himself, and crept into a large hollow log for concealment. The dogs tracked him out, and the poor boy was caught in a trap. He could not go on, and the Indians were setting their dogs on him. The whole calves of his legs were almost torn away. He used sometimes, though rarely, to show the scars which to his dying day bore witness to the terrible treatment he had received. Having worried him with their dogs the Indians at length carried him back to their camps, where their anger at his attempt to escape was not appeased until they had inflicted still further terrible tortures upon him. At last he seemed to have given up all further effort to get away from them and lived with his captors, an Indian like themselves. In later years he used to live in a camp by himself, a solitary, kind-hearted, simple old fellow. His people were always anxious to bring him back to ways of white men, but he had become too thoroughly imbued with the Indian habit to change. For a long time he used to have his solitary camp on Lot 11, and for a few years used to wander about different parts of the western end of the Island. Twice during the last three or four years he has walked down to Charlottetown, and though he was never known to ask for anything, it was well understood that Peter was always grateful for any gift voluntarily offered him. He was strictly honest. He was very fond of children, and we well remember how Peter used to watch for his favorites among the school children, whom he used to treat to maple sugar, and for whose benefit he would save up his few coppers to buy apples or candy; and the children were always fond of old Peter. A few weeks ago the strange story of his life closed at a house on lot 5, where kindly cared for he passed away. His story seems strange to us now, and vividly recalls what was the state of the country in the early part of this century.—Charlottetown Patriot.

The ladies shriek violently and the players fled in dismay.

THE QUEEN'S JUBILEE.

LONDON, March 12.—The Queen has had drawn up an outline plan setting forth her Majesty's own desires with regard to her Jubilee and Royal progress. It will be placed before a special Privy Council. If her health permits, she will visit Birmingham, Manchester, Liverpool, Edinburg and Glasgow, and will hold a succession of Drawing-rooms and levees at Buckingham Palace. The Queen has exchanged Jubilee congratulations with the Pope, who has sent her a superb mosaic. Her Majesty to return has presented the Roman Pontiff with a rare edition of the Vulgate.

INCENDIARISM.

DUBLIN, March 13.—While three policemen, with two emergency men, were asleep in a house on a farm of the Earl of Kingston, in County Roscommon, on Friday night, incendiaries set fire with paraffin to the bedroom occupied by the officers. The men, when rescued, were almost dead from suffocation.

TRUTH'S UNTRUTH.

LONDON, March 12.—Captain Smith, of the ship Thirimere, has recovered from Mr. Henry Labouchere $2,000 damages for a libellous statement published in the London Truth, that the captain's ship was a floating grogshop, and imputing to his inebriety a collision which resulted in loss of life. The Thirimere collided with and sank the Andrew Johnson, off Cape Horn. Seventeen lives were lost.

ATTACK ON THE CZAR.

LONDON, March 13.—The Standard has received a cipher despatch from what it considers a trustworthy source, saying that an unsuccessful attempt has been made to assassinate the Czar. No details are given.

LULL IN WAR RUMOURS.

LONDON, March 13.—The lull in war rumours on the Continent is only temporary, and the activity of the different nations in making wholesale preparations for war continues unabated. The cause of the present cessation of alarmist reports is that the courts of Berlin and Vienna have conspired to maintain silence for a time, their action being based on a general resolve that the birthday of Emperor William and its attendant festivities shall pass with at least a semblance of peace, so that nothing may mar the general spirit of friendship and congratulation to the aged monarch.

URGING CLEMENCY.

LONDON, March 13.—The British Government has advised the Regency of Bulgaria to stop the execution of the officers who were engaged in the recent futile revolt. Lord Salisbury disapproves of the shooting on Friday of 16 non-commissioned officers of the rebellious garrison, and has ordered the British Agent at Sofia to urgently insist on clemency towards the other offenders now under arrest.

Against an Extra Session.

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 12.—Speaker Carlise had an interview with the President yesterday, in which the latter expressed himself quite forcibly upon the subject of calling an extra session of Congress. He said positively that he would not do so unless it became, in his opinion, necessary to avoid financial depression. He intimated that if the accumulating surplus in the Treasury grew to such at extent that it became alarming, and threatened business complications, he would then assemble the 50th congress, otherwise he would not, no matter how much he was advised to do so.

IF anything clogs the waste-pipes in the house we become alarmed, for sewer-gas is apt to generate disease. The children, then, are removed to their grand-parent's, or kept out of doors as much as possible, until the defect is remedied. But the waste-pipes of the human system are allowed to clog, and the sufferer, who cannot get away from the poison, becomes unfit for work or pleasure. In such cases Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Purgative Pellets will gently remove the cause, and the effect will vanish of itself. By druggists.

MONDAY, MARCH 14, 1887.

THE PUBLIC MEETING.

THE public did not take kindly to the idea of a public meeting to discuss the fire department equipment in its relation to insurance rates, and the attendance at the meeting on Friday evening was not very large and could scarcely be considered representative. The Town Council had asked the advice of the ratepayers, and when the Councillors give a considerable portion of their time gratuitously for the purpose of attending to the business of the community, it was not courteous on the part of the ratepayers to refuse to give one evening for consultation on an important matter. It is true that the Councillors are elected to attend to the business of the corporation, but that does not prevent them from asking for a consultation with those whose representatives they are, and it is to be regretted that the invitation was not more generally accepted.

The question regarding the equipment of the fire department was, by Mr. Andrew McNeil's enquiries, narrowed down to a point easily understood. The town is rated by the insurance companies in class C. The purchase of a chemical engine would raise it to class B. The engine would cost $2,500, which expenditure could be met by an annual appropriation of $200 for twenty years, and the saving on George street alone on the insurance rates would be about $1,000 a year. Such were the facts presented.

As the meeting did not give the Council any advice on the subject, the Council will, of course, act as in their judgment appears best. There would be further cost than the purchase price of a chemical engine, and, on the other hand, in addition to the saving in insurance rates, there would be increased protection against fire. The question should be carefully considered, and whatever the outcome, credit is due to Mr. McNeil for the energetic manner in which he has taken hold of the matter.

SAYING "NO."

THE chief performances of the Mowat Administration in the very brief sittings of the Legislature so far have consisted in saying "No" to good suggestions from the Conservative side of the House.

Mr. Meredith requested that a map should be prepared showing in colors the timber lands now under license and those remaining unappropriated. As this is a most valuable portion of the capital of the Province of Ontario, and as it is rapidly melting away to meet current expenditures, such a map would be most useful as having a tendency towards the husbanding of our resources. But the Ministry has no desire to economise them, preferring to waste them like a spendthrift life-tenant, and returned a curt "No."

Mr. Creighton judiciously sought information as to the proposed Parliament buildings, which threaten us with a second edition of the Albany Capitol. He especially wanted to know why the Canadian plans were rejected by a United States architect, who then got the job himself. But Mr. Fraser and his colleagues shunned the light and answered "No."

Mr. Lees invited the Government to take some steps toward freeing the roads of the Province from tolls. But Mr. Mowat declined to be troubled with such practical business, asked the Opposition, or private members to undertake it for him, and persisted in his "No."

It seems, however, that it is only in the House that the ministers can answer "No;" they are afraid to say it elsewhere. Mr. Miller asked why a vacancy in a registry office was not filled up, when Mr. Mowat, with cynical effrontery replied that it was because there were so many applicants that it was difficult to choose between, that is that Mr. Mowat was afraid to offend any of his supporters, to whom he has been holding out delusive hopes by saying "No."

But though Mr. Mowat and his colleagues utter their arrogant "Noes" in the House, the efforts of the Opposition are not necessarily wasted. There is always the hope that Mr. Mowat having said his "No," may in the next session adopt, as he has so often done before, the wise proposals of the Opposition leaders and claim credit for introducing a measure thus forced upon him.

THE Rouge-Rielist journals of the Province of Quebec state that there has been a great meeting of Conservative celebrities with Mr. Chapleau to make party arrangements. Among those present are said to have been Messrs. Girouard, Ouimet, Guilbault, Therien, McMillan, Audet and others, all of whom they have claimed as Opposition members. The falsehood of their preposterous claims is now being admitted even by themselves. These gentlemen and others claimed as Nationalists, and, therefore, as belonging to the Opposition, will be found as of old working with their Conservative friends.

MR. MERCIER is dismissing Conservatives right and left to fill their places with hungry Rouges or Rielites. In some cases he is making the excuse that the victims of his dishonest partisanship brought their fate upon themselves by being Dominion members or even candidates. Yet he has just dismised a Conservative from a public position to give his place to Mr. Prefontaine, a Rouge member of the House of Commons.

TO REPEAL OR NOT.

Bold Talk in the Nova Scotia Legislature—An Annexationist.

A despatch from Halifax to the Montreal Star on March 12th says:—The straight out repealers who support the Local Government are very much disgusted at the way Premier Fielding shirks that transcendent question. This disgust found expression in a most unmistakable way yesterday. The great issue on which the legislature came into existence was vaguely referred to in the Governor's speech in a three line sentence to the effect "that the relations between this province and the Ottawa Government might again claim the attention of the House."

During the debate on the address in reply to the speech, Mr. McColl, of Pictou, a free lance, supporting the Government, asked what that meant, whether it was repeal or not.

Attorney-General Longley declined to interpret the language, whereupon Mr. McColl moved an amendment in order to, as he said, elicit an expression of opinion at the first start. Premier Fielding said an amendment by his own follower would be treated as a vote of censure.

Ex-Attorney-General Weeks demanded that Mr. McColl should declare his own position, whereupon Mr. McColl startled the Legislature by declaring that he was not only a repealer but also

AN ANNEXATIONIST.

This declaration caused a commotion.

Mr. McCoy, a Government supporter from Shelburne, expressed great surprise that repeal had been ignored in the speech from the throne. He thought that the Government had exhibited exceedingly bad judgment and doubted their sincerity on that vital question.

Mr. James A. Fraser contended that nothing practical could be done till Nova Scotia had a delegation of secessionists at Ottawa. The secession issue would never die and he was sure repeal would be obtained. But while he was a secessionist he repudated the idea of being an annexationist.

Premier Fielding refused to state whether or not his government really intended to take any steps to secure repeal.

Mr. Thomas R. Black, a Government supporter from Cumberland, could not understond how a member could take the oath of allegiance one day, and declare himself an annexationist the next day. He admired Mr. McColl's sincerity and expressed his own conviction that repeal would soon lead to annexation.

Mr. Andrews, of Annapolis, hoped the Government would hold office long enough to convince the people how.

THOROUGHLY HOLLOW

and hypocritical were the catch-cries of repeal and reciprocity upon which they had obtained power.

Premier Fielding made a long speech shirking repeal, but claiming that he had compelled the Dominion Government to inaugurate the policy of building the Gape Breton Railway and consolidating the Western Railway. And in the next breath he denounced that policy as an attempt to bribe the constituencies to elect Liberal Conservative candidates.

After an exciting discussion, during which the Government managed to maintain a sphinx-like mystery upon its policy with regard to future action upon secession, Mr. McColl was induced to withdraw his amendment, and the address passed.

THE C. P. R. ALGOMA EXTENSION.

The Sault Ste. Marie Bridge—A Monster Engineering Work.

The extension line from Algoma mills to the Sault St. Marie will be about eighty-six miles in length. The line will connect directly with the Minneapolis, Sault Ste. Marie and Atlantic railways, and will open up connections with the Northern American lines which will be enabled to have a cheaper and quicker route to European ports via Montreal.

The line is being cleared of timber by Messrs. Carry & Dunn, who are pushing the work forward as rapidly as possible. Mr. R. G. Reid, the well-known contractor for the masonry of the St. Lawrence bridge and other public works, has been awarded the contract with the exceptions of sections 1 and 12 which have been given to Messrs. McKenzie & Purcell and Messrs. Corbett & Lemp. The latter section consists of heavy rock work which will entail a large amount of labor.

Mr. Reid is making great preparations to push the construction, as the track has to be graded by November 15th of this year. The country which will be opened up by the new line is well timbered and watered, and already numerous enquiries have been made with regard to settlement. The probability is that mining operations will be extensively carried on, and the prospective surveys prove the existence of many valuable ores. The tenders for the new Sault Ste. Marie bridge are now advertised for and will be received up till the 4th April. The bridge will consist of three sections —1st, the drawbridge with centre pier and two abutments, superstructure, 396 feet long; 2nd, the bridge over the main channel of river, nine piers and two abutments; ten spans of superstructure 239 feet centre to centre of piers; 3rd, the bridge north of St. Mary's Island, one pier, two abutments and two spans 104 feet each over all. The masonry is to be that known as rock faced ashlar, and the concrete used is to be made of the best Portland cement. The coping stones and cutwaters are to be chisel-dressed. The masonry is all to be completed by the 15th of November next, and the superstructure ready for the passage of trains 15 days after.—Montreal Star.

C.P.R. Connection.

The extension of the St. Paul, Minneapolis & Manitoba railroad now under way to Montana is of more than ordinary importance, as this road is allied very closely with the Canadian Pacific, and the line which is pushing to Helena and the branches which are to radiate all leading Montana points will virtually bring the Canadian Pacific to that region in competition with the Northern Pacific. It is stated the contracts have been let for building 700 miles of these proposed extensions and that the work will be pushed with extraordinary vigor, employing an enormous force of men so that the line can be in operation by next fall from St. Paul to Helena.—Railway Age.

FUR BEARING ANIMALS.

To the Editor of the Review.

DEAR SIR,—Your correspondent in the REVIEW of March 10th, signing himself "Canadian," wherein he criticises a letter as written by me on Feb. 9th, is mistaken, as no such letter was written by me. If your correspondent refers to a letter in the REVIEW addressed to Mr. J. Carnegie, dated June 29th, 1886, the latest of my letters on the above subject, then it has taken him a long time to comment on the same, and his sympathy for the Indian comes in rather late, as a petition, numerously signed by both red and white trappers and leading fur buyers, without one exception, from all whom I called on, will be brought before the Legislature for consideration.

Your correspondent almost regrets that there is a close season, as the law allows only to trap from October 15th, and the marshes freeze up early in November. The same waters open about the 20th of April, which gives them about ten days. Well, this latter time is just what will in a short time exterminate a source of wealth to the country; and what then with the Indian? for whom I feel as much sympathy, if not more, than your correspondent. My last letter, as well as a former letter years ago, addressed to a leading Toronto paper, has found in other papers favorable comment, but matters of public interest are much neglected. As your correspondent refers to the white trappers being more numerous in Ontario than the Indians as law breakers, all of them I have come in contact with have signed the petition, and the Toronto furriers without exception signed it, and acknowledged that such a petition should have passed years ago. Let me just as proof convince "Canadian" what havoc the ten days' spring hunt does: Beaver, which in 1861 I bought in raw state at 90 cents per lb., is worth now $5 per lb; the same with otter, which has doubled in price, and is this not proof of scarcity?

Thanking you, Mr. Editor, for space afforded me.

Retaliation Bill.

PHILADELPHIA, March 12.—A Washington despatch to the Times says:—"The retaliation bill is receiving careful consideration at the Department of State, preparatory to the formulation of a policy based upon the new conditions, and which, at the proper time will be submitted to the President, and doubtless be made the subject of Cabinet consideration before its enforcement. The course of the Administration, as far as it can be inferred, will be one of conservative retaliation, and will mean such methods of peace as will ensure the ultimate adjustment of all differences provocative of war, and if it should come it will be from the other side."

Enjoy Life.

What a truly beautiful world we life in! Nature gives us grandeur of mountains, glens and oceans, and thousands of means of enjoyment. We can desire no better when in perfect health, but how often do the majority of people feel like giving it up disheartened, discouraged and worn out with disease, when there is no occasion for this feeling, as every sufferer can easily obtain satisfactory proof, that Green's August Flower, will make them free from disease, as when born. Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint are the direct causes of seventy-five per cent. of such maladies as Biliousness, Indigestion, Sick Headache, Costiveness, Nervous Prostration, Dizziness of the Head, Palpitation of the Heart, and other distressing symptoms. Three doses of August Flower will prove its wonderful effect. Sample bottles, 10 cents. Try it. d90

THE QUAKER'S GOLDEN WEDDING.

The snow looks in at the window
In a bold and frolicsome way,
No lighter the now-born snow-drift
Than Ichabod's locks of gray;
Not purer the new-born snow-drift
From worldly taint and sin
Than the life of Margaret Taylor,
Ichabod's wife, hath been.

"Hither, Margaret bia thee,
I have a thought to tell;
Nay, never mind the shutters,
The night doth please me well.
Margaret, can thee tell me
How many years it is
Since thee and I were married
On a winter's night like this?

"Think once again, my good wife;
I knew thee would never guess—
The days go by so swiftly
That only are born to bless;
Thy mother's heart will tell thee
'Tis eight and forty years
Since our first-born came to thrill us
With tender hopes and fears.

"Yes, Margaret, thee hath guessed it—
Full fifty years have sped
So silently and so softly
We scarce have felt their tread;
But, watching the gliding snow-flakes,
The hickory coals, and thee,
The memory of that evening
Comes wandering back to me.

"True, Margaret, we were happy,
Trustful, and very glad,
And prouder was I, I fear me,
Than becsemeth a Quaker lad.
Yet, not for the good years vanished,
If the right of choice were given,
Would I change this place, my darling,
For the pleasure of that even.

"We have had our trials, good wife,
We have shed some bitter tears,
But a sure dear Hand hath led us
Through all these precious years.
He has kept us long together,
And I've been bold to pray
That our meeting in the new land
Be a golden wedding day."

The snow looks in at the window,
And what do the snow-flakes see
But Quaker Ichabod Taylor
With Margaret on his knee?
The hickory coals in the fire-place
Sleep in their jackets white,
But the love of tried and true hearts
Steadily burns to-night.

Advice to Mothers.

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup should always be used when children are cutting teeth. It relieves the little sufferer at once; it produces natural, quiet sleep by relieving the child from pain, and the little cherub awakes "as bright as a button." It is very pleasant to taste. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain, relieves wind, regulates the bowels, and is the best known remedy for diarrhœa, whether arising from teething or other causes. 25 cents a bottle. Be sure and ask for "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup," and take no other kind.

SHIRLEY CARSTONE.

By ELIZA ARCHARD.

[Copyrighted by the American Press Association.]

A girl who was as good as a boy for a "pard" and yet could make even boys stand back when she felt like it—here was a superior being, indeed.

How they loved her, father and mother, brothers and sisters. She idolized them too, she revealed in her affections. If whatever she undertook she could accomplish better than other children, so her child friends felt, somehow, that Shirley could love them more than other people could. Her parents knew that Shirley would have gone through fire for them. Hers was a nature of flame and steel and crystal, and yet on one side of it of pearly tenderness and gentleness, too.

An uncommon destiny was predicted for the child. Her remarkable beauty attracted attention from all. To the fine, high bred features, brilliant eyes and straight, black eyebrows, was added a complexion rose tinted and radiant. With every passing emotion the exquisite color came and went in her cheek like the changing light on the burning breast of a dove. The expression of her face was varied as the tints of the many hued sea. But the countenance told always of a soul full of truth and strength, sunny sweetness and singleness of purpose.

All this in a child of 14? Yes, Shirley was not turned out of the common mold. She was as school girls might be, not as they are. Even stolid, average humanity recognized the power and the promise there was in her. Col. Carstone was a man of wealth. His children could have whatever he and the mother thought was good for them. What promise of life could be more rare and radiant than Shirley's?

Only her father saw something that troubled him.

"But I'm afraid for Shirley. She is so easily deceived," he said. "People bear their fate within their own breasts. The child would lie down and make a bridge of herself for those she loved to walk over. She carries predestination of martyrdom within her, somehow."

"Tom, dear, you always did talk a little nonsense, you know," said his wife. "Shirley's the merriest child I ever saw."

"Fore de Lord," said old Sam, "she's got more sense nor anybody I ever seed, for a gal."

Shirley looked at her father instantly.

"Papa," she asked, "hasn't a girl as much sense as a boy?"

Papa smiled, and did not answer, at first. Then he said:

"Find out for yourself, Shirley."

The question took hold of her. It haunted her thought. She had perceptions underneath the common perceptions. Where other children saw only the substance she unknowingly looked deeper, and saw the spirit.

She read everything she could lay hands on. Her imagination took fire as she read of warriors, heroes and martyrs. The lesson of their mighty deeds sank into the deep child heart, and blossomed in the clear child soul. Her world of fancy was peopled with leaders and princes like Moses, with Cæsars and splendid crusaders like Richard the Lion Heart. Bernard Palissy, defying hunger and want, opposing those whom he held dearest, tearing the very walls from his cabin, sacrificing all to achieve one splendid result—Bernard Palissy was to her the deification of human will. Through the years of approaching womanhood she walked as in a dream—

> Nourishing a youth sublime
> With the fairy tales of science and the long results of Time.

Most, though, her heart went out to the few women heroes and teachers whose names she met on the page of the world's history—Hypatia, Elizabeth, Zenobia. Her soul was on fire as her eyes bent over the page that told her about Joan of Arc, the inspired maid of Domremy. She, the woman soldier with the iron helmet resting upon her golden hair, with her shining armor and white war horse, was the highest and greatest figure of all to the child Shirley.

Later she read Homer, Milton and Shakespeare, and their stately music rang a rhythm to the beating of her heart. Still, too, and ever through the years of girlhood would come the old question she asked her father that day:

Has a girl as much sense as a boy?

Why was there no woman Homer, no woman Shakespeare or Milton? Then Homer, and Joan of Arc, and Shakespeare, and Richard the Lion Heart mingled together in her dreams, till out of all there stood before her at last a vision of a woman poet who should be. She should be as great as the greatest, a majestic woman, poet, hero and teacher in one. But not a martyr. There were no martyrs in these days. The world had grown too wise and kindly for that.

So she reasoned. At last she awakened once in the summer night suddenly. She saw the stars shining in at the window and heard the wind sighing through the willows down by the mill race. She whispered to herself and said:

"I will be the woman poet. I, myself."

Then the new schoolmaster came.

CHAPTER III.

THE TEACHER.

The lively young man who had taught the Linwood school three winters had accumulated savings enough from this honest industry to begin the study of law. Accordingly, the school was left without a teacher. One day a stranger brought a letter to the Presbyterian minister, applying for the vacant place. After some delay it was given him. He was of slender, though athletic build, with dark hair and dark gray eyes. His face was a fine, strong one, full of will and intelligence; but it was not a peaceful face nor a face at rest.

In the center of the shabby village was the grocery—common club room for the male gossips of the neighborhood. Travelers knew it was the grocery by token that it had a box of blacking and two clothes pins in the window. The stranger teacher had a little room over this shop. He was quite solitary at first. Of evenings he staid alone in this room and played a violin, sometimes far into the night. Of afternoons, after school, he took long walks over the country roads and paths. Rain or shine, it was his habit. Indeed, he rather seemed to enjoy a walk in the rain, against the wind, with the storm beating in his face. He appeared more calm and happy after a five mile tramp in rough weather. At such times the people in the house heard him often singing to himself, in a singularly deep, sweet voice, songs in an unknown tongue. The impression of the stranger's dread and mysterious learning had so deepened in a few months, that the simple country people declared he sang in Hebrew. But a farmer from over seas told them the words were German. It was the folk song of Germany the new teacher sang. Thereupon the grocer, with the air of one announcing a great truth, said:

"He's a Dutchman!"

Once, after a fierce walk, George Morrison, quite exhausted, threw himself full length upon the carpet in his little room, with a pillow under his head. He thought at first to doze, but the stovepipe hole in the floor was a telelephone, bringing unerringly to his sensitive ear every word spoken in the rustic shop below. He knew just how the male gossips were grouped. There was the 'Squire, who sat on a barrel head. There were the shoemaker and the postmaster. There was the lazy grocer himself, who sat upon an upturned empty soap box most of the time and let his wiry little wife wait upon the customers.

At length Jim Sweet said:

"That there new schoolmaster ain't much account, I reckon. He's too darned grammatical."

"I heerd hfm whip out the Presbyterian preacher in argument t'other day," said the postmaster.

Now Simpkins, the grocer, struck in. He had listened to all the rest first. He had a solemn way of stating a stupid old fact as if it had been a great new truth. He was, therefore, esteemed a man of very profound judgment by everybody but his own wife. She saw through her husband's humbug, as wives, alas! too often do. Simpkins said, solemnly:

"It's my opinion a man that can outargify the Presbyterian minister ain't a safe person to be trusted with the edication of our little ones. It's my opinion, further, that the schoolmaster's got somethin' on his mind. Them close he wears ain't Linwool cut. It's my opinion he's come from somewhere, and come down in the world. It's my opinion"——

"Your opinion, Sim Simpkins!" exclaimed his wiry little partner, contemptuously. "If the schoolmaster's got something on his mind, it'd better be that than not to have any mind at all. They say he's come down in the world, do they? What of it? I've heerd say it was better to be dead lion than a live jackass. Ain't the Carstone children going to school to him, every one of 'em? A man's good enough to teach my children, if he's good enough to teach them. They're a manneredly family, from the oldest to the youngest, that they are!"

But the new master won the hearts of the children right speedily. There were an exquisite patience and kindliness in his ways toward them, as though something had schooled him through years to think of others rather than himself, and those others weak and childish. He had said he was 24 years old, but he looked years older. It was easy to see he had been born in a different sphere from the people he had come among. Even Jim Sweet recognized the fine, high bred ways that separated him from Linwood folk.

But it was true that he had something on his mind. He was unhappy and wretchedly discontented. He had sought Linwood to be out of the world, and, having his wish, he found, as many do, that his wish was just what he did not want. The coarseness, the stolid self conceit, the prying curiosity, the illiteracy of the Linwood people chafed his soul till he was like a tiger behind bars. Oh, what would bring forgetfulness?

He had been in his new employ only two months, yet he had grown weary and reckless. In a week more he would resign his place, he said to himself. In this mood he went to his task one morning. Entering the school house his eye rested on a group of handsome, tastefully dressed children. Next moment he saw that one, a girl, was older and taller than the rest, and his wandering eye was instantly arrested by her remarkable beauty. The group were new pupils. They were the Carstone children, Shirley among them. She lifted her eyes, and a flash of recognition passed between the two souls, the child and the master!

It was a day of beginning in the lives of both.

This story has been very quiet thus far. Storm enough come later.

From that day there was more of peace in the life of George Morrison. This girl pupil understood his plans with an instant, sweet recognition that surprised him. Gradually a better, more refining influence spread over the rude school.

"Papa," said Shirley, "this new teacher has opened a new world for us. Ask him to come to our house."

So it came about that the lonely schoolmaster became intimate in the Carstone mansion. The minds of the bright, pretty children unfolded like a flower under his sunlike teaching. Two happy years they were under his instructions. Yet at first he almost broke Shirley's heart by his criticism. The thought of one great poem she was to write had by this time taken possession of her. The master read the clear soul as if it had been the depths of a crystal lake.

COBOURG.

WARNING.—On Thursday morning Mrs. Jno. Bray, front road, went out to the barnyard, leaving her two young children in the house. Soon she heard some screams in that direction, and running quickly towards it, she found her two year old boy enveloped in flames. It seems he had been putting some paper and small pieces of wood in the fire to see the blaze, and, getting too near, his clothes accidentally caught fire, and were mostly all burned off before his mother had arrived. Medical assistance was at once sent for when he was found to be badly burned around the neck and body. We believe the little fellow is recovering nicely.—Sentinel-Star.

THE CITY AND SUBURBS

Personal.

The Rev. W. J. West, of Bailyduff, preached in the George Street Methodist Church on Sunday morning and in the Charlotte Street Church in the evening.

The Bible in the School.

The Rev. Alex. Bell of St. Andrew's Church has announced his attention of dealing with the subjects of the Bible in the schools next Sunday evening.

Frosty Below.

A well 104 feet deep, which was dug on the farm of Mr. Seeny, township of Cavan, was found on Friday to be frozen at the bottom. The ice was broken by lowering a piece of iron attached to a rope.

A New Barracks.

At Sunday's Salvation Army meeting Capt. Williams announced that the army had almost closen negotiations for the purchase of a lot whereon to build a suitable barracks. In a short time they would commence the erection of a "good, large, solid plain building."

The Princess.

To-night at 8 o'clock, in the Y. M. C. A. rooms, Mr. Earle, of the Collegiate Institute, will give a talk on Tennyson's beautiful poem, "The Princess." All ladies and gentlemen are invited to attend. At the close a class will be formed to take up the study of some of the masterpieces of English literature.

West Peterborough.

The Toronto special correspondent of the Belleville Intelligencer says:—"There is one member on the Opposition side that I miss; I mean Carnegie, of Peterborough. His successor is in no way his equal. Carnegie was not only a hard worker, but well posted and always on the alert; aggressive and not liked by the Government side."

Cemetery Co.

A meeting of the Directors of the Cemetery Company was held on Friday for the purpose of the election of officers. Mr. J. J. Lundy, the President, declined re-election. The following officers were elected:—

PRESIDENT—James Stevenson M. P.
SECRETARY—Jas. Edwards.
CARETAKER—John Kelly.

All the Spring shades in Satin Merveilleux are now on sale at Turnbull's. If you want new goods see them.

"At Home."

An At Home under the auspices of the George Street Methodist Church Sunday School will be given in their rooms on the evening of Thursday, 17th of March. Hamilton will furnish a contingent of superior talent and our own local celebrities will be well represented. Abundant refreshments. Admission 25 cents.

Good Music.

The St. John's Church choir, under the able leadership of Mr. Seward, is showing signs of steady progress. On Sunday evening the musical portion of the service was very good, the solo by Mrs. Seward, and afterwards the duett between Miss Rush and Mrs. Seward, being especially well rendered. There will be two practises each week in future, and doubtless the choir will keep on improving.

A Young Men's Prohibition Club.

On Tuesday evening there will be a meeting held over China Hall for the purpose of organizing a young men's prohibition club in Peterborough. This club will be started and worked on the same principle as that in Toronto and other places. The meeting will be opened at 8 o'clock. All friends of temperance are cordially invited to be present. Already some 40 or 50 young men have signified their intention of joining.

Complimentary Supper.

The Fenelon Falls Gazette says:—"On Wednesday night Mr. Jos. A. Pritchard, who has since left Fenelon Falls for Peterborough, was entertained at a complimentary farewell supper in the dining room at Brook's hotel. At 9 o'clock about fifty persons sat down to the tables, and after the abundent and excellent eatables had been disposed of, Mr. J. J. Brandon was elected chairman and Dr. A. Wilson vice-chairman, and the "feast of reason and flow of soul" commenced, and were kept up for more than two hours, as it was nearly midnight when Auld Lang Syne and God Save the Queen were sung, and the jovial party broke up. Mr. Pritchard, who for the past two years has managed Fairweather & Co's store in this village, well deserved the parting honour of which he was the recipient, as he has made hosts of warm friends, all of whom sincerely regret his departure and wish him a long, prosperous, and happy career."

Turnbull is now showing an immense stock of Carpets and Floor Oilcloths, all new patterns. Intending purchasers should not fail to see them.

SINGING AND TALKING

THE SALVATION ARMY QUINTETTE —THEIR SONGS AND SAYINGS.

Big Meeting in the Opera House on Sunday—A Welshman's Enthusiasm. Prof. Wiggins' Experience.

The Salvation Army had a glorious time on Saturday night and Sunday. The Salvation minstrel troupe visited town and held meetings on Saturday night, Sunday afternoon and Sunday evening. The Saturday night meeting was held in the barracks and the other two in the Opera House. All were largely attended. In the afternoon the Opera House was packed to the doors. The minstrels and local Salvationists were on the platform to the number of about a hundred.

Staff Capt. Griffiths, a Welshman, conducted the meeting, opening it with singing, accompanied by cornet, piano, first and second violin, violincello and base viol.

Then Capt. Griffiths prayed. A song was given out and sung, and Capt. Ashton prayed. Capt. Prof. Wiggins was called on to sing. He took song 21 of the special song book distributed through the audience. The chorus ran:

Marching on! Marching on!
We are marching to that happy, happy land!
Marching on! Marching on!
We are marching to that happy, happy land!

At the conclusion of each verse the soldiers joined with all their lung power in the chorus, but Capt. Griffiths, the little Welshman, was not satisfied. Arrayed in a flowing sash of Army colors, and with the violin in one hand and the bow in the other he marched across the stage and called out, "Altogether now!"

Marching on! Marching on!
We are marching to that happy, happy land!

which the soldiers sang with renewed energy.

Then the little Welshman turned around and shouted "Fire a volley," and a tremendous "Amen" answered him. Then he resumed his march up and down the stage keeping time with alternate up and down motion of the violin and the bow, and sang out in a loud, clear tenor:—

Marching on! marching on!
We are marching to that happy, happy land.

After his enthusiasm had abated a little he read from St. Luke and expatiated on Christ's preaching and Christ's congregations. The latter were composed of different classes just as the congregations were here to-day.

Capt. Williams, the resident Captain, sang a solo, which was followed by testimony by several of the soldiers. Among the latter was a girl who stated that she had joined the army and had received blessing, but falling away she lost that grace. But she was with the army again and this time was determined to stick to it.

Capt. Griffith sang the following song:—

TUNE—"King of the Cannibal Islands."

When first the Army came along—
Oh, it was glory was their song,
Some said 'twas right and some 'twas wrong,
But along went the Salvation Army;
Some said they'd drive the people off,
And at them they did laugh and scoff,
And said the folks they all were soft
That joined the Salvation Army.

CHORUS.

No matter what the people say—
We mean to march and sing and play,
And fight for Jesus night and day—
And die in the Salvation Army.

The hotel-keepers at us did laugh,
And did our converts jeer and chaff,
And said, now Bill, you are a daft,
To go with that ragmuffin Army.

But Bill and Tom and Dick stuck fast,
And saloon and bars they daily past,
So the saloon-keepers saw they were gone at last,
And tried to upset the Army.

But all their schemes have gone to ground,
And hundreds have the Saviour found
And now are telling all around—
What God's done for them through the Army.
Then let Pharasses turn up the white of their eyes,
And devils and hypocrites all despise,
We mean to press forward for the prize,
Laid up for the Salvation Army.

We've glory Tom, and drunken Bill,
And Tommy who robbed his father's till,
And Sammy, who took the razor to kill
His wife, now saved in the Army,
And drunkards, and blackguards, and many a swell,
And hundreds of drop drinking sinners as well,
Who were serving the devil and going to hell,
Are now fighting for God in the Army.

We've tony Sal, and happy Sue,
And another lady that you knew,
Saying, what's been done for me can be done for you,
At the mercy seat in the Army.
We've smoking Joe and Benjamin dude,
Who oft at the Army has poo-hoohed,
And ran to church to get some food,
Is getting fat in his soul in the Army.

Some said 'tis but a flash in the pan—
In less than a year they'll be gone every man;
But we're nicely saved in God's own plan—
Made plain in the Salvation Army.
Then we'll heed not the scorn of the haughty and proud,
But will beat our drums both long and loud
And wave the flag, and march a crowd
To Heaven with the Salvation Army.

Capt. Wiggins then related the story of his life. At twelve he was a natural musician, played the piano in a concert given by Jenny Lind, Sims Reeves and others. He joined the British army and came to Canada in 1861. At Fredrickton he was a chorister in a church and was drunk nearly all the time. He said to himself "I'll do better," but he couldn't do better. One Sunday he was to sing a solo. He had been on the spree all day Saturday and hadn't had anything to quiet his nerves in the morning. While he stood up before the large congregation with the book in his hand he saw a shape somethting like a dog come in at the door, go along the wall and approach him. He couldn't keep his eyes off it. It gradually neared him and rose to his mouth. He sprang up to get away from it, while all the congregation stood in amazement. A friend of his took him away and said, "Whiskey'll kill you." He knew it would but he couldn't help it. He resolved to go back to England. There in four years, though he drank, and drank, and drank, he succeeded in gaining the honor of Bachelor of Music. To get away from the drinking habit in England he determined to come back to Canada. This he did, landing in the town of Whitby, with but a penny in his pocket. He commenced to work in a machine shop, but a finger getting hurt he commenced the practice of his profession. He made thousands of dollars, but never had anything. It all went in riotous living. He went to Toronto, and among other episodes he played for a temperance organization, was drunk every night while he was playing, and they didn't know it. He continued telling other incidents till he got into the Salvation Army, and since that time he was freed from the curse of his life.

Capt. Griffiths sang a Welsh song as follows:—

Mae hen afon angeu yn dywyll-ac oer,
Ond Iesu wnaeth ffordd drwyddi hi,
Yn ol ei addewid fy nhroed byth ni throir,
Yn droedsych caf groesi y lli.

CYDGAN.

Er rhuo'r Iorddonen a'i thon,
Yr Iesu am dwg drwy y lli;
Mae'i heddwch yn llanw fy mron,
Oh! na rodder yr heddwch i chwi.

The meeting closed in the usual manner

The Recount.

The argument on the late recount was to have taken place this afternoon, but on account of Mr. Dumble's absence has been postponed.

Social.

A very enjoyable social was held at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Ferguson on Friday evening. The residence was well filled with people, who listened to an interesting musical and literary entertainment. The proceeds go to the treasury of the Ladies' Aid Society.

A Prominent Man.

Mr. James Stevenson is a promiflent man in Peterborough, and to judge from the number of public offices given to him by the people he is capable and trustworthy. For over 15 years he has been Chairman of the Board of Education and for 17 years he has been Chairman of the Town Trust Commission. He is President of the Gas Company, Mayor of the Town, Representative of West Peterborough in the Dominion Parliament, and President of the Little Lake Cemetery Company.

Apologise

At Friday's Council meeting Councillor McNaughton got up and said that in the Goodfellow burglary case last fall the REVIEW gave credit to Chief Cooper for the capture when the credit belonged to P. C. Pidgeon. He also stated that Chief Cooper came to the REVIEW reporter and prevailed on the latter to give him a "puff" as Councillor McNaughton put it. Mr. McNaughton should not make such statements. In the case he mentions, the REVIEW, with its usual fairness, gave the credit where it was due. It gave no credit to either Chief Cooper or P. C. Pidgeon for tracing up the burglars, for that credit belonged to Mr. Goodfellow himself. Credit was given to P. C. Pidgeon for making the arrest. Councillor McNaughton should apogise.

A PRISON MUTINY.

Shooting Down the Prisoners—The Governor Congratulated on the Massacre.

LONDON, March 13.—A terrible prison mutiny has occurred at Revel, in the Russian Province of Esthonia, on the Gulf of Finland. The revolt included three hundred prisoners, who rebelled against the prison authorities because the Governor provided them with bad food. The Governor, in fear of his life, took refuge in the guardhouse, which was defended by fourteen soldiers. The mutineers offered to surrender on condition that the governor should be dismissed from his post The governor would make no conditions, and at his order the soldiers fired repeatedly on the unprotected prisoners and kept up the massacre until the mutinous mob was levelled to the ground. Fifty were killed and a number wounded. This crushed the rebellion, and the governor of the province has congratulated the governor of the prison on maintaining order at any cost.

Our Timber Resources.

The request recently made by Mr. Meredith of the Commissioner of Crown Lands that the Government would prepare a map showing, in colors, the timber limits now under license and the area remaining undisposed of, was a reasonable one. The information would be extremely useful as a guide to legislators, lumbermen, and all others interested in knowing the condition and extent of our available timber resources. The Government ought to have the facts at hand or readily accessible, and the public have the right to the information We cannot but think that Mr. Pardee's estimate of the cost of preparing such a map at $10,000 is a considerable over-statement, but even if it were approximately correct it might be worth the money to give the law makers and the public a correct idea of how much of the resources on which the Province depends for future revenue is still intact.

Our forest wealth should be husbanded with the greatest care. As has often been said, in using the revenue derived from timber sales to pay the current expenses of government, we are really living on our capital. When the forests are exhausted we shall be forced to resort to direct taxation. It is time that the whole question of provincial finances was reconsidered, with the object of ascertaining how long we can depend upon the crown lands as our main source of revenue, and whether some steps cannot be taken to capitalize at least a portion of our receipts from this source, so as to secure a permanent income when the timber is exhausted.—Toronto News (Indep.)

THE LIBERAL RE-UNION.

A Fusion Considered Impossible—Mr. Chamberlain's Speech.

LONDON, March 13.—The agitation in favour of the reunion of the Liberal party is still being kept up; but the general impression prealls that a fusion at present is impossible.

Mr. Joseph Chamberlain, speaking at a meeting at the National Radical Union at Birmingham last evening, deplored the delay in the reunion of the Liberals, and said that the longer the rupture continued the more serious the situation became, and that if they did not agree quickly they would drift further apart. So far as he was concerned, he could not see the way to take any further steps toward a reunion. The Liberal-Unionists must now carry out plans to render their organization as effective as possible.

Mr. Chamberlain said Mr. Gladstone was alone able to re-unite the party. He knew the Unionists objections, and whether or not it was possible even now to meet them. The objections were directed not against the principles of the party but against the methods of carrying them out. An appeal to the country may come quickly, he said, unless the Government is prepared, in addition to enforcing the law in Ireland, to introduce a measure which, instead of tinkering with the Land Act of 1881, will endeavor to finally end the conflict betweep landlord and tenant, making the tenant the practical owner of the soil. The Unionists will loyally support such a measure introduced with a concurrent measure to suppress crime.

LINDSAY.

FIRE.—On Wednesday night about 12 o'clock a fire broke out on the floor of the tailor shop which is on the upper flat, over Mr. Kennedy's store. The fire which started from the stove, didn't amount to much but torrents of water poured through the ceiling into one of Mr. Gross' rooms and from there to the store of M. W. Kennedy & Co, beneath. The goods were damaged a little with the water but most of the damage was from being tossed to the back part of the store to be out of the way of the water and there piled indiscriminately. The brisk business is, notwithstanding, proceeding without interruption. Mr. Gross' loss will be to carpet and other furnature in the waiting room. The loss to the firm of M. W. Kennedy & Co, will be slight; covered by insurance. Mr. John Kennedy's loss on the building will amount to $800, and is covered by insurance.—Warder.

THE VETO POWER.

In an editorial on the opening of the New Brunswick Legislature the Monetary Times discusses the proposal to do away with the second chamber of that Province. With reference to this question it has some remarks about the veto power, and among other things it says:—

"When the present constitution of the United States was framed, the question of giving a veto on State legislation to the Federal executive was decided in the negative and decided forever."

In so speaking, however, our contemporary leaves out of view one very important and essential consideration. Besides the veto power of the Governor of the State, which, as is hinted, is more readily accepted because he is an elective officer, there is another very material restriction of the powers of the State Legislature. The written constitution of the United States not only limits, as with us, the local jurisdiction, but it also provides that legislation in certain directions shall be of no effect. Not only a State Legislature, but even Congress itself, is prohibited from legislating so as to invade certain rights, and any attempt may be pronounced unconstitutional and therefore of no effect by the Supreme Court. For instance if we had the same constitutional limit in Canada as they have in the United States, the Supreme Court would have pronounced Mr. Mowat's Rivers and Streams Bill invalid on the two grounds that it was interfering with the courts of law, and that it was expropriating property without adequate compensation, both of which are prohibited by the United States constitution. Undoubtedly the Supreme Court would also have declared invalid Mr. Mowat's iniquitous legislation to seat his law breaking friend, Dr. Dowling, in spite of the adverse decision of the judges.

The veto power is far more stringent in the United States than in Canada, though it is applied in a different manner.

NEW MEN-OF-WAR.

Two Powerful British Battle Ships Launched Last Week.

LONDON, March 14.—A new belted cruiser, the Galetea, was launched Thursday from the Napier yare at Govan, on the Clyde, just below Glasgow. Lord Charles Beresford was on board. The Galatea is 300 feet long between perpendiculars, 56 feet extreme beam and 37 feet deep. Her draught of water is 19 feet and her displacement will be 5,000 tons when in fighting condition, with everything on board. The admiralty expect a speed of eighteen knots an hour. The engines are of the triple expansion type, working twin screws. They indicate 8,500 horse power at a working pressure of 130 pounds. The boilers are of the double ended multitubiar type, with corrugated flues. Her armament is composed of two long range nine and one quarter inch Armstrong guns, ten six inch guns of the same class, eight six pounders, eight three pounder quick firing guns and six torpedo impulse tubes. The engines and steering gear under the water line are protected by two inch thick steel decks extending the whole length of the ship. The water line of the ship is protected by an armored belt 10 inches thick, and steel faced and strongly supported by a teak and steel backing and capable of resisting shot or shell from ten inch guns.

There was also launched at the Davenport dockyard the torpedo cruiser Serpent. She is entirely of steel, all exposed fittings being galvanized. Her lines are particularly graceful. Her length is 225 feet, her beam 36 feet and her displacement 1,600 tons. She will have six six inch breechloading central pivot guns on Vavasseur carriages; eight three pounder quick firing guns, two Nordenfeldt and one seven pounder. She will be fitted, in addition, with five Whitehead torpedo tubes, each 14 inches in diameter; one directly in the bow, with one on each side and one on each quarter.

An increase in the number of Dominion cruisers employed to protect the fisheries this season is considered probable.

A RAILWAY ACCIDENT.

A BRIDGE GIVES WAY AND HURLS CARS INTO A GULLY.

Five Cars go Down Fifty Feet—Smashed into Kindling Wood—Thirty-three Killed and Forty Injured.

BOSTON, Mass., March 14.—The seven o'clock train from West Dedham, on the Providence Road, is a wreck between Roslinda and Forest Hills. The train, which consisted of seven passenger coaches and a smoker, loaded with passengers, was all right when it left Roslinda and reached the Iron Bridge at South street. The engine and three cars passed safely over the bridge, and the fourth was right over the gully when the great iron span snapped, the bridge sank and four passenger cars were hurled down the embankment, while the fifth jumped from the track and rolled over. The cars were packed with working people going to their daily labor, and as they felt the cars sinking under them a shout of fear went up, and the next instant it was changed to agonized shrieks of SUFFERING AND TERROR.

The first estimate that could be made was that about twenty had been killed and a score wounded. When the engineer, Wallace White, realized that half of his train had met with an awful disaster, he put his engine at full speed and tore down to the Jamaca Plain station, where he pulled in a fire alarm, and the apparatus started at breck-neck speed for the scene of the disaster. Most fortunately but yet marvelously, the wreck did not burst into flames, as was feared, and the great suffering, which otherwise would have been inevitable, was thus avoided. Three of the cars which went down the embankment were smashed to kindling wood, while the fourth was a mass of ruins. The news of the disaster spread like wildfire, and within a few minutes hundreds had flocked to the scene. When the cars took their fearful pludge of fifty feet, Conductor Alden was in the forward car, and so escaped uninjured, and instantly went to work to look after those who were suffering. The scores who were at the spot within a few minutes worked like beavers to extricate from the heap of ruins the dead and injured.

KILLED AND INJURED.

Latest from the railway accident states that thirty four persons were killed, mostly women, and forty injured.

Many must have been killed instantly, for within a little while after the train went down, a dozen of bodies had been removed, and more were lying side by side on the snow-covered pasture. But the dead did not begin to compare with the wounded, who were placed in the conveyances which had arrived and were hurried away to their homes and the city hospitals. One of the most appalling sights was that of a young school girl, whose head was completely severed from the body, which rendered identification impossible. Nineteen bodies have so far been removed.

BODIES IDENTIFIED.

Those identified are as follows:—
Ed. Morris, of Linden street, Dedham.
Conductor Drake, of the Dedham branch of the Providence Road.
Conductor Tilden, of the Dedham branch of the Providence Road.
Lizzie Walton, of Dedham.
Tizzie Manderville, of Dedham.
Sergeant Waldo, Sailor, of station 13, who leaves a widow and two children.
Edward Snow, of Centre street, West Roxbury.
Clapp, of West Roxbury.
Alice Burnett, of Roslindale.
W. Fox, of Dedham.
Wm. Strong, of 772 Broadway, South Boston.
Miss Price, of Brookline.
Mrs. Cardinal, of Dedham.
Mary Murphy, of Dedham.
Nellie Labraham, of Dedham.

THE INJURED.

The number of injured will be at least forty. Those whose names have been obtained at this time are:
Burdette, of Brown, Durrell & Co., of Boston, badly injured internally.
Frank Nichols, of County street, Dedham.
Frank Hewins, of West Roxbury.
Mr. Drayton, sr., of Dedham.
J. H. Campbell and F. H. Booth, both of West Roxbury.
W. C. McAlister, of Guild Hall, Dedham.
H. H. Billings, of Commarris street, Dedham, back, knees and head injured.
Benj. F. Favor, of Dedham, rib and arm broken.
John Tripp, brakeman.
Nellie Palmer, of West Roxbury.
Frank Plummer, of West Roxbury.
Mrs. Emma F. Ames, of West Roxbury.
Mr. Snow, of West Roxbury.
George Ford, of West Roxbury.
Winfield W. Smith, thigh fractured.
Alice Shaw, calf wound.
James Noon, scalp wound.
Geo. S. Lowell, arm cut off.

UNIDENTIFIED BODIES.

In addition to the killed that have been identified, the bodies of four unknown men and two unknown women have been received at the morgue. At the City Hospital, barring the fearful suffering and horror which the flames added to the White River disaster one short month ago, it is a repetition of that terrible tragedy. The New York Shore Line express had passed safely over the bridge only half an hour before the fated train shot fifty feet through the air and carried many of its human freight to sudden and awful deaths. At 12 o'clock the lifeless bodies of twenty-three victims had been taken from the wreck.

SCENE OF THE ACCIDENT.

The accident occurred on the Dedham branch of the Boston and Providence railroad, at what is known as Bussey Park bridge. The train was under charge of conductor Tilden. The engine and three cars went over the bridge safely, but five others fell through to the road beneath, a distance of thirty feet. The last car, which was the smoker, turned completely over, and struck on the top of the others, all being crushed almost out of shape. It is stated that the bridge was a comparatively new one, and that the accident was caused by the truck on one of the cars giving way, causing the car to strike against the abutment of the bridge. The smoking car caught fire, but the fire department prevented any spread of the flames.

A revolt recently occurred in a Russian prison, and in quelling the outbreak the governor shot down fifty prisoners.

LATEST WIRE FLASHES

MOONLIGHTERS AT WORK.

DUBLIN, March 14.—Moonlighters have wrecked the houses of ten tenants on General Stewart's estate in West Clare. The tenants had refused to adopt the Plan of Campaign. A number of bailiffs and police who were trying to serve summonses in Hubertstown to day, in the case of the prisoner Mooney, were attacked with stones and driven out of town.

PREPARED FOR A PANIC.

BERNE, March 14.—The Swiss federa council has asked the banks in the republic to keep on hand specie to as high an amount as possible above the legal minimum, for the purpose of being in a constant state of preparation against a possible financial panic. The request has caused uneasiness and revived fears based on the European political situation which the Swiss financers say continues in a "touchy condition."

RUSSIA MENACES AUSTRIA.

LONDON, March 14.—The authorities estimate that the Russian forces now accumulated on the northern frontier of the Austro-Hungarian empire amount to 365,000 men. The movements of the troops from the interior have ceased, but concentrations of forces continue to be made in the provinces of Minek and Clef, which will enable the Russians to throw a total effective of 700,000 men on the Austrian and Roumanian frontiers within two weeks from the first notice of impending hostilities. In the face of these facts the arrangements for the complete armament and readiness of the Australian Landsturm have been further accelerated.

THE CZAR'S PERIL.

LONDON, March 14.—In the Commons this afternoon Sir James Ferguson, parliamentary secretary to the Foreign Office, stated that the Government had been informed that some persons with explosives in their possession had been arrested in St. Petersburg yesterday on the route which the Czar was to have taken to attend the service in commemoration of the late Czar, it being the anniversary of his death. Sir James said he was glad to be able to announce that no attack was made on the Czar.

VIOLENT SPEECHES.

PARIS, March 14.—The Russian and Polish Anarchists, of Paris, yesterday held a so-called "execution of the Czar." Violent speeches were made.

THE IRISH QUESTION.

A Scheme Said to be Prepared that will Lead to a Settlement.

A special from London Eng., to the Mail on March 14th says:—An admirable scheme for the settlement of the Irish question, without abolishing Imperial control, has been submitted to the Goveernment by three politicians of note. The proposal is favourably considered and will be referred to the Queen, who is bringing about a pour parler. It is expected the Government will accept the scheme, which, though comprehensive, reserves the sovereignty of the kingdom as at present. It is expected that it will receive the support of all parties, except the ultra Gladstonians. The general feeling in the lobby is that the jubilee year must settle the vexed question. At a meeting of the Uister Conservatives today it was stated that they do not want coercion but would be content with a rigid enforcement of the present law.

Food for Consumptives.

Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil, with Hypophosphites, is a most marvellous food and medicine. It heals the irritation of the throat and lungs, and gives flesh and strength quicker than any other remedy known. It is very palatable, having none of the disagreeable taste of the crude oil. Put up in 50c. and $1 size.

LATEST CABLE NEWS

DEATH OF A NOTED PRIEST.

ROME, March 14.—Abbe Carlo Passaglia is dead. He was 73 years old. In 1861 he published a remarkable pamphlet in which he counselled the Pope to abandon his temporal state and power in obedience to the voice of united Italy.

SHOCK IN MARSEILLES.

PARIS, March 13.—A sharp shock of earthquake was felt throughout Marseilles on Friday. For a time there was a general panic, and hotels and the Bourse were emptied of their occupants in a very few seconse. The people were, however, soon reassured. It is found that many walls of buildings in various parts of the city were cracked by the quake.

RESULT OF RECENT SHOCKS.

LONDON, March 13.—The earthquake in the Riviera on Friday was most severe. At Alassia the commander pronounced the town unsafe and ordered eight extra barracks to be erected for the inhabitant. At another village fifteen houses were demolished and two persons killed. Temporary barracks are being erected at Mentone. The authorities there advise people not to sleep for the present in the upper storey of their houses.

STANDS BY THE PARNELLITES.

LONDON, March 14.—Mr. Gladstone, replying to the request of a number of his adherents for information as to the concessions offered to the Unionists, declined to enter into details, but says the Liberals may rely upon his firm adherence to the principle and basis of his Home Rule policy. The Radical Unionists attribute the failure of the conference negotiations to Mr. Gladstone's decision to abide by Mr. Parnell's demands. There are facts which many believe tend to show that Sir William Vernon Harcourt misled Mr. Chamberlain and Sir George O. Trevelyan, causing them to believe that Mr. Gladstone accepted Mr. Chamberlain's proposals. It is thought that Gladstone was on the verge of assenting, when he was warned that such a step would result in a Parnellite revolt.

RUSSIAN LUNATICS.

LONDON, March 14.—Dr. Kovaleuski, a very wise Russian doctor, tells frightful stories of the number of lunatics in his country. There is room for 10,000 in the asylums, and there they are brutally treated. About 90,000 roam about at large without any care. They are to be met on all the country roads, and they avenge illusage by maiming little children.

MISHAPS AT SEA.

LONDON, March 14.—The steamer Celtic reports that during her passage a huge sea burst into the smoking room and failed a passenger; another sea wrecked the bridge and the second officer was considerably injured.

A WEIGHT OF NAMES.

BERLIN, March 14.—The Emperor and Empress were present at Potsdam on Saturday at the baptism of the Crown Prince's fourth son who was named "Augustus William Henry Gunther Victor."

HONOUR FOR BOULANGER.

PARIS, March 14.—The presentation of a sword of honour to Gen. Baulanger by his admirers in Russia has stimulated his friends in France, and there is talk about making him the recipient of a popular demonstration.

DUBLIN AND THE JUBILEE.

DUBLIN, March 14.—The corporation of this city, by a vote of 23 to 3, to-day rejected a proposal to send a congratulatory address to the Queen on the occasion of her Jubilee. The announcement of the vote was greeted with cheers, which the introducer of the motion asked the Lord Mayor to suppress. The Lord Mayor replied that the demonstration was directed not against the Queen, but against her erratic advisers. She might soon have different advisers, and an address would then be more appropriate.

FATHER KELLER SUMMONED.

CORK, March 14.—An amended summons has been served on Father Keller at Youghal to appear before the Bankruptcy Court and answer interrogatories respecting his suspected connection with the "plan of campaign." It is alleged that Father Keller is acting as trustee for the Ponsonby estate tenants.

EMIN BEY.

ZANZIBAR, March 14.—News has been received from Emin Bey to the effect that in November last he went to Uganda, and that King Mevanga refused to permit him to go through the country. Then Emin Bey tried to effect a passage out through Karagwa, on the western shore of Lake Victoria Nyanza. In this he failed also. He then returned to Wadelai, leaving a detachment of soldiers at Unyaro, under the command of Casati, his sole European companion.

A SERIOUS PLOT.

ST. PETERSBURG, March 14.—It has transpired that the plot against the Czar was widespread and serious, and that numerous arrests have been made in connection therewith.

DISPLEASED.

LONDON, March 14.—The Standard (Tory) manifests annoyance at what it calls Joseph Chamberlain's endeavor to keep the Liberal Unionists in organization by themselves and distinct as a party from the Conservatives. The Standard says that this is but making a new system of political groups instead of a new system of parties, and adds: "If the Liberal Unionists will not support the Conservatives, the Conservatives must be excused for retaliating by refusing to support the Liberal-Unionists."

RELEASED ON BAIL.

SOFIA, March 14.—M. Karaveloff, M. Tzanow and M. Nikiforoff, who were arrested for complicity in the recent revolt, have been released on bail.

INSURRECTIONARY BANDS.

SOFIA, March 14.—Telegrams report serious uneasiness at the insurrectionary bands that have suddenly made their appearance in various parts of the country. These bands are being swelled hourly in number by accessions from the revolutionary element, and are asserted to be led by Russian officers. It is admitted by the official organs that the movement against the regents is making headway, notwithstanding the collapse of the military revolt. The Powers are attempting to arrive at a modus vivendi in readiness for the meeting of the Sobranje, but Russia's terms are declared by England and Austria to be inadmissible.

DUTIES OF A MINISTRY.

The ground taken by Mr. Mowat and Mr. Fraser, in refusing to assent to the resolution of Mr. Lees, calling upon the Government to take into consideration the subject of toll gates, with a view to legislating for their abolition, certainly invites comment. They took the position that the Government should not be asked to introduce legislation to remedy this grievance. They did not suggest that existing statutes were sufficient, so that it was not advisable to legislate further; indeed, they assumed that there was room for the intervention of the House, and taunted Mr. Lees and Mr. Meredith with not introducing a measure instead of calling upon the Government to do so.

This is virtually abdicating their position as an Administration. If it were a question of a road with toll gates in one county, the Ministers might well invite the local member to act in the interest of the locality. But this is a general question affecting very many counties, and it is just one of those matters which fall within the duty of the Administration. Mr. Mowat cannot shelter himself behind the excuse that he has not such support in the House as to enable him to legislate, for by his knavish legislation he has secured a very substantional majority of the so-called representatives, though he only obtained a minority of the votes polled. It is clear therefore that he and his colleagues declined to act in this important matter either because they will not take the trouble, or because they see no party advantage to be gained by action, being perhaps even afraid of annoying some friend. In this as in so many other cases they show that they have no regard for their duty or for public convenience, unless they can at the same time serve their own interests.

THE January report of the trade of Toronto shows in a striking manner the advantages of the N. P. Both imports and exports were larger than in the preceeding year, showing an increased trade, but an examination of the list of articles is even more suggestive. There were increased imports of jewelry and watches, fancy goods, furs and silks, proving a greater purchasing power when such luxuries could be afforded. There were decreased imports of cottons and woollens, indicating that our principal factories are securing the home trade. In the list of exports there is also the satisfactory fact that there was an increase of 50 per cent. in the manufactures. The National Policy is evidently efficient in carrying out its object.

THE Quebec despatch of the Toronto Globe says:—

"The Mercier Government are evidently not to be trifled with. It is said that they have suspended Crown Land Agents in Gaspe and another in Bonaventure for scandalous partisanship in the pending Gaspe elections."

Yet the Globe and its imitators are pretending that there is no party contest in Gaspe as neither candidates, according to them, is a Ministerialist. Mr. Mercier has been described by his own political friends as very dishonest and inscrupulous, but it is hardly likely that even he would interfere in a Dominion election out of mere mischeivousness and without a prospect of serving his party.

THE Opposition journals are crowing with joy because they assume that Mr. Joncas, the Conservative candidate for Gaspe can be made ineligible by the partizan interference of Mr. Mercier, Premier of Quebec, who is said to be contemplating the trick of refusing to accept Mr. Joncas' resignation of office. Directly after the election Mr. Mercier is to reverse his tactics, for the Reform journals tell us he is to dismiss Mr. Joncas to make place for a Rouge.

SOME of the more unscrupulous of Mr. Blake's organs are pretending that Mr. Joncas, the Conservative candidate in Gaspe, is not a Ministerialist. Yet Mr Mercier, the Rouge Premier of Quebec, is now refusing to accept Mr. Joncas resignation as Sheriff of Gaspe, so as to disqualify him if possible from being a ministerial candidate.

SMUGGLING FROM CANADA.

The U. S. Revenue Defrauded of $60,000 Duty on Opium.

DETROIT, March 14.—A few days ago the Detroit customs officials discovered that large quantities of opium were being smuggled to that port from St. Thomas, Ont., and shipped West. They decline to say just how their information was obtained, or how the case was worked up, but it was learned that some time ago large quantities of the drug were smuggled from British Columbia to San Francisco and other Californian ports. About six or eight months ago this was broken up, and a new route was selected by the smugglers. The opium would be brought to St. Thomas, where it mysteriously disappeared, to turn up in Detroit. R. A. West, of 44 Sibley street, Detroit, has been arrested for conducting the smuggling by means of cannisters, and is now in jail. Twenty-two boxes containing 100 pounds each have been confiscated. The opium is supposed to be prepared for smoking, in which case the duty will be $10 per pound. The common opium retails here for $24 per pound, and the prepared is thought to be worth much more. At the above figures the twenty-two boxes last traced would be worth $52,800 and the duty on it would be $22,000. The customs officials say the smuggling has been going on two or three months and to the extent of over $60,000.

M. de Lesseps says the French nation is decidedly in favour of peace, and no intelligent Frenchman believes there will be war.

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS

THE POLICY OF SLANDER.

Still another Grit election charge has collapsed, this time in Winnipeg, where a baseless prosecution was instituted against Mr. T. H. Gilmour and Alderman Miller for seeking to bribe Ald. Calloway to give his support to Mr. Scarth. Brought to proof before a magistrate, the Winnipeg followers of Mr. Blake suffered as ignominious a defeat as they did in a similar attack on respectable men in Kingston, and had their cases thrown out of court, leaving them poorer alike in pocket and reputation than when they instigated their unauthorized prosecutions.—Montreal Gazette.

HYPOCRITICAL PRETENCE.

The pretence that either Mr. Blake or the Grit party, as a party, are committed to manhood suffrage is fradulent and hypocritical. The public naturally judge of their professions as to what they would do if they obtained power at Ottawa by what they hove done or failed to do in Ontario, where they have had everything their own way for many years. Until they give us manhood suffrage here it would be folly to be misled by Mr. Blake's speciously worded sentences, full of "ifs" and "buts," to suppose that they would show themselves more liberal in Dominion matters.—Toronto News (Indep.)

MR. BLAKE'S MAJORITY.

Mr. Burk will please drop in at his Toronto hotel, and have the "M P." he put after his name cancelled.—Hamilton Spectator.

VERDICTS REVERSED.

As in the case with his fellow-Liberal, the Secessionist Premier of Nova Scotia, the verdict of the country has been reversed since Mr. Mercier came into power, and he now represents only a dead issue. He cannot strengthen himself.—Montreal Gazette.

NO RE-COUNT.

The Grits have not yet applied for a recount in North Hastings. They will never be able to re-count the $200 in Yankee gold which was deposited with the Returning Officer on behalf of their candidate.—Belleville Intelligencer.

A YANKEE TRICK.

Respecting the export trade in Nova Scotia lobsters, a correspondent of the Halifax Chronicle, writing from Pictou, makes a statement which if true, is a piece with the flight in and oyster-can dishonest interpretation of the Washington Treaty, indulged in by certain cute Yankee officials. He complains that it is the habit of certain Americans packers doing business in Nova Scotia "to label all good lobsters as being put up in United States and all inferior ones as being put up in this province. The effects, of course, is to give Nova Scotia packed lobsters a poor name in comparison with American lobsters." The same writer suggests that, as Americans are excluded from the mackerel and other shore fisheries under the treaty of 1818, why should not the same rule apply to the lobster fishery?—Monetary Times.

IMPROVES WITH AGE.

Sir John's majority is like himself—it is improving with age—Toronto World (Ind)

THE SEA OF MOUNTAINS.

The "Sea of Mountains" is an inhospitable place for friends of Mr. Blake, and at a time when the political situation makes every vote valuable—and especially valuable to the Liberals—they see seat after seat going to their opponents almost without a contest. Yale was carried by the Conservative candidate by acclamation; in New Westminister the Liberal lost his deposit, and in Victoria, on Monday, though there was but one Opposition candidate in the contest for two seats, and he ran against five Conservatives, he was left at the foot of the poll.—Montreal Gazette.

GERRYMANDERED KINGSTON.

The local Grit organ lately said that Kingston was the only Ontario constituency lost to the Liberals in the last election that was not gerrymandered. Whereupon the Citizen remarks that Kingston is one of the constituencies that Mr. Mowat gerrymandered in a most disgraceful manner; but notwithstanding the job, Mr. Metcalfe was re-elected. The less Mr. Mowat's organs say about gerrymandering the better; for if ever constituencies were gerrymandered in the interests of a political party these of Ontario were for the last general election.—London Free Press.

NEW GAME LAW.

The following excellent compilation of the game law of Ontario, (Act of 1886) and the law relating to insectivorous birds has been made by Judge Jellett, of Prince Edward. We publish it for the information of all concerned:

The only season during which the following game may be hunted, taken or killed is as follows:

DEER—15th October to 15th December.

PARTRIDGE—1st September to 1st January.

WOODCOCK—15th August to 1st January.

SNIPE, RAIL AND GOLDEN PLOVER—1st September to 1st Jan.

DUCKS OF ALL KINDS—1st September to 1st Jan.

GEESE—1st September 1st May.

HARE—1st September to 15th March.

The above dates are inclusive.

These may be exposed for sale for twenty days after expiration of time for killing. No eggs to be taken or destroyed at any time. No traps, nets or snares, baited lines or similar contrivances to be used. These may be destroyed by any person without liability No contrivances described or known as batteries, swivel-guns, sunken punts, or night lights to be used for killing wild fowl.

Fur-bearing animals may be only taken, hunted or killed as follows:—

Beaver, mink, muskrat, sable, martin, otter or fisher—1st Nov. to 1st May. Nor shall any trap or snare or other contrivance be set for them outside this season. Nor shall any muskrat house be cut, speared, broken or destroyed at any time. Any person may destroy such traps, snares, etc., so set without any liability.

N. B.—No poison to be used in killing the animals named, and no poisoned bait to be exposed in any locality where dogs or cattle may have access to the same.

No deer-dog to run at large from the 15th November until the 15th October.

FINES AND PENALTIES.

DEER—$10 to $50 each offence.

FUR ANIMALS—$5 to $25.

BIRDS OR EGGS—$5 to $25 each bird or egg.

Any other breach of this Act—$5 to $25.

No fine can be less than the minimum sum above.

The whole fine goes to the prosecutor. In case of no goods or chattels, imprisonment for 3 months.

These acts do not apply to birds mentioned in the game act, or to birds commonly known as poultry.

It shall not be lawful to shoot, destroy, wound or injure, or attempt to do so, any bird whatsoever, except eagles, falcons, hawks, owls, wild pigeons, kingfishers, jays, crows, ravens, plover and blackbirds. Nor shall the birds protected by these acts be taken, captured, bought or sold, or exposed for sale, or had in possession, nor shall any trap or snare be set for them, nor shall it be lawful to take, injure, destroy or have in possession, any nest, young or egg of the same. Any person may seize on view any such bird unlawfully possessed, and take the same before a magistrate.

For violation of any provisions of these acts a fine of from $1 to $20 is imposed, the whole to go to the informer, and on non-payment, imprisonment of from 2 to 20 days.

These acts do not apply to anyone having a written permission from the Commissioner of Agriculture authorizing him to obtain such birds or eggs for BONA FIDE SCIENTIFIC PURPOSES only.

ACT. — 1881. Page 224. Act to amend, etc.:

Any person may during the fruit season, for the purpose of protecting his fruit from the attacks of such birds, shoot or destroy on his own premises the birds known as the ROBIN AND CHERRY BIRD without being liable to any penalty under the act.—Belleville Intelligencer.

A Mad Boy Murders His Parents.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., March 14.—Eighteen miles southwest of this place M. L. Landshaw, his wife and four boys had camped near a spring. They were moving to Texas from Missouri. The boys were aged 18, 21, 25 and 28 years respectively. One of them became insane on Saturday and yesterday morning he assaulted his father and mother with a large stick, inflicting probably fatal wounds. He then attacked his brothers and wounded them badly if not mortally. The lunatic escaped.

Warning has been given by the Imperial Privy Council that unless the losses which have occurred among animals carried on deck while crossing the Atlantic are reduced, the carriage of animals on deck during the winter will probably be prohibited.

SHIRLEY CARSTONE

By ELIZA ARCHARD.

Copyrighted by American Press Association.

"Others have written the epic of battles, Shirley," he said; "let your poem be the epic of peace and progress in history."

When she was 15 she wrote some timid verses for his inspection. He gave them back all marked and erased. He had taken away her finest words, her most sounding passages. Shirley was intensely angry. She flung herself on her father's breast in a passion.

"He crosses out the best of everything I write," she said. "It's no use my trying. I won't go to school any more."

That evening the master came as usual to the stone house. But the brightest, sweetest face of all was not there as usual to greet him.

"Where's Shirley?" asked he.

"You have broken her heart," said the colonel. "You cut her poem all to pieces."

A look of keen annoyance, of pain, crossed the fine dark face.

"But I could not help it," he said. "She uses too many words. Send her to me, will you not?"

The colonel brought her, leading her by the hand, her face averted.

"Here she is, Mr. Morrison," said he. "Take her life, but spare her adjectives!"

He laughed and passed down the steps out of sight. Shirley and the master were left alone. Shirley, strong, fearless girl though she was, trembled from head to foot. She had never been afraid of anything, but here was a new timidity stealing up from her heart and stopping her throat so she could not speak. As for him it may be that he trembled too. He opened his lips to speak.

"Shirley," he said. But the words died. A strange gleam passed over his face. His lips quivered momentarily, but he suppressed some kind of emotion, and said:

"You are my best pupil, Shirley; the one I take most pride in. You are angry at your teacher. What have I done? Have I not always been kind and gentle to you?"

Shirley found a voice, somehow, though it was a voice with a quaver in it.

"Yes, you have, Mr. Morrison. But I will never write anything again. Other girls write poetry for the school exercises. They take it out of books, and change it over so nobody will know it. They hand it to you, and you say it is nice. I write my verses out of my own head. They are my own. And you mark them all over. I have torn the paper up. I will never write any more. Never!"

"Just because it was your own and I saw rare promise in it, therefore I took pains to show you its faults. You use too much ornamentation. You imitate, without knowing it, other poets you have read. You must learn to be yourself. Come here, Shirley."

She obeyed, with downcast face.

"My dear pupil, I would rather go away from Linwood altogether than to hurt you or offend you. But I am your teacher. Don't you think, child, I know better than you?"

"Oh, yes, Mr. Morrison, I know that. You have taught me about more things than I ever knew in the world. I owe everything to you."

And you will trust me for the future, will you not?" he said.

He put one strong hand softly against each pink cheek and lifted her face. He looked down at her with his black-gray eyes, eyes so like her own, and said:

"Dear girl, you do not know how much you have been to me. I hated mankind when I came here. There was not a living creature I cared for, or who cared for me. You and your father showed me there was still truth and honest feeling in the world, bless your sweet, sunny soul! When I go away, whatever trouble is still to come, I shall know I have had some true friends, some hours that were happy. You are the best, truest, brightest creature I ever met. Would I wound your tender soul by so much as a word, do you think? You are the only one—Shirley, you are capable of great things. If I can judge of anything, the time will come when all the world will praise you. You will write your poem, and do your work—a work such as no woman ever did before. I know that. You will show all men the sweet, deep, marvelous strength that lies in a woman's brain. I believe in that, and I believe in you. Your verses will not be feeble and muddy and narrow—the kind most women write. Yours will be the grand, ringing lines of humanity and free womanhood. Because I know this, let me give you such hints as I may, child. Will you do this and forgive me?"

Her lips quivered, but she was always ready to confess an error—the frank, true child. She said:

"You are very, very good, Mr. Morrison; and I was wrong and foolish. I will do my best and never give you trouble again. Forgive me, dear master."

"I will bring you a woman's poem and read it to you to-morrow, Shirley," he said. "Gather your little Carstones, and we shall have a picnic in the afternoon down under the willows by the mill race. I will read you Aurora Leigh. Good night, child."

He laid his hand caressingly upon her head and slid it down softly over one of the fair braids. Did he press the long, fair braid to his lips as he turned to go? Well, who knows? Shirley did not know.

It was their last quarrel.

From that day a new and tenderer tie seemed to draw them together. The picnics, as the children called them, lasted all through the bright summer days. In the winter there were picnics indoors. The teacher had seemed soured and reserved when he came to Linwood. He had a bitter, sarcastic tongue when disturbed, which had drawn on him ill-will at first. But that had changed. He had become gentle and genial. He established a literary society among the rustics, the first one ever in the village. It was turning the thoughts of the younger people in a better and higher direction.

He and Shirley read and studied history, poetry and science. He taught her Greek and Latin, prose and poetry. The girl, like himself, had the rare faculty of grasping a thought in a glance. A few words upon its page would tell its whole story to her clear, alert brain. They were days of perfect happiness and peace. But the girl's thoughts came back always to Joan of Arc, the Maid of Domremy, the saint and martyr, with the iron helmet pressing upon her golden hair. It was like the motive in a work of music. She wrote little poems still, but now the master criticised them no more. Some had been printed. They had been copied and recopied, and went floating through the newspapers like beautiful waifs. Shirley was beginning to be known already as a poet of no common order.

"Shirley, you must write the best poem of your life for us next month," said the president of the literary society. "It is our last meeting of the year; you are appointed for the poem for the public entertainment. Our literary society has such a name now that we must do something uncommon."

"Yes," said the executive committeeman, "spectators will come in from half the county. Linwood must keep up her reputation. Linwood forever!"

The evening came, and Shirley read her poem. She surpassed all former efforts. Beside her, as she read, was a vase of white rosebuds, rare and costly, of a kind unknown in Linwood. It was the master's gift to his best pupil.

Mrs. Simpkins, her fast friend, told the story of her triumph to every stranger that came to the village.

"'Twas a night Linwood'll never forget, I reckon. The master, he'd trained Shirley, and practiced her on her readin' till it was that nateral you couldn't ha' told she wasn't talkin' it off out of her own head. She was the beautifulest creetur' you ever laid eyes on. She looked for all the world like an angel, standin' there dressed in snow white 'lusion. And her speech! Land's sake! It sounded like the organ playin' 'Gather at the River,' when Sunday school lets out. It was just that beautiful. When she got done, and made her bow, there was a minit of dead hush, like before the benediction in church. Then the people all fell to as they couldn't help themselves, and such a clappin' and cheerin' was never heerd in Linwood before nor since. 'Peared as though they would take the girl and carry her off on their hands then and there. Shirley, she just blushed and looked that pretty till you felt you'd like to bite her. She turned her eyes this way and that, as if she'd like to hide, till her eyes lit on the master. He was sitting on the stage, with the Presbyterian minister and the doctor. He hadn't cheered her at all, but looked sober and set right still. But when Shirley looked at him, with the crowd a clappin' and a clappin', he jest reached across and shook her hand, quiet and gentleman like. He was a little pale and serious, like he had a pain or something. You could see how pleased he was, though, with his eyes a shinin'. But he never said a word.

"When the noise died away a little the Presbyterian minister he got up and waved his hand for 'em to be still. Then he says:

"'Ladies and gentlemen—I am requested by the Linwood Literary society to close the exercises of the evenin' by a little ceremony not down in the regyler programme. A little surprise has been prepared for the poet of the evenin', a young lady whom we all honor. On behalf of the Linwood Literary society, as a token of their high appreciation, I am requested to present this wreath of silver laurel leaves to Miss Shirley Carstone. Fame may wreathe her brow with evergreens in after years, but she will never forget the inscription here, 'Linwood crowns her poet.'"

"It said just that:

"'Linwood crowns her poet.'

"Then you ought to have heerd the noise! It was wuss'n a revival meetin'."

But there was something good Mrs. Simpkins did not tell. She did not tell it because she did not know it. Women generally keep a secret under similar circumstances.

When Shirley, half in a dream, looked at her crown and her flowers that night at home, she found a little card among the white rosebuds. The card said:

"The master learns from his pupil."

LAKEHURST.

From Our Own Correspondent.

TENDERS OPENED.—The tenders for the erection of the new Methodist Church were opened on the 10th, and were found to range in figures from $800 to $445. Mr. J. Jones being the lowest, the building was entrusted to him. The church, which is to be frame, veneered with brick, is to be completed by the 1st of September next.

BRIDGE QUESTION AGAIN.—Efforts are being made to agitate the question of a bridge across Chase's narrows. A meeting has been held to discuss the project. This has been a long talked of scheme, and if successfully dealt with will prove a beneficial thing for Lakehurst.

NEWS NOTES.

Christine Nilsson has been married to Count Miranda, and it is reported she will retire from the stage.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla, being highly concentrated, requires smaller doses, and is more effective, than any other blood medicine. It is the cheapest because the best. Quality and quantity should be considered.

Sir Alexander Campbell, Canadian representative at the Imperial Confederation Conference, will sail to Europe on Saturday next.

M. De Lesseps has had a long interview with Prince Bismarck, and the Crown Prince has conveyed to him from the Crown Princess an invitation of a reception.

"Words fail to express my gratitude," says Mr. Selby Carter, of Nashville, Tenn., "for the benefits derived from Ayer's Sarsaparilla. My system was filled with scrofula, blotches, ulcers, and mattery sores, all over my body." Mr. Carter was entirely cured by Ayer's Sarsaparilla, 8 months ago, and has had no return of the scrofulous symptoms.

Two more leaders in the recent Sillistrian insurrection have been sentenced to death and 250 other participants in the revolt have been sentenced to imprisonment.

It is stated that a powerful company of English capitalists to work rich mining limits in the Port Arthur district was organised by Major Bell during his visit to England.

If anything clogs the waste-pipes in the house we become alarmed, for sewer-gas is apt to generate disease. The children, then, are removed to their grand-parent's, or kept out of doors as much as possible, until the defect is remedied. But the waste-pipes of the human system are allowed to clog, and the sufferer, who cannot get away from the poison, becomes unfit for work or pleasure. In such cases Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Purgative Pellets will gently remove the cause, and the effect will vanish of itself. By druggists.

Forewarned

of danger by the condition of your blood, as shown in pimples, blotches, boils, or discolorations of the skin; or by a feeling of languor, induced, perhaps, by inactivity of the stomach, liver, and kidneys, you should take Ayer's Sarsaparilla. It will renew and invigorate your blood, and cause the vital organs to properly perform their functions. If you suffer from

Rheumatism,

or Neuralgia, a few bottles of Ayer's Sarsaparilla will relieve and cure you. Alice Kendall, 218 Tremont st., Boston, Mass., writes: "I have been troubled with Neuralgia, pain in the side, and weakness, and have found greater relief from Ayer's Sarsaparilla than from any other remedy." J. C. Tolman, 336 Merrimack st., Lowell, Mass., writes: "In no other remedy have I ever found such a happy relief from Rheumatism as in

Forearmed

with Ayer's Sarsaparilla, there need be no fear of Dyspepsia, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Salt Rheum, Tetter, Eczema, Catarrh, Liver troubles, or any of the diseases arising from Scrofulous taints in the blood. Geo. Garwood, Big Springs, Ohio, writes: "Ayer's Sarsaparilla has been used in my family for a number of years. I was a constant sufferer from but Ayer's Sarsaparilla effected a permanent cure. Seven years ago my wife was troubled with Goitre: two bottles of Ayer's Sarsaparilla cured her, and she has never had any return of the disease. I regard this preparation as the best medicine in use for the blood." B. Barnard Wair, 75 Adams st., Lynn, Mass., writes: "For many years I suffered terribly from Indigestion, Dyspepsia, and Scrofula. Almost hopeless, I took Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and am a well man to-day." Be sure and get Ayer's Sarsaparilla, the most thorough and effective blood purifier. The best is the cheapest.

Dyspepsia,

THE CITY AND SUBURBS

Forget it Not.

That an entertainment will be given this evening in the Oddfellow's hall, corner of George and Hunter streets. Doors open at 7.30, to commence at 8 o'clock.

Scott Act.

Wm. Pengelly appeared before James Stevenson, J. P. this morning to defend himself against a charge of committing a violation of the Scott Act. Mr. James Henry for the defendant, pleaded guilty to a first offence. Judgment was reserved.

Abroad.

Two Peterborough rinks went to Lindsay this forenoon. Following are the names:—

Rink No. 1.	Rink No. 2.
J. McClelland	J. Connal
D. Cameron	J. Stanger
J. D. Pentland	C. McGill
S. Ray, skip.	T. Rutherford, skip.

Besoms and Bivalves.

On Saturday night a handicap curling match was played between rinks skipped by Messrs. T. Rutherford and Geo. Edmison. Rutherford won and the rinks regaled themselves in Chamberlains oyster parlor at Mr Edmison's expense. A pleasant evening was spent.

COMPETENT judges say TURNBULL'S is the right house to buy boys' and youth's ready made Clothing. He gives you new styles, low prices and good quality combined.

A Dangerous Pastime.

To-day a farmer was driving a double sleigh down George street, and, of course, the sleigh was well loaded with children who had got on in the usual way. One little fellow had the misfortune to slip off and the hind bob passed over his foot. The farmer drove on and the little boy limped off crying piteously.

A Young Men's Prohibition Club.

On Tuesday evening there will be a meeting held over China Hall for the purpose of organizing a young men's prohibition club in Peterborough. This club will be started and worked on the same principle as that in Toronto and other places. The meeting will be opened at 8 o'clock. All friends of temperance are cordially invited to be present. Already some 40 or 50 young men have signified their intention of joining.

Otonabee Canoe Club.

A meeting of the recently organized canoe club was held on Monday evening in the rooms of Mr. John Millar, M. A., George street. There was a fair attendance of the members. After routine the report of the special committee drafted to draw up a constitution was read, received and adopted, the only amendment made being the change of the name of the organization. On motion the club was called "The Otonabee Canoe Club," there being already a Peterborough Canoe Club. The by-laws, and rules or order presented by the committee were adopted. The meeting adjourned to re-assemble in two weeks.

EVERYBODY is surprised and pleased at the quality of the 4 button Kid Glove TURNBULL is selling at 50 cents a pair. All the new gray shades in the popular Alexander make now in stock.

The Temperance Revival.

The temperance revival, under the auspices of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union and Royal Templars, and with the assistance of the town clergymen, will be commenced on the evening of Friday, March 18th. On that evening the "Hamilton Helpers" will begin the work in the lecture room of the George Street Methodist Church. During the remainder of the week the "Helpers" will hold meetings as follows:—Saturday, 4 p.m., meeting for children in the Mission Hall, over China Hall; Saturday, 8 p.m., mass meeting of men in the Opera House; Sunday, 11 a.m., Murray Street Baptist Church; 4 p.m., Opera House; 7 p.m., Murray Street Baptist Church; Monday, 7.30 p.m., Charlotte Street Methodist Church; Tuesday, 7.30 p.m., Mark Street Methodist Church, Ashburnham; Wednesday, 7.30 p.m., Auburn Church; Thursday, 7.30 p.m., St. Andrew's Church; Friday, 7.30 p.m., St. Paul's Church. The band of "Helpers" is composed of Messrs. Hebdon, Stead and Dunnett, and the services consist of speaking and singing. On Saturday, March 26, the White Bros. and Mr. W. W. Buchanan, Dominion Councillor, R. T. of T., will arrive and will continue the meetings for another week.

GRAY Dress Goods are all the rage this season. You can have your choice of eight shades in thirteen different qualities at TURNBULL'S. Also Ball Trimming, Hercules Braid and Buttons to match. Miss Morgan, our dressmaker, leads the fashion in dressmaking. All her work turned out promptly.

Three Links.

The Otonabee Lodge of Oddfellows has placed a neat gas lamp in front of their hall on which is printed the name and number of the lodge.

Journalistic.

The Dunnville Gazette has been enlarged, and is now one of the largest weekly papers. As it is enterprising, interesting and readable it should continue to prosper.

Dropped Dead.

At about ten o'clock this forenoon a valuable horse belonging to Mr. Stewart, of Cavan, dropped dead near McBain's grain warehouse. It was conveyed outside the town limits.

Big Gatherings.

Among other big gatherings which are to take place in Peterborough during the coming summer are the annual meeting of the Grand Lodge of Oddfellows, the Orange demonstration, the meeting of the Bay of Quinte Methodist Conference and the A. C. A. meet (at Stoney Lake.)

The Connecting Link.

Mr. John S. Hendrie, the contractor for the construction of the Locks Line railway, will commence work at once and prosecute it continuously until the line is completed. Grading, however, will not be begun until the frost is out of the ground. He advertises in another column for cedar timber, stone, sand and gravel, and other material for construction.

IF you have heard of anything new and have not seen it look for it at TURNBULL'S, the great novelty house. The counters are now piled with new spring goods, which we are pleased to show.

Larger Than Pigeons.

The Belleville Intelligencer on Monday devoted considerable space to Peterborough and its Town Council. Under the heading "A Sumptuary Law" it says:—"The Peterborough Town Council at its last session indulged in some primitive legislation in directing that the canines of that town shall, after May 1st, be clothed with the official tag of the corporation or suffer the extreme penalty of death. This will give the gun club of that berg an opportunity to distinguish themselves."

Peterborough Wins.

A two rink curling match was played between Lindsay and Peterborough at the Charlotte street rink on Saturday with the following result:—

Peterborough wins by 7 shots.

Personal.

The Rev. I. Tovell preached special sermons at Picton on Sunday.

Miss Bolton and Miss Cook, both of Toronto, have arrived in town to take charge of the dressmaking department recently opened by Miss E. Delaney, in connection with the millinery store. Both of the ladies come highly recommended, but apart from that Miss Delaney herself vouches for their capability as artistic dressmakers, she having had several orders executed by them before coming to Peterborough. Miss Delaney has made her dressmaking department complete in all respects, and her old patrons in visiting the new department will find everything first class—good trimings and workmanship.

Mr. Earle's Lecture.

Owing to indisposition Mr Earle did not feel capable of taking up the subject for which he was announced in the Y. M. C. A. rooms last night, viz., Tennyson's "Princess," but instead gave readings from Chough, Matthew Arnold and Tennyson, commenting on them as he went along. The audience, which almost filled the hall, while regretting that "The Princess" was not given, were yet well pleased, and on motion of the Rev. Mr. Torrance, seconded by Mr. J. D. Collins, passed a hearty vote of thanks to Mr. Earle. A class to take up the critical study of Tennyson and other writers was then formed, a good number of those present agreeing to attend regularly. The class will commence work next Monday night, and all ladies and gentlemen are invited. No charge will be made.

W. C. T. U. Members.

The meeting of the W. C. T. U. was held at 7 p. m. on Monday, in the Y. M. C. A. Hall. The President was at her post as usual. After the devotional exercises the business of the Union was taken up. On account of the withdrawal of the secretary (to join the Y's) a secretary pro tem was appointed, Mrs. Price being appointed final secretary. Correspondence was then read from Miss Annie Campbell, Marshall, of Kingston, Mrs. Beck, Peterborough, and Miss Pearson, of Brantford, after which a report of the executive committee was read, in regard to rooms having been secured over the store now occupied by Mr. Valentine Best as picture gallery. The same being approved, the committee was instructed to complete negotiations. Also a vote of grateful appreciation and thanks was conveyed to Miss Skinner for her efforts in Peterborough. The Union is a thriving, energetic body of workers and at each meeting such an interest is show that the members are bound to say: "God is surely with us."

Now is the time to order your Spring Mantle or Dolman. An extensive stock of cloths to select from at TURNBULL'S, all the new spring styles being now introduced.

REV. SAM JONES.

Some of the Revivalists Chunks of Wit and Wisdom.

The Rev. Samuel G. Jones delivered an address in Hamilton the other evening. The following are some of his original saying as reported in the Spectator:—

I am in sympathy with humanity. I love all men. I also love all women just as much as my wife'll let me. I love everybody. I feel like the boy felt when his sweetheart said she'd have him—as I had nothing agen anybody in the whole world.

I feel as if I'd like to get all you men on this platform and hug you. And you women—if I could get you up here, I'd—get my wife to hug you.

I don't believe in waiting till we die to get to heaven. I'm am willing to have some of my heaven down here, and let God reserve the balance for the future Those people who like to sing about happiness "away over yonder," seldom have much heaven in their hearts.

What I say to-night is agoing to be pertinent to this audience. I may not stick to my subject; but I'll stick to the crowd.

There's nothing better than good character, and nothing worse than bad character. Good character is to have the whole man in harmony with God and right. No man can bank on his character until every one of the ten commandments is set to music in his soul.

The affections are at the base of character: If you tell me what you love and what you hate, I'll tell you what your character is.

I believe in liberty. But when a man steps over the line that divides liberty from license he becomes a slave. "Liberty to preach the gospel;" "license to sell whiskey." Don't you see the difference!

I believe in liberty of thought; but I don't believe in freethought. Freethought may develop into free love. If you allow your wife to be "freely" made love to by another man, the first thing you know she'll run away with him.

A man said to me once; "Jones, I find great difficulty in loving my neighbor as I love myself." I said: "I find no difficulty on that score." "How is that?" he asked. I said; "About fourteen years ago I got a good square look at myself, and since that time I haven't met a man I didn't think more of than myself." Self-love is the meanest thing on earth.

Love is freedom, and freedom is love. If you want to be a free man, fall in love with everything in the universe, and out of love with yourself.

I never hear one of those independent fellows boast about his freedom that I don't think I hear the devil's chains rattling on him; for he's one of the devil's chain gang, and wears his chains from Monday morning till Saturday night.

A man once told me that science had discovered there was no hell. I asked him, "When was the expedition sent there to find out?"

Infidelity is nothing more than a locomotive without a drop of water in the boiler or a grain of sand in the tender. "What are you going to do?" "Nothing." "Where are you going?" "Nowhere." It's good for nothing but to just stand on the track and keep others locomotives from passing. Thank God, we have side tracks to turn it onto.

Go all round infidelity, and what do you find behind it? Nothing. Go round Christianity, and what do you find? Hospitals, asylums, almhouses, schools, orphans' homes—good and benevolent institutions of all kinds. Christianity is engaged in making humanity better, comforting the sorrowful, tending the sick, cheering the faint, relieving the distressed, caring for the helpless. What's infidelity doing? Fighting Christianity.

Infidelity is like nothing more than one of those pictures of hideous fishes with great big mouths and wee little tails like tadpoles. All mouth!

Bob Ingersoll has my sympathy. He gets $500 a night for his lectures. I can very well understand how he can be an infidel; but I can't understand why you poor little fools should be infidels for nothing.

You say, "How can I believe in anything I never saw?" Did you ever see your own backbone? Talking about backbones, there's lots of Christians in this city who've got nothing but a little bit of cotton string up the middle of their backs, instead of backbones.

I know fellows who can speak seven languages, and yet can't speak five minutes without telling half a dozen lies. I'd rather butcher the Queen's English as I do, and speak the truth, than speak seven languages and tell lies

The educated fool is the most disgusting sight I ever saw in my life. Culture in a fool is like whitewash on a rascal: it won't stick, but scales off in spots.

God says "Woe to the man who putteth the bottle to his neighbor's lips"—and when God says "Woe" (whoa) you'd better stop.

CLEARING OUT SALE.

GENUINE ∴ BARGAINS

In Each Department.

I have decided to let the whole of my present Stock go at Wholesale Cost Price. In these days people expect Bargains, and feel justified in obtaining all they can for their money.

I will give the inhabitants of Peterboro' and surrounding country a chance for once of getting Reliable Goods at prices that will, in truth, be Bargains, of which they are invited to come and judge for themselves.

The Stock consists of the usual Staple Goods, besides a large variety of FANCY GOODS not to be had elsewhere in town, viz.:—

Dress Goods, Velveteens, Gloves, Hosiery and Underwear.

Blankets, Quilts, Table Linen, &c.

Small Wares in great variety.

Fancy Goods, such as Desks, Work Boxes, etc.

Fancy Work in Slippers, Cushions, Brackets, Silk and Filoselle Wools, etc.

Mens Underwear in Merino and Wool, and Mens Furnishings generally.

After 23 years' business in Peterborough, I wish to give my old customers and the public generally something unusual in Real Bargains, and will be pleased to see them as quickly as possible avail themselves of them, for, of course, those coming early will have the largest choice.

TERMS STRICTLY CASH.

HALDIMAND.

CAYUGA, March 15.—The county judge has declared Dr. Montague, Conservative, elected on the recount by a majority of 1 for the County of Haldimand. The seat was previously claimed for Mr. Colter, Reform, by a majority of five. The final decision was given to night by Judge Upper about six o'clock. The ballots were looked over and were finished last Saturday, but judgment was reserved till to night. It is rumoured that there will be a protest.

Serious Fire.

BUFFALO, N. Y., March 15.—Messrs. Miller & Greiner's large grocery building is burning. The indications are that it will be totally destroyed. The loss will be heavy. The Commercial Advertiser building is across the street, and although it is fire-proof will probably be considerably damaged. Later.—Messrs. Miller and Grenier's building and contents are totally destroyed. The loss on the building is $120,000 and on the stock $175,000. The loss on the Masonic Hall, beautifully fitted up since the last fire, is $30,000; and on the Acacia Club, $5,000; occupants of various offices, $10,000. The total loss is $300,000; insurance, $175,000 to $200,000. The Commercial Advertiser's loss by warer and broken plate glass is from $3,000 to $5,000.

The U. S. Secretary of War Resigns.

WASHINGTON, March 15.—It is reported the resignation of Wm. C. Endicott, as Secretary of War, is in the hands of the president. While this is probably premature, the fact is that there is very little sympathy between the President and Mr. Endicott and their entire alienation may occur at any time.

The Italian Chambers have been prorogued and a dissolution of Parliament is probable.

LATEST WIRE FLASHES

SENTENCED.

PARIS, March 15.—Rossell, a waiter who murdered his mistress in the cafe Gay Lussac, has been sentenced to death.

MEMORIAL SERVICE.

ST. PETERSBURG, March 15.—The Imperial court yesterday attended a funeral service before the late Czar's tomb in the Cathedral of St. Peter and St. Paul. Services were held in all the churches and at the shrine over the spot where the Czar was killed. In the evening the city was illuminated in honor of the accession of Alexander III. All the theatres, grog shops and other places of resort of the people were closed.

A WOMAN HANGED.

LIVERPOOL, March 15.—The public hangman yesterday morning executed his namesack, Mrs. Berry. She is the sixth woman that has been hanged here during the last fifty years. What Mrs. Druse was to the United States, Mrs. Berry was to England. There was a great similarity in their love for finery in their death garments, in the heartless character of the murders they committed, in their mania for writing farewell letters and in the scaffold scenes.

EUROPEAN CONGRESS.

PARIS, March 15.—The Journal des Debats has a despatch from Vienna saying that Baron Von Schloezen, the Prussian Minister to the Vatican, has suggested that the Pope convene a European Congress to settle the Eastern and Egyptian questions. In such an event, the dispatch says, Prince Bismarck being satisfied with the success of the Army Bill, would propose that the Congress declare in favor of a general disarmament.

AN OFFICER SHOT.

LONDON, March 15.—During a military parade in Calcutta to-day a trooper shot and instantly killed Major Neill.

DISHONEST PAYMASTER.

LONDON, March 15.—Since the discoveries of Terry's dishonesty in revealing Chatham dockyard secrets, the vigilance of both the Army and Navy Departments has been awakened, and with very unpleasant results. A paymaster in Malta has been arrested for defalcations, and his case appears to bear a strong resemblance to that of Col. William Henry Browning.

THE AUTHOR OF "SHE."

LONDON, March 15.—An elaborate attack on Mr. Rider Haggard appears in the Pall Mall Gazette, which accuses the author of "She" of plagiarism on a large scale from Thomas Moore's "Epicurean." This, says the critic, contains almost all the ingredients of Mr. Haggard's masterpiece. Numerous parallel passages are cited, almost every sentence is one of which it is alleged, will be duplicated in "She." Ideas are said to be borrowed freely; and so are incidents, scenes, references and words, in short, if these passages were fairly cited. Mr. Haggard is called on for an answer. Should he fail to overthrow his new reviewer, it will be a blow indeed to the English critics who have set up Mr. Haggard as a kind of protest against Messrs. James and Howells and their school.

ARMOR OF OLD WARRIORS.

How the Normans were Dressed when they Conquered England.

The principal garment worn in battle at this time by both Normans and Englishmen who were rich or powerful (for the ordinary people fought in their every-day clothes) was so shaped to cover the arms to the elbow and the legs to the knee, says Edward J. Lowell, writing in Scribner's Magazine of the Norman conquest. It was made of leather or strong cloth, on which were sewed small plates or rings of metal. It was probably also wadded as an additional protection. Sometimes, instead of the plates or rings, a trellis-work of leather was made and strengthened with studs. The garment had a square opening in the breast to enable the wearer to struggle into it, first his legs, then one arm, then the other. When he was in, a flap was buckled or buttoned across the opening. A hood of the same material as the body garment, covered the head and shoulders. On top of hood was place a helmet of iron and bronze, conical or nearly so in shape, and fitting round the head like a hat. A piece of iron came down from the rim in front, protecting the nose and partially masking the face. There was a somewhat similar piece to cover the back of the head and cover the nape of the neck. These helmets must have been both heavy and uncomfortable, as the whole weight rested on the head, and a perfect fit must have been difficult to obtain. William and one or two of his greatest nobles wore hose protected by plates or rings, like their coats; but most men, noble and simple, relied in battle on an elaborate arrangement of straps reaching from the knee to the ankle, and recalling that worn to-day by the peasants of the Roman Campagna. On their left arms the warriors carried almond shaped shields, three or four feet long. For these the English sometimes subsituted round or oval shields. The shield was probably made of wood, covered with leather, and having a border of metal and a projection or boss, of metal in the widest part. The studs which hold the straps by which the shield was carried also appeared on the outside. The surface, slighlly curved, and generally of one plain color, with a border, was sometimes decorated with color lines, a cross, or the figure of a dragon. Armorial bearings did not appear on shields until a later date.

Bernhard in New York.

NEW YORK, March 15.—Mme Sarah Bernhardt opened her New York engagement in the Star Theatre last evening before an immense audience. The excitement was so great that several persons fainted during the artiste's realistic portrayal of the "Princess Fedora." The representative people of the city were in the theatre, including prominent politicals, social leaders and literary men. Three recalls followed the first act, two were given at the close of of the second, while the curtain went up five times for the great actress to receive the superb floral tributes that were sent to her after her wonderful acting in the third act. The greatest enthusiasm followed the death scene in the last act, which was the finest acting that has been on the New York stage since the time of Rachel.

Instructions have been issued to all agents of the Canada Pacific Railway to notify shippers to the United States that all through-rate contracts will be void after April 1st, owing to the necessity for a revision of the passage of the Inter-State Commerce bill.

THE RAILWAY DISASTER.

The Death List Swelled to Thirty-Nine—Others Mortally Injured.

FOREST HILLS, Mass., March 15.—It was known at a late hour last night that thirty-nine persons lost their lives by the railway accident, and about one hundred were injured. Two were dying in the Massachusett's hospital, and several others were in a critical condition.

BOSTON, March 15.—F. F. Favor, a Boston hay merchant, who was in the first car of the ill-fated train yesterday, says that too much praise cannot be given to the firemen for the promptness and heroism with which they faced their work. The noise was simply terrible. The shrieking of the women was piercing, and with the groans of the wounded caused more hearts to tremble. The women took it coolly, however. Some of the victims walked about after the accident with broken arms, and though badly bruised, asked that help be extended to others who needed it.

WANT IT ALL TO THEMSELVES.

Cape Bretoners Agitating for Separation from Nova Scotia.

HALIFAX, March 15.—Now that the secession agitation has received its quietus in Nova Scotia, Cape Breton is reviving the agitation for separation from Nova Scotia. The North Sidney Herald says:—"Time and circumstances are not propitious for resumption of the patriotic work of freeing Cape Breton from its galling political connection with Nova Scotia, temporarily laid aside by the force of circumstances in June last. There must elapse at least six weeks before the meeting of parliament and with the lesser demands of business arrangements incident to the season very much can be done in six weeks in the way of organization and preparing the case of Cape Breton for presentation to Parliament. It is to be hoped then that no time will be lost, but that the organization will be resumed at once and that every patriotic Cape Bretoner will be found ready and eager to lend a helping hand towards freeing his native island from the grasp of the boodle revolutionists known as the government of Nova Scotia."

BY FEAR AND PAIN.

How the Savage Denizens of the Forest are Subdued by Pain.

Those who have carefully observed the management of wild animals in menageries zoological gardens, and in the pens of the animal dealers, must at times have been astonished at the ease with which hired men, comparatively unarmed subdue beasts which we have been taught yield only to the blazing rifle, and fight gamely until death, says the Scieneific American. A lion escapes from his cage and crouches at the darkened end of the managerie. Remembering the stories we have read of the ferocity of the beast, and of the terrible scenes at the lion hunt, we can imagine only one mode of action. The keepers should arm themselves with rifles, hide behind barriers, and open a rapid fire upon him. To our surprise they don't do this. They simply wheel a great cage up to him, fall upon him with clubs and thrash away until he enters it. A short time ago an anaconda seventeen feet long broke away while being carried across a public park in New York City. With vivid pictures of the exploits of this reptile in the Amazon watershed before our eyes, we expect to see him fall upon the nearest human being, enfold him in his big coils, and crush him to a jelly. Surely it would take armed men and resolute men to capture him! No, on the contrary, this is not required, and it must have been with a feeling akin to disappointment that those who had read of the ferocity of the anaconda saw one man, armed with only a blanket, advance and seize him by the throat while two others, also unarmed, grasp his tail, and then the trio, still holding on carry him through the streets and thrust him into the den whence he had been taken. Not long since the writer saw Mr. Thompson, a dealer in live animals, open a box containing an anaconda quite as large as this one, take the reptile by the throat, and calmly examine his mouth, opened though it was in rage, to look for cancerous humors. Then from adjoining shelves he took python after python, each about ten feet long, and examined them in like manner. Only recently at the place of another dealer (Reiche), a big, powerful Syrian bear, a type known for its ferocity, was subdued without the firing of a shot. The bear broke through iron bars half an inch thick, and, standing up with his back against a cage of monkeys, thrust his terrible paws threateningly toward three keepers gathered about him. He didn't have a chance to use them, however, for he was belabored with clubs until glad to get back again to his cage. On a pedestal near the gate of the Cincinnati Zoological Gardens there recently stood the stuffed figure of a donkey which, when alive, withstood the attack of a lion and beat him off. The lion, it seems, had broken out of his cage and escape to a wood near by. On a grassy hillock adjoining, a donkey lay stretched in placid slumber—a slumber that was rudely disturbed by the lion, who, in a few bounds was upon him. When the donkey felt the great mass of flesh descend upon him as if from the clouds, he was stunned and indignant, but not frightened perhaps, because he had never read any of the wonderful stories about the lion. He quickly recovered from the blow, and rising, shot out both hind feet at the same time, and caught the lion squarely in the forehead. Badly hurt the lion skulked off, and later the donkey died of the wounds he received at the onset.

Fire Among the Classics.

MONTREAL, March 15.—By a fire which broke out in Slade's book store, Bleury street, this morning damage to the extent of fully $5,000 was done to the stock and building. Among the works destroyed were 300 volumes of Greek authors and 1,000 volumes of law books. Mr. Slade is insured.

A Jubilee Celebration.

MONTREAL, March 15.—The Montreal Garrison artillery are now completing arrangements for holding a grand military tournament in Victoria rink on the eve of the holiday which it is expected to be declared by the government in honor of the Queen's Jubilee. A very expensive prize list is being prepared.

SLOWLY IMPROVING.

LONDON, March 15.—Mr. Giffen, chief of the statistics department of the Board of Trade, has given in response to enquiries an outline of the state of British trade collected from official reports. The general results summarized are as follows: The total volume of the trade of the whole country, imports and exports, continues to maintain an improvement on the condition previously reported. The accounts for the quarter ending 25th of March will exhibit a large increase in quantities. The improvement is confined to quantities. In prices the rise has not been rapid and the margin of profit in staple industries is terribly small. In many branches the margin would be scarcely sufficient to justify production if better prices were not expected. Through profits being cut so fine the wages of mechanics, artisans and all descriptions of skilled and unskilled labor remain low, and in only a few branches and over a comparatively small area is there any immediate prospect of a rise

Advice to Mothers.

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup should always be used when children are cutting teeth. It relieves the little sufferer at once; it produces natural, quiet sleep by relieving the child from pain, and the little cherub awakes "as bright as a button." It is very pleasant to taste. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain, relieves wind, regulates the bowels, and is the best known remedy for diarrhœa, whether arising from teething or other causes. 25 cents a bottle. Be sure and ask for "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup," and take no other kind.

The Daily Review.

WENDESDAY, MARCH 16, 1887.

THE PARLIAMENT BUILDING JOB.

THE official report of the Commissioner of Public Works for the Province of Ontario gives the information that on the 7th of last October a contract was entered into with Lionel Yorke, of the City of Toronto, for the "Brick and Masonry Work of the new Parliament and Departmental Buildings at Toronto for the amount of $670,250." This is a reluctant and tardy confession of a gross outrage on the Legislature, and through it upon the people it represents. It is a flagrant violation of the very spirit of the Constitution. The Legislature after full consideration and discussion last session deliberately restricted the Administration to an expenditure of $750,000 on these buildings, yet a few months later Mr. Mowat and his colleagues with shameless effrontery entered into an arrangement to spend far more than that amount upon the erection. If the brick and masonry work is to cost $670,250, it is clearly impossible that the building can be completed for the remaining $79,750. It is true the Commissioner informs us that the contract is subject to being ratified by the Legislative Assembly, but what does that amount to under the circumstances? The contract is signed, some of the work has already been done, and the supporters of the Government in the House are taken by the throat to vote for this outrage as a matter of confidence in the Administration. It was not the case of an unforseen emergency, in which the Administration had to act to the best of their judgment, applying afterwards to be indemnified. The Legislature deliberately fixed the limit to be spent. Mr. Mowat and his colleagues deliberately set the House at defiance and resolved to spend as much as they pleased. Neither is it a case, not uncommon, of estimates being exceeded in course of building, for they have deliberately arranged from the start to expend an amount largely in excess of that voted to them. It is doing them no injustice to assert that such must have been their intention when they shank form asking more than $750,000. They deceived the House and the people, and now they come totheir subservient supporters and say: "You cannot help yourself; vote your acquiescence in our insult to the Legislature, or vote your party and yourself out of power." If this is the meaning of the people's constitutional control of the public expenditure, through their representatives, what is the sense of the House considering estimates and voting appropriations? Why should they not take the account of what the Administration has chosen to spend during the preceding year and simply vote their satisfaction with them?

Is it surprising that Mr. Mowat and his colleagues carefully concealed from the people at the recent general election this outrageous jobbery? They had already made this iniquitous arrangement yet on no platform did they state what they had done and ask for the assent of the electors. They dared not confess their extravagance, their knavery, their unconstitutional usurpation, so they appealed to the people with a pretended policy of spending only $750,000 on these Parliament puildings when they had taken the first steps to carry out their resolve of an expenditure of at least three times that amount. When they had determined to appeal to the House to sanction such a costly and wasteful policy, why did they not ask the electors to choose their representatives with this question in view? Not only did they practice concealment, but they actually uttered impudent falsehoods in regard to this matter. Mr. Mowat by means of a journal which is not only his organ but is under his personal control by means of hired proxies, denied the truth which he now has to admit. He dare not face the people of Ontario with the truth.

Even the official report now given to the public is, we are convinced, a dishonest falsification. We have the evidence of one of Mr. Mowat's own friends that the contract with Mr. Yorke was for a far larger amount. We challenge the Administration to maintain that the cost of the brick and masonry work for these buildings is not in excess of $670,250. That amount would be utterly unwarrantable but it will be found that there is a dishontst concealment of a far larger cost.

Mr. Mowat's friend would urge in vain tha his character precludes such a supposition. He uttered falsehoods on the subject to deceive the people of Ontario so as to escape their just indignation before the general election. He is therefore as likely to be uttering a falsehood now to postpone as long as possible the period when the exposure of the truth must come.

THE SECESSIONISTS.

THE Speech from the Throne delivered at the opening of the Nova Soctia Legislature gives no indication of what action, if any, the Government proposes to take in regard to secession, the cry by which they were retained in office. The result of the Dominion elections in that Province, when a majority opposed to secession was elected, seems to have non-plussed the Secessionist Government, and they either have some dark plot in the background, or, which is more probable, are waiting for something to turn up to relieve them from the awkward position in which they find themselves. But their supporters are not all willing to play the part of Micawber, and an effort was made in the debate on the address to force the hand of the Government. Although the effort failed, it brought out the fact that the Secessionists were in earnest, and one of them was frank enough, or rash enough, to avow himself an advocate of annexation. This annexationist member is a follower of Premier Fielding and of Mr. Blake, and he and others are determined to compel Premier Fielding to take action. If Mr. Blake had obtained a majority in the Dominion House he would have been forced to face the same trouble that now confronts Mr. Fielding, for the Nova Scotian Reformers are Secessionists or Annexationists, and they would, it is fair to presume, have shown no more consideration for Mr. Blake than they have shown for the Provincial Premier. Fortunately Mr. Blake is still in Opposition, and so is the Secession clique. The people of Canada who are true to the Dominion will take care to keep them there and to force back every menace aimed at Confederation. It would be most unfortunate if a party openly advocation secession were to be placed in a position of greater power on the Government side in the Dominion House and it might result in a calamity that Canada would not recover from for some time.

KINGSTON EXCITED.

KINGSTON is excited and indignant because one whom it had fondly called her son has slandered her. Mr. Grant Allen published an article in the London, Eng., Pall Mall Gazette on the Scott Act, purporting to be the result of his observations in Canada last summer, in which he described Kingston as anything put a sober city. Clergymen, lawyers, hotel-keepers, brewers, Scott Act men and Anti-Scott Act men unite in condemning what they, with great unaminity, called a slander and a libel, and the Mayor is asked to call a public meeting to repel the attack on the city's good name. Really, it does seem that the excitement is unnecessary. The article is severe, but even those unacquainted with the localities described could scarcely be misled by it, as it is obviously absurd and even contradictory. Mr. Allen is a Canadian, and it is strange that one who has shown consideration for the Socialists who by force of circumstances were compelled to make London their refuge, thus appearing to give evidence of kindliness of nature, should delight in slandering his native country, his countrymen and his native city. Mr. Allen complains that at one place in Canada he could not procure a glass of beer and that in consequence he suffered from head ache. Perhaps his head was not aching when he wrote the article that has excited Kingston and moved Frontenac to indignation.

DOES IT PAY?

A STRIKING illustration of how much better it pays to keep good instead of scrub stock was afforded at the sale of the stock o' Mr. John D. Howden, of Columbus, Ont., on the 15th inst. Among the animals sold was a Short Horn cow, Liza Logan, and eight of her descendants, realizing in all the handsome sum of $1,350 for the nine animals. Of these, five were her own calves, realizing as follows: Lizzie, seven years old, $195; Katie, six years old, $180; Mary, four years old, $150, and Emma, two years old, $70. Then there were two daughters of Lizzie bringing $120 and $75 and a yearling bull $145. Then there was a daughter of Mary bringing $80, and a yearling son of Katie bringing $200, which with the mother ($115) makes the total we have named (less her own original cost) for this cow in seven years, besides some other calves not here taken into account.

The Globe's Libel Suit.

TORONTO, March 14.—Some days ago judgment was given in favor of the plaintiff, in Northrop v. Globe, owing to the defendant's non-appearnnce. A motion was made this morning, on behalf of defendants, to set aside the verdict, which was granted, on condition that the case now come on for trial at Belleville next Monday, that they plead at once and produce Mr. Cameron, managing editor, for examination at the trial; defendants to pay costs. The suit is for $10,000, for libel, the Globe having charged the plaintiff with distributing boodle during the recent campaign.

Kleptomania.

MONTREAL, March 14.—A desperate looking but exceedingly well dressed woman named Catharine Morrison was arrested today on a charge of larceny. Three large Saratoga trunks containing a multitude of articles from a bar of soap to the most costly silk and satin dresses, all stolen from private dwellings, were found in her possession. Her case is believed to be one of kleptomania. She was sent to the Criminal Court for trial.

Following His Pastor.

NEW YORK, March 15.—Mr. Edward E. Bowen, one of the fifty members of Plymouth Church who accompanied the late Mr. Beecher's body to Greenwood on Saturday, died yesterday. His death was caused, it is believed, by heart disease. Mr. Bowen was a brother of Mr. Henry C. Bowen, the publisher of the Independent.

Another Undesirable Resident.

CHICAGO, March 15.—The Chicago manager of the Ansonia Clock company, John E. Gledhill, has defaulter to the tune of from $36,000 to 31,000 and absconded to Canada. The book-keeper, Wm. Watson, is a defaulter also for $5,500, and has been arrested.

The Straits of Mackinac.

CAICAGO, March 15.—Capt. Arnold, owner of the Mackenzie Island docks, reports that the ice in the straits is from eighteen to twenty inches thick, and that the prospects for breaking up before April 15 are not favorable. The weather continues cold, with snow on the ground two feet deep.

WIT AND WISDOM.

Why is a fat man like water? Because neither can run up hill.

Bishop Wilson used to say, "If you cannot say anything good of a person, say nothing."

Matrimony is something like a circus, for there is generally a ring to hold the performers.

It's a pity women ever grow up. They are so beautifully ingenuous and honest as children.

It is not a misfortune for a young lady to lose her good name when a nice young gentleman gives her a better one.

A crusty old bachelor says, "Woman may talk as they like about feeling the cold, but just give one of them an engagement ring, and all the cold of Greenland wouldn't make her keep on her gloves in church."

The world is governed by three things—wisdom, authority and appearance. Wisdom for thoughtful people, authority for rough people, and appearances for the great mass of superficial people who can only look at the outside.

An Irish carman informed a stranger some little time ago that eleven statues on a certain building represented the apostles. He explained the absence of the twelfth by declaring that Judas Iscariot had been taken away by the Government for use as a Crown witness.

The secret of all success is to know how to deny yourself. If you once learned to get the whip-hand of yourself, that is the best educator. Prove to me that you can control yourself, and I'll say your an educated man; and without this all other education is good for next to nothing.—Mrs. Oliphant.

It was at a dinner table. His father was saying something to his mother about dynamite. "Oh," exclaimed Jack, looking across to Eloise with an evident desire to impress her with his requirement, "I know what dynamite is." "What is it?" inquired Eloise. "It's something that you blaspheme rocks with," Jack explained.

The late Doctor Macadam used to tell of a tipsy Scotchman making his way home on a bright Sunday morning, when the good folk were wending their way to the kirk. A little dog pulled a ribbon from a lady who was leading it, and as it ran from her she appealed to the first passer-by, who happened to be the inebriate, asking him to whistle for the poodle. "Woman," he retorted, with the solemnity of visage which only a Scotchman can assume, "woman, this is no day for whustlin'."

A country woman, who was anxious to hear a certain minister preach at some distance from her place of residence, put a black pudding in her bosom to serve as a refreshment. The clergyman happening to preach on our darling sins, used the expression so often—pull them out of your bosom, that the woman, in a pet, pulled out the pudding, and threw it at him, saying, "There, tak' it; what need for makin' a this noise about a bit black puddin'?"

A poor girl had begged for a holiday to go and see a man hanged. She had a long way to walk—some sixteen miles perhaps. On her return to Gainsborough at night her mistress found her in tears. "What is the matter with you, child; what are you crying about?" "Oh, ma'am, the man's been reprieved," said the girl, bursting into tears again.

"Woman," an imaginative writer says, "is a compound of three articles—sugar, tincture of arnica and soft soap. Sugar, because of the sweetness apparent in all women, though it has become acidnated to domestic vinegar; arnica, because of the healing and soothing they yield to men after the trials of life; and soft soap, for reasons too obvious to need specification."

"The Chinamen is gettin' scarce, an, there ain't nothin' else to kill now."

How a Monkey Took Medicine.

It is an understood fact that not only does a happy disposition conduce to health, but that laughter itself has proved in some cases one of the best medicines. Here is an instance:—A patient being very low with fever, his doctor ordered a dose of rhubarb. A pet monkey belonging to the sick man was present while the nurse prepared the medicine. When she left the room the animal, not knowing that his master was watching him, slipped slyly to the table, took up the goblet with the liquid and put it to his lips. The first taste was probably strange to him, and he made a comical grimace, but he disliked to give it up. Another sip, and he got the sweet of the syrup. Aha! His grotesque visage brightened. He cast a furtive glance around, and then sat down with the goblet firmly grasped, and pretty soon he placed it to his lips and drank to the dregs. Perhaps there had been a wineglassful of syrup of manna—not more—while the rhubarb had all settled. But he had found it, and before he had fully realized the change of taste he had swallowed nearly the whole of the nauseous dose. Mercy! what a face he made over it! The sick man was spellbound. Never in his life had he seen anything so grotesequely and ridicuously human. The face of the disgusted monkey was a study. He ground his teeth and actually stamped his foot as he had seen his master do when angry. At last his excitement reached a climax. He stood up, his eyes flashed, he grasped the goblet by its slender stock with all his might, shut his teeth, and then, with a spiteful, vengeful snap, he hurled it with mad fury upon the floor, and seemed entirely satisfied as he saw the thousand, glittering pieces flying about. Never before had the sick man seen anything to equal it. The whole scene and all the circumstances, everything about it, appeared to him so supremely and comically ludicrous that he burst into a fit of laughter that lasted until his nurse came to see what was the matter. And when he tried to tell her he laughed again more heartily, if possible, than before—laughed until he sank back exhausted and in profuse perspiration. The nurse anxiously sponged and wiped his skin; he perspired and laughed again until he slept; and when he awoke a reaction had taken place, the fever had been broken and he was on the sure road to convalescence.

Food for Consumptives.

Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil, with Hypophosphites, is a most marvellous food and medicine. It heals the irritation of the throat and lungs, and gives flesh and strength quicker than any other remedy known. It is very palatable, having none of the disagreeable taste of the crude oil. Put up in 50c. and $1 size.

Enjoy Life.

What a truly beautiful world we live in! Nature gives us grandeur of mountains, glens and oceans, and thousands of means of enjoyment. We can desire no better when in perfect health, but how often do the majority of people feel like giving it up disheartened, discouraged and worn out with disease, when there is no occasion for this feeling, as every sufferer can easily obtain satisfactory proof, that Green's August Flower, will make them free from disease, as when born. Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint are the direct causes of seventy-five per cent. of such maladies as Biliousness, Indigestion, Sick Headache, Costiveness, Nervous Prostration, Dizziness of the Head, Palpitation of the Heart, and other distressing symptoms. Three doses of August Flower will prove its wonderful effect. Sample bottles, 10 cents. Try it. d90

CHAPTER IV.

MATRIMONIAL.

The scene changes. We are across the sea. But it is still a school. Are we never to be done with schools? Well, no! Life is a school, and the wise are never done learning.

The scene, by your leave, is a German university town. Time, several years before the opening of the humble tale you have done us the honor to follow thus far. On a giant cliff above the town stands the most magnificent ruin in Europe. Below, the blue Neckar rushes out from its mountains and seeks the great Rhine beyond. You know the town, Heidelberg.

An American family were spending some months there. With them was the pretty daughter of the household, a girl of 17. Among the students at that time was a young man from the United States. He was barely 18, but large, strong and manly in physique, with dark hair and eyes. He was precocious in every way; noted for his wide range of study, as well as for his strength and courage. He was, besides, the son of rich parents, who had indulged his every whim from the time he was born. In brief he was a fiery youth, who knew no law but his own will.

Hundreds of parents from the United States visit the old German town every year with their young lady daughters. The university dates back to the year of our Lord 1386. It is very famous. Hundreds of American boys attend its classes every year. But this particular boy, with the flashing dark eyes, who loved his own way, met the particular maiden of 17 one day at the Hotel Victoria. With the other hundreds we have nothing to do.

Fate willed the meeting. The dark haired youth mostly decided what followed, the first part of it at any rate.

The girl was a giggling, weak willed creature, with poodle dog eyes and forehead, and a doll's red and white face. She had the simpering, affected ways of a school girl, who cannot for one moment get rid of the consciousness of her sex. The dark haired boy's room mate fancied himself madly in love with her. His friend saw it with regret.

"I'll cure you of this nonsense, Frank Broughton," he said to himself. "I'll go and make love to Miss Myra myself. I'll cut you out. The girl will throw you over. Then I'll throw her over and go home for the summer, and you go with me. You'll thank me for breaking you of this blessed foolishness."

That evening, with his graceful, careless bow and smile—the scapegrace was fascinating—the dark haired youth made his way to the young lady:

"Miss Myra," he said, "it will be a beautiful sunset. Will you and your mother give me the pleasure of going up the mountain with you?"

The red and white girl simpered.

"Why la! mamma," said she, "shall we go?"

Mamma said, "I think we may," with that degree of alacrity, veneered by dignified reserve, which is due of an occasion when a managing mamma scents a possible son-in-law in a rich and highly connected young man.

It quite took away the breath of Frank Broughton. In five minutes they were off, before his very eyes.

If, reader, you are of a guessing turn, you will know the rest. Well, the girl was pretty, with her peach like cheeks, and her eyes of that color which the milliners call "peacock blue." The dark haired youth, who went in for cutting his friend out to save him from folly, was himself of a passionate, susceptible nature. The walks and rides up the mountain were finally continued on his own account.

What would you have? A month later the same three went up the mountain. Mamma discreetly lingered in the shadow, in the great square of the magnificent ruin. In the shadow in the smaller square at the front of the magnificent ruin, the dark haired youth who had his own way, pressed Miss Myra's babylike hand, kissed her on her babylike lips and whispered in her babylike ear:

"In a month I'm coming home to marry you."

"And Miss Myra blushed and said:

"Why, la, how could you!"

That was the very question he asked himself many a time afterward. Frank Broughton was avenged!

In a month they were married, the boy and girl. The youth's parents opposed feebly, but Philip Dumoray had always had his own way. Miss Myra's mother helped on the match in all the haste consistent with regard to the best appearances. Had she not been an American mother of the highest standing it might have even seemed that she feared the prize would slip through her fingers.

The young people set up housekeeping in New York. Twin sons were born to them within a year. Then it was that Philip Dumoray faced the great new truth, that a man who has a mother-in-law, a dull, silly wife and a pair of babies can't always have his own way. What could even thunder and lightning do against a hill of putty?

Myra Dumoray developed such astounding capacity for emotion that Philip could scarcely believe his own senses. Strange, too, but the emotion was always of a disagreeable kind. Scenes began to take place that thoroughly alarmed the youthful husband, and then thoroughly enraged him. His household was comfortless. It was something new not to be comfortable. Matters went from bad to worse between them. Once he had said impatiently:

"What in thunder is this mess cook's brought in? Do you call that coffee, Myra? I wonder why you never have anything fit to eat in the house?"

Perhaps, like a man, this strong young fellow would not have noticed that other things were so slouchy, if the household had happened to have a good cook. But the tender point of the masculine gender is its stomach.

"When you married me, who'd a thought you'd ever been so cross. You would marry me. And now you're always grumbling, and me not at all well! Boo-hoo-hoo!" remarks Mrs. Dumoray.

He pushed back from the table and strode out of the room. Myra sent for mamma. They counseled together. When the male monster returned both women wore an air of martyrlike resignation that exasperated him beyond measure.

It went on so for days and months. What might have been expected from the self will and undisciplined temper of Philip Dumoray? He was moody and half savage at home. Myra would shut herself up and sulk and cry for hours. Mamma was there to protect her darling, and perhaps it was well she was, at times. Philip was sincerely fond of his little boys. That much at least is to be said for him. He amused himself and them every day. One afternoon he missed them.

"Where are the babies, Myra?" he asked his wife.

"Oh, I sent them away to spend a month at nurse's mother's in the country. I'm not well and they made me nervous."

"Why, woman, what are you thinking of? Have you no natural feelings toward your own children?"

Philip's mother had never let him out of her sight in his childhood, so rare and precious had she held him.

Myra put her handkerchief to her eyes.

"I never thought I'd live to be insulted in this way. And you would marry me, you know!"

"I didn't know I was marrying a fool," muttered Philip, savagely.

"Mamma! mamma!" shrieked Mrs. Dumoray, and fell back in a hysterical fit. Mamma came, murmuring, "Oh, my poor, poor darling!" Once more the man had to beat a retreat. The moment he was out of the house the abused wife dried her eyes and sat bolt upright. Philip wandered aimlessly to the park and sat down, restless and discontented. Was all married people's life like this? But he had had his own way, to be sure. His marriage had been one of those cases wherein all a man's best friends can do is to stand back and see him make an ass of himself. And while he was musing on matrimony, he saw a bright little phaeton flash by. Inside of it was his wife, gay and pretty, chatting with one whose polite attentions were not a compliment to a lady, married or single. He went home in a fury. When presently the wife in all her poodle dog prettiness came back a scene took place which it will be quite as well not to repeat.

It may be mentioned that similar scenes followed. The discord became common talk. Everybody took the part of the wife. Was she not a sweet, pretty, childlike creature, whom no one could help loving? A man who would mistreat her was a brute and a monster. Who would blame her if she did seek a little relief from the wretchedness at home? There was no lack of those who did not like Philip. His imperious temper and haughty frankness had not tended to draw friends around him. By degrees he got the name of a tyrannical husband and a bad man. He heard the whispers about himself. He saw his wife flirting openly with fops and rakes. He became a young fellow fit for desperateness.

One evening he came home earlier than usual. The light burned low in his wife's parlor. He looked in. The man whom he had seen riding in the park with Myra was there. His arm was about her, he was murmuring low words in her ear, her head was on his shoulder.

Philip was like a tiger. With one hand he gripped his wife's arm, and flung her against the wall. He took her companion by the throat, before he had time to recover from his first daze. He throttled him until he was purple, and threw him out the door, and down the steps. He was a giant.

Then he clasped his hands to his temples, and sat down to think. A crumpled rose-colored object against the wall attracted his sight. It was his wife lying there insensible, in the gay dress she had worn to receive that man.

He had laid violent hands on a woman.

Myra was in a dead faint. He gathered her up and carried her to her bed. He sent for the doctor. When she recovered consciousness, and her eyes fell on him, she fainted once more. She was ill for many months.

To be Continued.

NEWS NOTES.

At Monday's consistory the Pope conferred the red hat on Cardial Taschereau, of Quebec.

Lord Salisbury's son Viscount Cranborne, will marry Lady Alice Gore, daughter of the Earl of Arran, shortly.

A commission has been appointed to enquire into the Government's claim against Colonel Amyot, of the Ninth Battalion.

It is understood that the same day will be selected for the celebration of the Queen's jubilee in the Dominion as in Great Britian.

A rumour, which, however, lacked confirmation, was current on Monday in Ottawa that Hon. Edward Blake was about to retire from political life.

At Hamilton police court on Monday a man named James Henry Livingstone was sent to gaol for vagrancy, making his 258th committment.

The Queen has declined a Jubilee present of a five-ton cheese, made from the milk of 5,800 Canadians cows, offered to her by a Glasgow merchant.

Mr. C. W. Young, editor of the Cornwall Freeholder, was on Monday committed for trial on the charge of criminal libel preferred by Mr. R. R. McLennan.

Mr. James McLaren, of Ottawa, disclaims any knowledge of the alleged combination of New York capitalists to secure control of all the iron mines in the Dominion, as reported in Monday's papers, and in which Mr. McLaren was said to be one of the principal movers.

IF anything clogs the waste-pipes in the house we become alarmed, for sewer-gas is apt to generate disease. The children, then, are removed to their grand-parent's, or kept out of doors as much as possible, until the defect is remedied. But the waste-pipes of the human system are allowed to clog, and the sufferer, who cannot get away from the poison, becomes unfit for work or pleasure. In such cases Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Purgative Pellets will gently remove the cause, and the effect will vanish of itself. By druggists.

THE CITY AND SUBURBS

Recovered.

The two horses belonging to Mr. Moher and Ryan, of Douro, which were injured by the falling shed in the American Hotel yard a few days ago have fully recovered. Dr. Stephenson has sent them to their owners.

St. Patrick's Day.

To-morrow will be the 17th of March, St. Patrick's day—the day when all true Irishmen should don the shamrock. At the 10 o'clock Mass in St. Peter's Cathedral the Rev. Father Conway, Parish Priest, will preach a sermon appropriate to the occasion.

St. Patrick's Day.

The teachers and pupils of the George Street Sunday School will be "At Home" in their school room, which will be handsomely decorated, to welcome their friends on Thursday evening, March 17th. Light refreshments will be served and an excellent programme rendered. Call and spend a social hour with us. Tickets 25 cents.

Big Investment.

The British Empire Mutual Life Insurance Company, through Mr. E. E. Henderson, their agent here, have recently effected another large loan of $12,000 in Peterborough This office has now invested in our prosperous town about $30,000. They have between $500,000 and $600,000 already invested in Canada. This is an evidence of the Company's faith in the future of Canada, and Peterborough in particular. The Company are ready to invest additional sums in Peterborough as apportunity offers.

Preparing for Summer Sports.

A meeting of the members of the Cricket, Bicycle, Baseball, Lawn Tennis, Football, Snowshoe and Toboggan clubs, forming the Peterborough Amateur Athletic Association, will be held in the rooms over Mr. Stethem's hardware store on Thursday evening, 17th instant, at half past seven o'clock sharp, for the election of officers and striking the committees of the several clubs for the ensuing year. All interested in any of the above sports are requested to attend, as success depends on hearty co-operation.

EVERYBODY is surprised and pleased at the quality of the 4 button Kid Glove TURNBULL is selling at 50 cents a pair. All the new gray shades in the popular Alexander make now in stock.

Belleville Waking Up.

In Belleville the Council is talking of lighting the streets with electric light, considering a drainage system, enquiring about a park, pushing waterworks construction, and proposes seven years' exemption from taxation to secure a good hotel. If Belleville city continues to show such energy it may yet get even with Peterborough town. Their Council is also evidently progressing in another way, for at the last meeting an Alderman is reported to have declared his readiness to defend his opinions with "more than words," producing a "mild sensation."

Personal.

Miss Bolton and Miss Cook, both of Toronto, have arrived in town to take charge of the dressmaking department recently opened by Miss E. Delaney, in connection with the millinery store. Both of the ladies come highly recommended, but apart from that Miss Delaney herself vouches for their capability as artistic dressmakers, she having had several orders executed by them before coming to Peterborough. Miss Delaney has made her dressmaking department complete in all respects, and her old patrons in visiting the new department will find everything first class—good trimings and workmanship.

A NOVEL ENTERTAINMENT.

Music and Mystery—Singing and Spiritualism—Mind Reading.

A highly interesting entertainment was held in the hall of Otonabee Lodge of Oddfellows, No. 13, on Tuesday evening. The elegant lodge room was filled comfortably, there being about three hundred people present.

Bro. T. Workman, N. G., occupied the chair.

The entertainment was opened with a piano solo by Miss Caron, which was well received. A humours reading by Dr. Clarke, describing the success of a London society in distributing top boots and blankets among cannibals, was loudly cheered. Miss E. Johnston sang "The Wood Nymph" in an acceptable manner. The fancy club swinging by Mr. T. McNaughton was watched with much interest. The ease with which he executed intricate movements is one of his best points. Later in the evening he gave a fine exhibition of illuminated club swinging. He was greeted with round after round applause. Owing to Mr. T. Dunn's indisposition he did not appear, his number being filled by Mr. M. Dunn.

The exhibition of mind reading by Mr. John Millar, B. A., created such interest that about half of the audience rose on their feet while the experiments were being made. Mr. Millar went through quite a number of experiments and failed in only one. Among other things he did was to strike two different notes on the piano at the mental dictation of a lady. She thought of the notes she wished to have sounded and immediately after Mr. Millar struck the keys, each time correctly. Another novelty was the guessing which hand a certain article was in. Mr. L. Seward submitted to be blindfolded and was given a piece of money. He put both hands behind his back, then drew them forward and Mr. Millar, confronting him, told correctly which hand held the money. A collection of various articles was taken up in the audience, which Mr. Millar returned, each one getting his own.

The first part of the programme was concluded by Messrs. Elliott and Tierney, who were encored, and Misses Stevens and Johnston, who sang "Whispering Hope" very pleasingly.

The second part was opened with an instrumental duet (violin and piano) by Misses Moyse and Chalaupka.

Book mystery by Mr. R. M. Roy, created no end of guessing as to how it was done. First of all a book was selected by Mr. John Millar. Then Mr. Roy asked several of the audience to put down figures on a piece of paper. Councillor Hartley added them up and a boy blindfolded by Mr. Roy told what the sum was. Then a card was selected by someone in the audience with the back to the boy and he told what it was, the nine of diamonds. A lot of numbers on paper were shaken in a bag and the boy, still blindfolded, told what number was drawn, 12. Then the boy divided the total of the sum added by Councillor Hartley by 9 which gave 257 and 3 over. Mr. Millar was told to open the book in his hand at the 257th page, go down 12 lines and count one to the third word. The boy told what the word was and even repeated the sentence in which it was. Mr. Roy announced that the whole thing was only a barefaced trick.

Mr. Roy, before giving the exhibition, paid a high compliment to Mr. Millar. He had seen many mind readers, and among them Mr. Stewart Cumberland, but he must say conscienciously that Mr. Millar was the best he ever saw. Mr. Cumberland hesitated very much, whereas Mr. Millar hesitated scarcely any.

A song by Miss Jennie Moyse and a "spiritual seance" by Mr. Roy brought the entertainment to a close.

The spring Chancery Sitting for this County will be held on Wednesday, April 13th, Mr. Justice Ferguson presiding. The Spring Assizes will be held on May 9th, Mr. Justice O'Connor presiding.

A Meeting of the "Y."

The first regular meeting of the "Y" was held in the hall on Tuesday afternoon. Miss Edwards, President, occupied the chair, and the meeting was conducted similarly to those of the W.C.T.U., being opened with devotional exercises. Miss Keele, Corresponding Secretary, read the Secretary's report, which showed an encouraging increase already in membership. An entertainment or programme committee was appointed, and preparations made for a vigorous prosecution of the aims and ends of the society. An emblem and motto will be selected at the next meeting. A circular was read from Miss Skinner on flower mission and kitchen garden work, the latter of which will probably be taken up as soon as the society has become permanently settled in their new rooms, north of Smart's music store, and over the shop lately occupied as a picture gallery. The Fower Mission will be begun as soon as "the flowering meads o' may" put forth their fragrant wreath of floral beauty and "the rose above the rose full blown" exhales its delicate perfume. It was decided to hold meetings regularly every two weeks alternate with the W.C.T.U. Still more young ladies are wanted to join in the work.—COM.

Now is the time to order your Spring Mantle or Dolman. An extensive stock of cloths to select from at TURNBULL'S, all the new spring styles being now introduced.

A Meeting to Elect Officers and Organize for the Season.

The Northern Division being now established, a meeting has been called for Friday, the 18th of March, at 8 p. m. for the purpose of electing officers for the year, and making the necessary arrangements for the Stoney Lake camp. The meeting will be held in the office over the Canadian Express Office, George street, which has kindly been placed at the disposal of the Committee by Mr. Cox.

Not only all present members of the A. C. A. are invited to attend, but also all who were members in 1883, and all new men who now wish to become members. It is proposed to give all who at or before the meeting enroll themselves as members a voice in the election of officers, &c., and it is hoped that all interested will make it their business to attend.

The General Executive Committee has given to this Division special privileges in the right to re-enroll former members without payment of initiation fee or back dues, and in the matter of the Divisional Purser receiving the fees.

The Stony Lake meet is so warmly taken up by other Canadian towns, that it is probable that there will be a larger number present than even in 1883, while a great many Americans have announced their intention of coming over.

The local canoeists should take an active interest in making the first meet of the Northern Division of the American Canoe Association a decided success.

The Gweski Cup

Sergt.-Major Metheral received, this morning, the Gweski Cup, which the Durham Field Battery won in the Dominion artillery competition at Kingston in September. It is a handsone piece of silver and is valued at $100. It is mounted on an ebonized pedestal and stands about a foot in height. It was presented by Col. Gweski in 1884, and was that year won by the Quebec Field Battery. The Kingston Field Battery captured it in 1885, and the Durhams carried off the trophy in 1886. To Peterborough belongs the honor of sending the commanding officer, Sergt.-Major Metheral, and two members of the shifting squad, Bomb. Haultain and Bomb W. Metheral. The squad was composed as follows:—Sergt.-Major Metheral, Corp. Thompson, Corp. Henderson, Bomb. Wilson, Bomb. Elmer, Bomb. Haultain, Bomb. W. Metheral, Driver Bray and Driver Patton. Qt.-Master Sergt. Snyder was present at the competition, but was ruled out of the Durham squad on account of only one staff sergeant being allowed on it. After the cup has been suitably inscribed it will be put on exhibition in the window of Mr. McNeil's clothing store.

The Daily Review.

THURSDAY, MARCH 17, 1887.

A. C. A.

MANY of our readers will remember with pleasure the Camp of the American Canoe Association at Stoney Lake in 1883, and will be glad to learn that they are to have a similiar opportunity for enjoyment afforded them next August.

On this occasion the organization will be somewhat different from that previously existing. The rapid growth of the A.C.A. having led to the formation of local divisional associations within the main body, a Northern Division is authorized. Peterborough, whose waters were the scene of the first A C. A. camp in Canada, and which has given a Commodore and a Rear Commodore, besides other officers to the main body, has been selected as the locality both for organizing the Division and holding its first camp.

The people of Peterborough should respond by a hearty welcome to our visitors and active support of the new organization. Apart from the very beneficial nature of the amusement, canoeing should be encouraged here because the construction of these graceful little crafts is one of our important local industries. The attraction of a number of strangers to visit us must also be of no small benefit to our town. From many different localities in Canada canoemen will flock here in August, and already many members from the States have promised to be present.

There should be a good attendance at the organization meeting on Friday evening, when all wishing to join will be welcome, and then there should be the same zeal in making all the necessary preparations that rendered the Stoney Lake camp in 1883 a success which is still remembered with pleasure by all who took part in it. The camp of 1877 should be made as successful and enjoyable.

THE Returning Officers say that the Conservative votes polled in the County of Ontario exceeded the Reform votes polled by more than a hundred. The Globe persists in asserting that there was a Reform majority of over two hundred and fifty polled in Ontario County. We must ask to be excused if we attach greater weight to the figures declared by the Returning Officers in their official capacity. Fortunately the ignorance of the Globe does not effect the result.

THE DANGER OF CHOLERA.

NEW YORK, March 16.—The Tribune says: "In spite of the fact that cholera has been raging in the Argentine Republic since last November, merchandise from the River Platte and Chili has been steadily brought into this port and distributed over the country in a thousand different directions with no attempt at precaution on the part of the quarantine officials. Now that the the winter is over, and such a safeguard as the frost gives can be depended upon for only a short time longer, shipping brokers, custom officials, longshoremen and others who are brought into direct personal contact with this merchandise from the cholera infected countries are alarmed over the inaction of the health officials. Even some of the importers who own the merchandise, but who do not run the risk of handling it, are feeling a lively interest in the question whether there is to be a quarantine established here this summer against the products of the River Platte. It is said some brokers whose business is to handle and inspect the stuff for importers have refused to perform their duty."

HISTORY OR FICTION.

The Ottawa Free Press speaks of the Mail as Sir John Macdonald's personal organ, from which we infer that the editor of the Free Press has been studying ancient history.—Toronto World (Indep)

Now is the time to order your Spring Mantle or Dolman. An extensive stock of cloths to select from at TURNBULL'S, all the new spring styles being now introduced.

ALL ABOUT A DEPOSIT.

A Case Involving the Ownership of a Candidate's Deposit.

KINGSTON, March 16.—The deposit money placed in the Returning Officer's hands for Mr. Shibley, the Liberal candidate for Addington, was garnished by a Toronto creditor. Mr. Britton, Q. C., claimed the money and the case was heard by Judge Wilkison last evening. The creditor's counsel claimed that when the money was put up it became Mr. Shibley's and was payable back to him and was therefore attachable. Mr. Britton demurred. He said he put up the money at his own risk with an unequivocal understanding that if it was forfeited by a non-securement of a sufficient number of votes the candidate would not be asked to recoup, but that if the money was not forfeited then it should be returned to him. He also contended that money in the hands of an officer of an election court was not liable to attachment. Further, if these grounds were untenable, the decision in the Queen's County, N. B., case was put in, and Mr. Britton alleged that he was not the agent of Mr. Shibley, and, consequently, the latter was not properly a candidate, and the money placed in the Returning Officer's hands was his.

The Judge reserved his decision, but said that he considered the money was Mr. Britton's, and that in placing it in the Returning Officer's hands he made no relinquishment of it except in so far as its forfeiture was concerned.

THE AMERICAN CARDINALS.

Another Brilliant Reception at Rome—The McGlynn Case.

NEW YORK, March 16.—A despatch to the World from Rome says:—"The American Cardinals held another reception in the Palace of the Propaganda yesterday. The attendance was very large. At the reception of the new French Cardinal, recently elevated to the purple, which was also held yesterday, ladies were denied admittance, as it is contrary to etiquette on such occasions. The fair sex, however, were again admitted to the reception of the American Cardinals, in deference to the wishes of Cardinal Gibbons who insisted that it was an American custom, and that as he was an American, their presence was desirable. The rule was, therefore, set aside for the time being, and the Cardinal's gallantry was rewarded by a perfect avalanche of ladies, who swarmed about him, and vied with each other in doing him honor.

The correspondence between Cardinal Simeoni and Archbishop Corrigan in relation to the McGlynn matter is still in progress. Persons who have access to the Vatican asserted yesterday that Dr. McGlynn would not come to Rome, and that Cardinal Gibbons would not espouse his cause before the Vatican. Should this prove true, the doctor's excommunication is not unlikely to follow soon.

OVER THE RANGE.

The Brave but Lawless Cowboy Who Died With His Boots On.

Charles Coulter, who went over the range last Sunday pierced by fourteen bullets fired by the citizens of Colorado, was well known throughout the west as one of the original cowboys and a desperate character when under the influence of liquor. He was a cowboy from infancy. He drove the first big herb of cattle up the Santa Fe trail in 1857, when cowboys were known as cow punchers, and did not include theological students and diplomats. Coulter, who was a fine specimen of manhood, was like all great characters in American history, a Missourian. He was six feet one inch in height and weighed 260 pounds. He is the fourth of his family to die with his rawhides on, although had he been an ordinary man he would have cashed in a good many years ago. His father and two brothers died on their feet, and the last male of the race is singularly a victim of consumption, and likely to die at any moment. Coulter began his career at 15 in the saddle chasing steers, and this was his occupation during life, except for about two years when he cast his fortunes with the James Younger crowd. He did not like the business of holding up stage coaches and railway trains, however, and returned to the cattle business. When sober he was a pleasant, inoffensive fellow, but when drunk was desperate to the extreme and would commit the rashest of deeds, which would cost other men their lives. He knew every foot of the country from the Missouri to the Montana ranges, and had many remarkable adventures.

On one occasion he became involved in a row in a Dodge City saloon, and fought thirteen men and got away without injury. During the fight two men were either killed or seriously wounded. In the row Coulter introduced what is known as the back-action move—knocking one man down and shooting another at the same time. This is done by striking a man in front with the stroke of a gun, and shooting one in the rear. After this row the friends of some of the men who was injured started out to kill Coulter, but failed to come up with him. For a year or two he was very quiet, and then sprang up at Wallace, by "rounding-up" the town and holding it for two days with four companions.

During this raid Coulter walked into a small eating saloon, frequented by railroad men, as a young consumptive was eating a "graveyard stew," as milk toast is called in that section. The young fellow was reclining against the wall and had raised a spoon to his mouth when Coulter shot it out of his hand. The young fellow turned to flee when Coulter called out to him to stop, and placing him near the wall made a complete profile of his body with bullets, grazing the skin half a dozen times.

On one occasion Coulter is said to have ridden 370 miles without leaving the saddle. He was a first-class cattle man, and was as brave as any who ever threw a lariat. Even after his body had been pierced with 14 bullets in the fatal fight on Sunday, he managed to empty two guns and wound two men.—Denver News.

A Big Sale.

KINGSTON, March 16.—Intimation has been received here that Mr. Peter McLaren, the lumber king, has disposed of his timber limits on the Missis-tapi and other rivers, together with his mill and lumber to Mr. Edwards, of Ottawa, for $900 000. It is thought the sale is caused by the ill health of Mr. and Mrs. McLaren.

THE CZAR.

The Danger he Escaped—Details of the Plot Against His Life.

LONDON, March 16.—The Russian Embassy in London has received despatches confirming the reports of the discovery of a plot to assassinate the Czar and the arrest of the ringleaders. These despatches say that no actual attempt was made to kill the Czar, as the plot had been discovered before he left the palace. The British Government has received despatches to the same effect from the British Ambassador at St. Petersburg. A despatch from St. Petersburg to the Daily News says:—"While the Czar was returning from a requiem service in the Cathedral of St. Peter and St. Paul a bomb attached to a cord was thrown in his direction. The intention was to tighten the string which was connected with the mechanism, and thus explode the bomb, but before it could be executed the criminal and a suspected accomplice were seized. It was found that they lived together in a lodging house in a suburb of the city. The police visited this house and discovered there a quantity of explosives and a number of revolutionary pamphlets. Over two hundred persons have already been arrested in connection with the affair, and domiciliary visits are being made throughout the city. The German police had warned the Russian authorities that an attempt was to be made against the Czar's life, but the latter had failed to trace the plotters."

DEADLY EXPLOSIVES.

A despatch from St. Petersburg to the Standard says that one of the six students arrested in connection with the plot carried a hollow book, containing a bottle filled with dynamite and poisoned bullets. Others had parcels and bags containing bombs. A woman was arrested who had a bomb concealed in her muff. The would-be assassin is of short stature and refuses to reply to any questions.

On Sunday morning the Czar had no suspicion of any danger whatever. He had been congratulated by General Gresser upon his continued safety. Both the Standard and Times confirm the Statement that the Czar took a different route from the one announced. The story that a bomb was thrown beneath the Czar's carriage appears to have emanted from Vienna. The thread of the narative is still somewhat obscure. St. Petersburg papers, even of Monday, give no account of the affair. The Czar cried on hearing of the danger which he had escaped. He did not learn the particulars until he arrived at the Gatschina Palace.

THE CONSTITUTIONAL PLOT.

VIENNA, March 16.—It has been ascertained that the recently discovered conspiracy of Russian land owners and tradesmen to overthrow the Czar's Government was very extensive, and included a number of military officers, and that it was chiefly on this ground that the Czar was averse to embarking in war.

LONDON, March 16.—The persons arrested in connection with the constitutional plot indignantly deny that they are in any way connected with the outrage and repudiate any idea of the conspiracy. Their motto is they say: "The people with the Czar or against the Czar." They have published a lithographic periodical, composed mainly of extracts from the workers of notable writers on constitutional law and political economy. The statues of the society obliged all members to join, at the signal of their chief, in doing their utmost to subvert the existing government and establish a constitutional government.

ANXIETY AT BERLIN.

BERLIN, March 16.—Politicians and diplomats here continue to feel the gravest anxiety over the attempt on the life of the Czar. This was purely Nihilistic. In St. Petersburg wholesale arrests continued. So far about one hundred persons have been arrested. Explosives have been found on about a dozen.

REPRESSIVE MEASURES.

Alsace-Lorraine to be Bent to the Will of the Germans.

STRASBURG, March 16.—During the discussion of the budget in the Provincial Committee, yesterday, Deputy Winterer severely criticised the existing and proposed repressive measures, and in behalf of all the protesting deputies declared that the recent elections were not affected by any foreign influences.

Herr Puttkamer replied that although the debate was raised in the absence of the principal representatives of the Government, Herr Winterer should not be altogether unanswered. The measures which the Government had in view were not open for criticism by the committee. Government officials were servants of the Emperor, not of the Provincial committee, and they would be supported by the Government in their task of effectually binding Alsace-Lorraine to Germany. The Government was not responsible for newspaper proposals. It was not the result of the election, but the spirit in which it had been conducted that induced the Government to resort to the adoption of the measures of which Herr Winterer complained. Those measures did not go further than was necessary to protect the Province from illegal agitation. They would be enforced without regard to their being liked or disliked. The Government was convinced that the time had arrived when it was necessary to adopt measures more severe than it had wished to adopt. The tendency to nullify the provisions of the Treaty of Frankfort had to be confronted, and measures had to be adopted which were calculated to fortify the constitutional position of the Provinces in a sense of welding them in closer cohesion with the rest of Germany.

Perils of Fishing.

GLOUCESTER, Mass., March 16.—Vessels arriving from the George's Banks report that a gale of great energy swept over the bank on March 11. It is feared much damage was done, as a large fleet of fishing vessels were on the banks. The St. George's bank's extend from Cape Cod, northeasterly to within about a hundred miles of Sable Island, and are resorted to by American cod fishers chiefly in winter.

C. P. R. Cable Road.

WINNIPEG, Man., March 16.—The Canadian Pacific Railway Company proposed erecting a cable road under some of the worst pots in the Rocky Mountains, to prevent interruption of the service by the snowslides.

FEARING AN OUTBREAK.

BUCHAREST, March 16.—The Bulgarian Regents, fearing an outbreak of hostilities, have divided Bulgaria into two military zones and appointed a commander for each zone, with virtually absolute powers. Tirnova has been fortified and garrisoned, and the Varna and Bourgas shore defences have been strengthened with artillery.

A NASTY ENEMY.

PARIS, March 16.—Gen Boulanger, in conversation with a friend, said:—"Lord Salisbury is a very nasty enemy. He seeks and finds opportunities to injure France, and tries to ruin her. The utmost forbearance is required on our side not to let ourselves be dragged by him into a quarrel with England."

DESIRE FOR PEACE.

BERLIN, March 16.—It is reported that Emperor William, on receiving the French General, Marquis d' Alsac, said:—"Tell your compatriots that there is no danger of war. So long as I live, I shall use all my influence to maintain peace. God will soon call me to Himself. I do not wish to leave my people a heritage of blood. Germany shares my desire for good relations with France."

ABSENCE FROM COURT.

DUBLIN, March 16.—In the Bankruptcy Court to-day, Father Keller, of Youghal, County Cork, was called to testify respecting his action as trustee under the Plan of Campaign. He was absent. Testimony was then given that a summons to appear had been served on the priest, that he refused to receive it, and that Mr. Harrington, who was present, took the summons and threw it out of the window.

HASTINGS.

SURGICAL OPERATIONS.—An eight year old son of Mr. A. Fleming of this village was operated on, on Sunday last for dropsy of the chest, by Dr O'Gorman, in company with Dr. Bogart, Campbellford. The little fellow is doing as well as can be expected. A young son of Mr. Wm. Hill was similarly operated on by Dr. O'Gorman a few weeks ago, and the lad is in a fair way for recovery.

HASTINGS CHEESE FACTORY.—A formal meeting of the patrons of this newly organized industry was held in the Coughlan House on Saturday evening, when the following officers were duly appointed, viz.:—John Collins, Pres.; R. Beavis, secretary; Jos. Carter, Jas. O'Reilly, jr., Thos. Myles and John M. Fife, Directors. Mr. John Coughlan's offer of 13c. per standard for the whey was accepted.

SALVATION ARMY.—A detachment of the Salvation Army from Peterborough opened fire on the corner of Bridge and Front sts. on Thursday evening of last week. After the battle had been in progress for a quarter of an hour reinforcements arrived from Campbellford, and for a time the shot and shell flew fast and furious, the thunder of the vocal artillery being aided by the rata-tat of the tambourine, and the incessant bum-bum of the bass drum. An adjournment was made to the old temperance hall, where the plan of the campaign was decided upon. Two lady picquets were detailed to open fire on the streets nightly until further orders.

LACROSSE MEETING.—A meeting of those interested in the Hastings Lacrosse Club was held at the Simpson House on Friday evening 11th inst., when the following officers were appointed. President, John Quigley; Hon. President, H. M. Fowlds; Vice President J. D. Cumming; Captain, F. Hill; Field Captain, T. Howard; Secretary, P. M. Howard; Treasurer, J. Douglass; Committee, J. B. Simpson, J. K. Wilson, F. Hill, T. Coad, H. W. Fowlds, A. Butler and W. Londerville. It was decided to have a concert about the middle of April, and the following committee was appointed to arrange for it: A. M. Paton, R. A. Edington, John M. Wilson, H. W. Fowlds and P. M. Howard.—Star.

The Daily Review.

THURSDAY, MARCH 17, 1887.

THE GHOULS AGAIN.

THE Ottawa correspondent of the independent Toronto World writing under date of March 14th says:—

"Telegrams were received here from several places in the North-West Territories to-day asking about Sir John's health, a report there being that he was dying. His friends here say it was started up there to influence the elections to-morrow. The Old Man was at the Council meeting to-day in the best of health."

This is an example of the dishonest means used by Mr. Blake's supporters to lure the electors over to their side by infamous falsehoods. So, too, in Algoma they deluged the constituency with fly sheets falsely claiming that Mr. Blake had obtained a parliamentary majority, though the Reform journals now have to admit that the Macdonald Administration has been sustained by a majority of at least twenty, an absurd under-estimation, but quite sufficient to show the gross dishonesty of the argument used by Reform canvassers that the Government had been defeated, and that the outlying constituencies would act prudently in bowing to the rising sun.

It may be observed how constantly this ghoulish eagerness for Sir John's death or bodily and mental incapacity, crops up in the electioneering tactics of certain of the Reformers. It shows what rancorous, murderous hatred they nurse in their hearts for a political rival, who is detested by them because he is loved and trusted by his fellow countrymen. It also shows how fully convinced are those who so indecently betray their eager desire for the death of the greatest Canadian statesman, that their only hope of filling his position lies in his removal from among us. Sir John must die like other men, but this eagerly displayed longing for his death is as indecent and heartless as would be openly expressed hopes by an heir for the speedy departure of the present incumbent. Such unnatural heirs not unfrequently find themselves disappointed in their anticipations when he whose place they covet is taken away, and their is every likelihood that these ghoulish politicians will find that it is not they who will inherit Sir. John's position, when he is lost to his lamenting fellow countrymen.

THE SCHOOLMASTER ABROAD.

THE London Advertiser and the Ottawa Free Press are both energetic organs of the Reform party and they are by no means particular by what weapons they assail their political opponents. Any blow, according to them, is fair, so they and other Reform organs are perpetually contradicting each other.

As to the returns of the Algoma election the London Advertiser of March 15th has the following billingsgate:—

"It is not hard to understand why the official return for Algoma should be held back in view of late developments. It was believed that by keeping secret the fact of Mr. Burk's election, and making it appear that Mr. Dawson was elected, the voters where elections are yet to be held would vote for the Government, upon the supposition that it would be sustained in any event. There is no dodge too contemptible for Sir John and his heelers to practice."

To this contemptible slander by this contemptible and ignorant scribbler we give as an antidote the following utterance of the Ottawa Free Press of the same date:—

"Those who wonder at the delay in obtaining complete returns from Algoma forget that the superficial area of Algoma is greater than the balance of Ontario which elects ninety-one members."

This is such an obvious explanation that the Advertiser must be either utterly ignorant of geography or maddened by disappointment at exclusion from office to have perpetrated such a vile and mendacious attack upon a statesman whom the people of Canada have again chosen as the foremost man in the Dominion and the guardian of their interests.

THE Ontario Government does not appear to be anxious to let the public know the statements it publishes in the official reports. Important documents were brought down some days ago, but they have not been sent out to the press. At any rate the REVIEW has not received them. The public accounts are necessary for a complete review of the Provincial Treasurer's statement and the debate on the finances, yet the accounts have not been received, although they were brought down several days ago. It would not be out of place for members who believe that the people should not be deprived of information to make enquiries in the House regarding this matter. [Since this was put in type the public accounts have been received, but other important documents are not yet to hand.]

WHEN during the Dominion election contest the Globe published a letter abusing Sir Charles Tupper and professing to be signed "A Tory M. P." we expressed our conviction that it was a forgery. The Globe gave one of its usual insolent denials, but it is not proved that we were correct. Whether the Globe committed the forgery or only accepted it from one of its friends is not yet ascertained, but the refusal of the Globe to publish the denial of Mr Farrow to whom the fraudulent document was attributed by the gang, deepens the suspicion of its complicity.

THE Ottawa Free Press has been stealing another official document prepared for presentation to Parliament and has published an epitome of it. It calls thieving journalistic enterprise.

ONTARIO LEGISLATURE

THE FIRST SESSION OF THE SIXTH PROVINCIAL PARLIAMENT.

A Budget Brought Down—A Deficit Last Year and Another This—The Mythical Surplus Decreasing—The Debate.

TUESDAY, March 15.—A number of petitions were presented and several bills introduced.

REVISED STATUTES.

The bills respecting the revised statutes was read a second time and referred to a large special committee.

THE BUDGET.

Mr. A. M. Ross, Provincial Treasurer, gave a detailed statement of the receipts for 1886, showing the total receipts were $3,148,660.01, of which $ 475,883.90 was received from the Dominion, $1238,842.57 was borrowed and $715,797.73 was from woods and forests. The total ordinary receipts were $100,000 in excess of the estimates or with exceptional receipts $122,000. The price of annuities had improved, and from the sale of $12,300 forty year annuites they had received $238,842, or a basis of four per cent. The expenditure for 1886 was $3,181,709. On several heads there was a less expenditure than had been estimated, and the reduction on criminal justice indicated an era of prosperity. On colonization roads there was an over-expenditure of $15,000. Taking the ordinary receipts and expenditure he claimed a surplus of $73,683, but there was, on the transactions of the year, an over-expenditure of $33,049. A statement of assets was given, which, by counting trust funds and other devices, made a total of $7,054,456.83. The statement of liabilities presently payable, which din not include railway certificates or annuities, showed a total of $374,117.05, and a surplus of assets over liabilities of $6,680,-339,78 was claimed. The surplus had, the Treasurer said, only been trenched upon to the extent of $85,757 since last year. No progress had been made in the settlement of the accounts with the Dominion. A meeting had been proposed, but the Treasurer of Quebec had written that he could not attend. The recast which had been made was an abstract of the amounts provided for by the Act of 1884, but he contended that the amount would be found to be larger. He argued that the system of Railways being controlled by the Dominion worked to the disadvantage of Ontario. The estimated receipts for 1887 amounted to $2,788,125.22. He expected an increase of receipts from woods and forests. By reference to the estimates of expenditure it would be seen that there was an estimated defeciency of $241,-583, but the estimates were so liberally made that it was not expected that the deficit would be more than about $33,000. Fortunately they had a surplus to draw on for occasional shortages.

MR. CREIGHTON regretted that the accounts between the Dominion and Ontario and Quebec had not been settled, as municipalities were eagerly looking for a settlement. Referring to the statement of assets he pointed out that the common school fund, held in trust by the Dominion, about a million dollars, was not an asset, as the principal could never be touched. The sums collected on the sale of grammar school lands, though in the hands of the Province, must be paid over to the Dominion on a final settlement. Thus there was $3,111,349 which ought to be deducted from the sums supposed to be in the hands of the Dominion. He showed the fallacy of taking the drainage debenture statements as an asset. As to drainage assessments, while the Government was giving away the money without the consent of the House, they had not made any reduction in the statement for the amounts written off. In 1884 $34,764 was written off, but the assets were reduced only $18,079, exactly the amount paid by municipalities. The Government took credit for these drainage assessments, although they were not presently payable, but refused to debit the Province with liabilities because they were not presently payable. The business-like way would be to give a statement of the present value of bookassets and liabilities. A statement brought down showed that the railway liability was $2,091,264. Adding this amount to the $2,111,349 previously explained, they found that $4,202,613 should be deducted from the surplus claimed, which left $2,477,-725 supposed to be the surplus, or about $400,000 less than the $2,800,000 which the Dominion placed to the credit of the Province a couple of years ago. But for this relief there would have been a deficit of about $400,000. Since 1880, and for some years before, they had been running behind instead of increasing the suplus. In 1883 the expenditure exceeded the receipts by $448,-927; in 1884 the deficit was $386,120; in 1885 there was a sale of timber and the deficit was only $40,192; Last year, although the Dominion Government was paying us $214,414, and although we got $147,471 from bonuses on timber sales, and although we sold annuities to the extent of $238,842, the deficit was $33,049. The sums received for annuities were apparently reducing the discrepancy between assets and liabilities; but they were only creating new liabilities. The Treasurer had during the last three years borrowed over $700,000 by means of annuities. This was an easy way of wiping off the debts of the Province. The Province would have to pay in the course of 40 years $1,588,000 on account of these annuities. While they were getting behind year by year they were at the same time consuming the territorial capital of the Province. They were selling their property year by year and using it on current account. This must come to an end. The Government claimed that they were applying the money thus obtained to public works and buildings. But they received last year from territorial resources and other extraordinary revenue $1,160,162, while they had expended on capital account only $848,324. Any business man who was compelled to sell part of his property every year to meet ordinary expenditure would take steps to keep himself from bankruptcy. Upon the Government rested the responsibility of retaining the equilibrium between receipts and expenditure, but instead they were increasing the expenditure, the estimates for this year being $210,000 more than the expenditure last year. They saw that the expenditure exceeded the income, yet they proposed no improvement, except a raid on the Dominion treasury sometimes hinted at. Since the Mowat Government came into office, in 1873, there had been two increases in the the subsidy from the Dominion amounting to over $160,000 a year. Complaint was made of the railway grant made to Quebec in 1884, but Mr. Blake and the Reformers had voted for a resolution condemning the Dominion Government for not giving more. The Dominion treasury was not the place the Province should look to for relief, but the Government ought to bring the receipts and expenditure into line. The settlers did not get the full benefit of the colonization road money, as it was spent with an eye to the benefit of the Government.

MR. BALFOUR defended the Government, arguing that there was a large surplus and that they were economical.

MR. H. E. CLARKE applied mercantile rules to a statement of the assets and liabilities. Applying these rules to the balance sheet, the total value of Crown lands may be estimated at say twenty millions in 1872. Adding cash in treasury and Dominion Trust Funds, the total assets of the Province which Sandfield Macdonald bequeathed the Government, was about twenty-nine millions. There were no liabilities then. Since then ten millions' worth of Crown lands have been sold. The cash and trust funds to-day, added to the other ten millions of Crown lands, gives a total asset of sixteen millions odd in 1886 as against twenty-nine millions in 1872. The Government must show where this money has gone

The debate was continued by Messrs. Smith, Clancy, Chamberlain and Wood, and the House adjourned at 10.45 o'clock.

The Value of Diamonds.

It is curious to note the fluctuations in the value of diamonds. About three hundred years ago they were quoted at $225 a carat. Fifty years lated we find them selling at $105 a carat. A hundred and fifty years later the supply from Brazil had increased so largely that one carat stones sold for $40, and shortly afterwards at $4. From this point they rallied to $31 per carat at the time of the French Revolution; then, under the pressure of the supply from exiled French noblemen, they fell again to $20. During the first 60 or 70 years of this century they rose steadily, and 20 years ago they were quoted at about $100 a carat. Now, Henry D. Morse of Boston gives the following prices of diamonds at the present time:

Stones averaging one-half carat each, $60 a carat.

Stones averaging three-quarters carat each, $80 per carat.

Stones averaging one carat each, $100 per carat.

Stones averaging one and a quarter carats each, $110 per carat.

Stones averaging one and a half carats each, $125 per carat.

Stones averaging one and three-quarters carats each, $145 per carat.

Stones averaging two carats each, $175 per carat.

In other words, the value of the gem increases in the geometrical ratio of its weight. Four diamonds weighing together two carats are worth $120, but one diamond weighing just as much is worth $350. Stones weighing over two carats are about the same price per carat as two-carat stones, they should be dearer, but they are not, simply because the demand for them is limited. If the demand for diamonds was as imperative as the demand for flour and beef, the geometrical ratio would again come into play, and five-carat stones would be valued in the thousands.

It is not likely that the diamond of moderate size will ever be much lower in valuthan it is now. In the words of a popular writer; "The diamond is the very essence of property. It is riches condensed; too small to be see by the midnight burglar; too quickly carried away to be wrested from the exile or the outlaw."

Enjoy Life.

SHIRLEY CARSTONE

By ELIZA ARCHARD.

Copyrighted by American Press Association.

From that night she never could endure the sight of her husband. He wandered about as one accursed. Her side of the story got abroad. Philip never told his side, he was as proud as Julius Cæsar.

His wife hated him with a steady hate. It was surprising that a creature so shallow and fickle could cherish a passion so deep and constant. Feelings are often easy enough to develop, though, when they are on the wrong side.

Dumoray was at heart of a chivalrous, noble nature. He had used violence toward a woman, his own wife. That thought never left him, night or day. He hated himself. Could he do nothing to make amends? Nothing. He might live to be a hundred years old, and make every hour a period of expiation, but he could never be the same in his own eyes again. That thought was the most agonizing. A noble soul always cares more for its own respect than for the respect of others.

Myra could easily have had a separation. She did not seem to care for it, however.

He mentioned it to her.

"You want to get rid of me, now that you have killed me, do you?" she said, querulously.

"God knows I do not, Myra," he said. "If there was anything that would make things right God knows I would do it."

"There is nothing that will make things right. I hate you! Look what you have brought me to. And you would marry me. What do you bring all those children in here for? You do it to vex me. You know I hate children. There, I am going off again. Give me my drops and go away."

He looked at her. Was she losing her mind? She caught the thought in his brain, with a mental keenness she had never shown before her illness.

"Yes, I'm going crazy, and you have made me so. Give me my drops, I tell you, and go away."

He obeyed. He went into the corridor, and walked the floor. He sent for the family physician, and asked him anxious questions. The family physician answered shortly:

"Your wife is an opium eater."

What a life was in store for these two!

The high born soul needs only one lesson. Philip had had his lesson. He was never the same again, from the night he had struck his wife. He became the gentlest, most patient of men. His boys were growing to be bright, intelligent little creatures. He devoted himself to them. He was in place of a mother to the bereft infants. All the happiness of his life he found with them.

By degrees his wife quite lost her mind. He would not put the insane woman away in an asylum. He accepted the care of her as part of his punishment. He tended her wants and humored every whim of the poor, crazed creature. She retained still gleams of recollection. The most vivid was her hatred of Philip. She never forgot that in her most demented moments. She knew him and her boys. For the children in her sane days she had had little fondness. Now one of the gleams of remembrance that was left her told her Philip loved them. Therefore she hated them. Her insane fancies took shape in one intense idea—revenge on Philip Dumoray.

She became a cunning, dangerous lunatic. Philip had her watched night and day. He kept himself away from her. The sight of him irritated her uncontrollably.

He slept in the room alone with his boys. He would not permit them in care of another at night, lest harm should come to them from their insane mother. It was touching to see how he tended them and how much they were to him. From caring so constantly for these helpless ones he came to care for others, too, and think of them. He lost himself in self forgetfulness and sweet thoughtfulness for others, this self willed, fiery tempered youth who had always had his own way.

Time glides on alike to the happy and miserable. What cares Time? He will not hold his glass back to give one hour more of youth to a Cleopatra. He will not hasten it to shorten by so much as one second the torment of a martyr in flames.

Philip Dumoray's boys were 4 years old. All the tenderness of his powerful nature went out to them. They slept in a little bed beside his own. He hung over them long and fondly one night, studying each child-feature, listening to their softly falling baby breath. How lovely they were, lying there in their white bed! The rosy faces were flushed with sleep, the milk white baby arms were flung above their heads. The rings of bright hair hung damp and warm about their pretty brows.

"God bless them!" murmured Philip.

He went to his couch and was shortly in a deep slumber. He had not slept so soundly for years, he recalled afterwards.

How long he had been asleep he did not know. He was suddenly awakened with an awful horror at his throat. He only knew something was strangling him, something was being pressed steadily down upon his mouth and nose. He threw his arms convulsively upward. His hands caught a human form, which glided from his grasp. With a last effort he threw the thing, whatever it was, from his face. It was a pillow.

He tried to spring to his feet but fell back, weak and helpless. He saw his wife gliding like a spirit out of the low window that opened on the veranda. How could he see her in the darkness? What was that light?

Flame and smoke burst in through the door from the hallway. The flame licked the ceiling and lapped the door. The smoke spread through the room. He was suffocating again.

Great God! His boys! His darlings!

With the last effort he could make in that desperate moment, he staggered toward their beds, and fell across it with open, empty arms.

The children were gone!

The Beneficence of Alcohol.

Judge—In your drunken fury you drew your pistol and dangerously wounded an unoffending man.

Cowboy—Yes, jedge; that's about the size of it.

Judge—Whiskey has got you into serious trouble. If it had not been for whisky, you would not now be under arrest.

Cowboy—That's where you're a little off, jedge. If I had been sober, I'd have killed him deader than a door nail, instead of only cripplin' him up a little.

THE DISAPPOINTED FISHERMAN.

Once on a time a fisherman
Set out to catch some fish;
He had a boat and tackle, all
As fine as one could wish;
But he couldn't get a nibble, though,
As plainly he could see,
The youngster on the other shore
Fished quite successfully.

This fisherman was long and lank,
And scant his flowing hair;
He wore a broad-rimmed beaver hat
Of rugged looks and rare;
Broad stripes bedecked his pantaloons
Of white and reddish hue,
And a starry waistcoat glittered
'Neath a cut-away of blue.

Full soon he shouted, "Sonny, I
Would like to catch some fish;
I'll paddle over 'side o' you
If it's not against your wish,
And use your bait and tackle, which O' course you will allow."
"Not much," replied the youngster, "If
You do there'll be a row,

For this is private property,
As very well you know;
And we'll you know the reason I
Intend to keep it so.
You try to keep your family
From buying fish of me,
So you needn't get excited when
I talk of rights, d'ye see?

But say, old man, buy these, and say
You caught 'em anywhere—
Far better than to fish all day
For nothing over there.
Of course, you don't mind lying—
For folks that starts 'll lie;
Besides than want such fine, fresh fish,
Your folks would rather buy."

"G'lang," replies the old un, as His boat the water cleaves,
"Keep off," returns the youngster,
Smartly rolling up his sleeves,
"If I can't stop you, I'll call dad—
A bigger man than you—
But recollect that I, myself,
Can spar a little, too."

The fisherman backed water, a
Mad fisherman was he;
And as he paddled homeward, cried
"You'll hear again from me."
And so he did hear this fell speech:
"Bold youth, pray recollect,
Hence never more my folks eat fish"—
Or words to that effect.

NEWS NOTES.

Severe snowstorms prevailed throughout England on Saturday.

Mr. W. E. Sanford, of Hamilton, has been called to the Senate.

A large proportion of London, Eng., was enveloped in almost total darkness at noon on Tuesday.

It appears that the police of St Petersburg were forewarned of the intended attack on the Czar last Sunday.

The Dominion Board of Appraisers will shortly be reorganized in consequence of the death of the late Mr. Frazer.

Cardinal Manning has endorsed the policy advocated by Cardinal Gibbons toward the Knights of Labor.

The Duchess of Otranto committed suicide in Paris on Tuesday, while insane with grief at the recent death of her husband.

The Pope will send Mgr. Galimberti to Berlin with an authograph letter congratulating Emperor William upon the anniversary of his birthday.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla, being highly concentrated, requires smaller doses, and is more effective, than any other blood medicine. It is the cheapest because the best. Quality and quantity should be considered.

A writ for libel at the instance of Mr. John Maclay, late register of the County of Bruce, claiming $40,000 from the County Council of Bruce, was issued at Osgoode Hall on Monday.

A frame building at Bracebridge was destroyed by fire on Tuesday morning, the two occupants, Mr. Hugh Dennison and his wife, being burned to death.

Chief Secretary Balfour says Captain Plunkett, a magistrate of Youghal, was justified in ordering the police to fire on the populace if they were attacked.

"Words fail to express my gratitude," says Mr. Selby Carter, of Nashville, Tenn., "for the benefits derived from Ayer's Sarsaparilla. My system was filled with scrofula, blotches, ulcers, and mattery sores, all over my body." Mr. Carter was entirely cured by Ayer's Sarsaparilla, 8 months ago, and has had no return of the scrofulous symptoms.

The Department of Marine on Tuesday completed the charter for a fast schooner, to be added to the fleet of Dominion cruisers for the protection of the fisheries next summer.

The three charges of bribery arise out of the bye-election for the House of Commons in Haldimand last September were tried at the assizes at Cayuga on Monday, all the defendants being acquitted.

IF anything clogs the waste-pipes in the house we become alarmed, for sewer-gas is apt to generate disease. The children, then, are removed to their grand-parent's, or kept out of doors as much as possible, until the defect is remedied. But the waste-pipes of the human system are allowed to clog, and the sufferer, who cannot get away from the poison, becomes unfit for work or pleasure. In such cases Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Purgative Pellets will gently remove the cause, and the effect will vanish of itself. By druggists.

Forewarned

of danger by the condition of your blood, as shown in pimples, blotches, boils, or discolorations of the skin; or by a feeling of languor, induced, perhaps, by inactivity of the stomach, liver, and kidneys, you should take Ayer's Sarsaparilla. It will renew and invigorate your blood, and cause the vital organs to properly perform their functions. If you suffer from

Rheumatism,

or Neuralgia, a few bottles of Ayer's Sarsaparilla will relieve and cure you. Alice Kendall, 218 Tremont st., Boston, Mass., writes: "I have been troubled with Neuralgia, pain in the side, and weakness, and have found greater relief from Ayer's Sarsaparilla than from any other remedy." J. C. Tolman, 336 Merrimack st., Lowell, Mass., writes: "In no other remedy have I ever found such a happy relief from Rheumatism as in with Ayer's Sarsaparilla, there need be no fear of Dyspepsia, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Salt Rheum, Tetter, Eczema, Catarrh, Liver troubles, or any of the diseases arising from Scrofulous taints in the blood. Geo. Garwood, Big Springs, Ohio, writes: "Ayer's Sarsaparilla has been used in my family for a number of years. I was a constant sufferer from

Dyspepsia,

but Ayer's Sarsaparilla effected a permanent cure. Seven years ago my wife was troubled with Goitre: two bottles of Ayer's Sarsaparilla cured her, and she has never had any return of the disease. I regard this preparation as the best medicine in use for the blood." B. Barnard Wair, 75 Adams st., Lynn, Mass., writes: "For many years I suffered terribly from Indigestion, Dyspepsia, and Scrofula. Almost hopeless, I took Ayer's Sar-

Mr. J. W. Flavelle, of this town, has opened a flour and feed store on Front street, Toronto. His business in Peterborough will be cotinued as usual.

Male Choir Wanted.

All men who can sing are invited to help in taking charge of the music for the mass meeting in the Opera House on Saturday evening. The choir will will meet on the stage at 7.30 o'clock.

Painful Accident.

A young man named Flack suffered a painful accident in Messrs. Kincaid & McWilliam's planing mill on Tuesday. He was caught by a bandsaw on the back of his neck and escaped only after a bad gash had been inflicted.

Bulls and Stallions.

The annual exhibition of bulls and stallions under the auspices of the West Peterborough Agriculture Society will be held on Saturday, April 30th, in the society's grounds, Peterborough. A fine prize list has been offered.

Prohibition.

A Young Men's Prohibition Club has been organized with a fair sized membership. Mr. Bannel Sawyer is President, Mr. Wm. Yelland, 1st Vice-President; Mr. J. Carlisle, 2nd Vice-President; Mr. Henry Rossiter, Secretary-Treasurer.

The Men's Mass Meeting.

Messrs. Hebbon, Stead and Dunnett, a band of singers from Hamilton, will conduct a novel meeting for men only in the Opera House on Saturday evening. It is in connection with the Young Men's Christian Association. They are likely to draw a large crowd.

St. Patrick's Day.

The teachers and pupils of the George Street Sunday School will be "At Home" in their school room, which will be handsomely decorated, to welcome their friends on Thursday evening, March 17th. Light refreshments will be served and an excellent programme rendered. Call and spend a social hour with us. Tickets 25 cents.

EVERYBODY is surprised and pleased at the quality of the 4 button Kid Glove TURNBULL is selling at 50 cents a pair. All the new gray shades in the popular Alexander make now in stock.

Preparing for Summer Sports.

A meeting of the members of the Cricket, Bicycle, Baseball, Lawn Tennis, Football, Snowshoe and Toboggan clubs, forming the Peterborough Amateur Athletic Association, will be held in the rooms over Mr. Stethem's hardware store on Thursday evening, 17th instant, at half past seven o'clock sharp, for the election of officers and striking the committees of the several clubs for the ensuing year. All interested in any of the above sports are requested to attend, as success depends on hearty co-operation.

Curling.

The curling match between Peterborough and Lakefield on Wednesday, resulting in a win for Peterborough as follows:—

GRAY Dress Goods are all the rage this season. You can have your choice of eight shades in thirteen different qualities at TURNBULL'S. Also Ball Trimming, Hercules Braid and Buttons to match. Miss Morgan, our dressmaker, leads the fashion in dressmaking. All her work turned out promptly.

IRELAND'S PATRON SAINT.

A St Patrick's Day Sermon in St. Peter's Cathedral.

St. Peter's Cathedral was filled at the 10 o'clock mass to-day in honor of St. Patrick. After performing the usual service the Rev. P. Conway delivered a sermon appropriate to the occasion. He took his text from the last verse of the 67th Psalm.

In commencing he spoke of the various ways in which God gave strength to his people. Sometimes it was given by trial, suffering and bereavement. God had always given his strength to his people in the hour of need. Noah was preserved from the destroying waters, Israel was taken with safety from the land of bondage, and Christianity was preserved in its infancy through persecutions for 300 years.

Towards the close of the 4th century Rome was mistress of the world. Almost every civilized nation had passed under its yoke. Scarcely had the din of war ceased and the glad tidings of peace were heard, than the gospel of light was preached throughout the empire. A little isle to the west of Europe the gospel had not yet reached. God was wonderful in his saints. St. Patrick, led captive to Ireland, was but being providentially prepared for his mission. He would not dwell on St. Patrick's career as the people were well acquainted with it; but he would mention a few of the characters of Ireland's patron saints. As all of the saints had special virtues so had St. Patrick. The virtue he gave example of in his life was a safeguard to the people in after times in passing through the firey crucible and terrible ordeal for a term of 10 centuries. His chief virtue was penance. The preacher gave instances of the remarkable things done by St. Patrick in bringing his body into subjection. Though it was pretty certain that he had never committed a mortal sin the saint never ceased doing pennance for his trifling shortcomings and imperfections. St. Patrick was a man of prayer and humility. Though he was a noble man he always characterized himself as a "poor, ignorant, sinful man." He was zealous in the salvation of souls, as was exampled by his whole career. It was a notable fact—and one of interest—that while in every other pagan land on the introduction of Christianity persecution followed, in Ireland the faith was received with open arms. The moral code of Ireland, he reasoned, must have been nearer the Divine, and the Irish system of philosophy must have been higher than in any other pagan land. The doctrines taught by St. Patrick were a great strength to the people. He taught devotion to the visible head of the church, and through all trials the Irish had ever been faithful. He taught devotion to the Blessed Virgin, and the continued devotion to the Blessed Mother was what made the Irish women the best women on earth. Indeed this was an admitted fact.

The distinguished Dr. Burns, of Hamilton, who spoke here recently, had said to the preacher that in his opinion it was the devotion of the Irish women to the Holy Mother which made them the purest women which the sun of God shines on. St. Patrick taught the doctrine of the middle state and still the Irish remembered the departed in the same way as they did when St. Patrick lived. He taught love and confidence between priest and people and it had yet to be recorded where the people had been unfaithful to priest or priest to people. He urged them to continue in the faith in the future as they had in the past, and asked their prayers that Ireland be set free from boudage and persecution. All they asked was that the same rights be given to Ireland that Canada enjoys.

COMPETENT judges say TURNBULL'S is the right house to buy boys' and youth's ready made Clothing. He gives you new styles, low prices and good quality combined.

Canton Militant.

A meeting of the members of Mount Hebron Encampment was held on Wednesday evening for the purpose of organizing a Canton Militant. Fair progress was made. It is quite probable that the branch will be in working order before the meeting of the Grand Lodge and Grand Encampment next August.

Arrived.

The "Hamilton Helpers," Messrs Habdon, Stead and Dunnett, who are to conduct the temperance revival for the first week, arrived from Norwood this morning. Mr. W. W. Buchanan, Dominion Councillor R. T. of T., came up from Norwood with them and passed through to Whitby, where he speakes this evening. The Helpers will hold their first meeting to-morrow evening at 7.30 o'clock in the lecture room of the Georga Street Methodist Church.

"Our Regiment."

The Opera House was crowded last evening to see the performance of the military comedy "Our Regiment," by the McDowell Comedy Company. Mr. and Mrs. McDowell have always been favorites in Kingston, and it was quite evident from the rounds of applause with which they were received last night they have lost none of their popularity. "Our Regiment" is a military comedy throughout, and is full and wit. Mr. McDowell, as Guy Warrener, Lieutenant in the Eighth Lancers, captured the audience with his empty-headed sayings, fully representing the character he assumed. Miss Fanny Reeves' representation of Enid Thurston, from Jamaca, was excellent, her movements being very graceful. The other characters were well assumed.—Kingston, Ont., Daily News, Oct. 23, 1886.

The March style of Domestic Patterns is now out. All the new patterns in stock at Turnbull's.

Murderous Burglars.

NEW YORK, March 15.—The residence of Mr. Lyman Weeks, on DeKalb avenue, Brooklyn, was entered by burglars at midnight. Mr. Weeks was shot and killed by the burglars.

The Railroad Accident.

BOSTON, March 16.—Owing to duplication and mis-spelling of names, it is now believed that the reports of the number of persons killed in Monday's accident have been considerably over estimated. Up to noon to day, Dr. Draper had signed twenty-one death certificates and Dr. Harris three, making the entire death total up to noon 24.

Capital Punishment Abolished.

AUGUSTA, Me., March 16.—The repeal of the capital punishment law has been effectual and imprisonment for life is substituted for death in all cases of murder in the first degree. Such convicts, however, are to be kept in close confinement, away from all associations, and no pardoning power is left to the governor and council, unless the convict is proved innocent.

Cutting's New Role.

NEW ORLEANS, La., March 16.—A. K. Cutting, who came near getting Mexico and the United States to fighting, has turned up here as an applicant for a job of typesetting. He says he has been obliged by circumstances to give up for the present the idea of organizing a filibustering expedition against Mexico, but hopes to carry out the plan some time. He would also like to get some one to back him as a lecturer.

Sunday Traffic Stopped.

BOSTON, March 16.—The Connecticut legislature has passed and Gov. Lounsbury has signed a bill restricting railroad traffic in the State on Sunday. It goes into effect next June. It forbids the running of trains for any purpose between 10.30 a. m. and 3 p. m. except in cases of urgent necessity. Before 10.30 a. m. and after 3. p. the only trains permitted are mail trains and such other trains as may be authorized by the commissioners, if it shall appear that they are required by the public necessity or for the preservation of freight.

What Tobacco Costs One Nation.

The American Grocer makes a curious calculation as to what it costs to smoke. Basing its calculation on revenue returns it shows that this country pays every year for cigars and cigarettes $186,500,000 and $20,000,000 for tobacco smoked in pipes. To this it adds the cost of chewing tobocco $50,000,000, bringing the entire tobacco bill of the country for the year up to $256,500,000. The total loss from fires in the United States last year was $120,000,000, so that our tobacco costs us more than twice as much as all our fires, great conflagration included.—Brooklyn Eagle.

Returns From the North-West.

WINNIPEG, March 16.—Complete returns of the territorial elections are not yet to hand. Mr. Davis still leads in Alberta, anywhere between fifteen and one hundred, and is probably safely elected. Mr. Davin's majority in West Assiniboia is about 300, there being two or three polls to hear from. At Wood Mountain he only polled one vote to his opponent's 50. There was a big celebration over his victory at Regina last night. Mr. Perley's majority in Eastern Assiniboia will not be far from 500. Of Saskatchewan little more is known than last night. Mr. McDowell's present majority is about 100, and will probably be increased. A number of Eastern Canadian politicians, who took part in the territorial campaign, returned to the city to-night.

Two Girl Tramps.

ST. PAUN, Minn., March 16.—Two children wandered into Windom, Minnesota, Sunday evening and gave their names as Charlie and Bertie Byers, of Rochester, N. Y. Yesterday it was discovered that they were girls named Lillie Davies and Kate Leeker, aged 14 and 16 years. They were born in Lindsay, Ont., and on the death of their parents were taken to Rochester by their brother, W. A. Byers, of Calgary, Northwest Territories. Wearying of eastern life they started without money to join their brother. After several vain attempts to get away they exchanged their attire for that of boys. They travelled on foot or in box cars with tramps, encountered all imaginable dangers and finally wandered into Windom depot. Their friends have been notified.

System of Shorthand.

Shorthand was known to the Greeks and the Romans in a limited degree. From the decline of the Roman Empire till 1588, when Bright published the first system of shorthand in England, little progress was made. Bales' "Brachygraphy" followed next (1590.) These two systems were merely collections of arbitrary marks for certain words. The theory of shorthand dates from the alphabet of Willis (1602), who describes his system as "spelling characterie," and those preceding as "verbal characterie." After Willis the principal systems have been:—Rich (1654), Mason (1672), Gurney (1740), Angel (1758), Byron (1767), Macaulay (1780), Mayor (1780), Taylor (1786), Clive (1810) Lewis (1812), Harding (1823), Most (1833). In 1837 Phonography (spelling by sound) was invented by Isaac Pitman, of Bath.

THE "NO POPERY" CRY.

Mr. Meredith Explains His Position as "One Law for All."

In the course of the debate on the budget in the Provincial Legislature Mr. Meredith is reported as having spoken as follows with reference to what is now known as the "No Popery" cry:—

"In reply to the hon. member for Prescott, he would repeat the statement he had made on a former occasion, viz., that the Government owe their position not to an endorsation of their policy but to the fulminations of a Church in their interest. What was the declaration of the hon. member himself? Two years ago he was a member of the Conservative party, and now he declared that the reason he left that party was because of the raising of the "No Popery" cry. Yet that hon. gentleman said on the floor of the House that that cry had nothing to do with the elections in the eastern part of the province; while he is himself a monument that that cry brought him into the House. He (Mr. Meredith) repeated that he never sought to raise any cry of race or creed. He had never sought to raise any such cry, and the leader of the Government and his organ unfairly tried to fasten on the Conservative party a cry such as that. If the statement that there should be one law for the whole people was raising the "No Popery" cry, then he had to plead guilty to raising that cry. Then Mr. McCarthy's speeches in Haldimand were referred to, but he denied that in an speech by Mr. McCarthy in that county was there a single attack made on the Roman Catholic Church or religion. He (Mr. Meredith) was prepared to give to the Roman Catholic people all the rights which he enjoyed as a Protestant, but he would not give them one iota more than he possessed himself. There was nothing of "No Popery" in that. He would be content that every member of the Cabinet should be of the Roman Catholic faith, but he would not consent that any office or seat in the House or in the Cabinet should be held by any man because he belonged to that faith. If it would be to seal his political doom to declare that those were the principles on which public affairs should be conducted, then he was prepared to submit to it. It was dishonest to say that any attack had been made on the Separate schools. Hon. gentlemen knew that that Legislature had not the power to interfere with the Separate schools, even if they had the will. All that had been urged, even by the new spaper which hon. gentlemen were so ready in denouncing, was that there should be no interference with the fundamental principle that there were national schools, and that any d parture from them should be by the free choice of Roman Catholics. It would have been well if all the young could have been educated under the one school system; but as that had been departed from and the Separate schools had been guaranteed, he would not be one to attack them. If to say that the support of the Separate schools should be a free choice, then he had to plead guilty of crying "No Popery." With regard to the Bible in the schools he maintained that there is no reason why the Holy Scriptures should not be put in the hands of the children of the Province of Ontario. In this day of doubt, when the foundations of the Christian religion were being assailed, it was a dangerous thing to lend any color to the assertion that there is a single statement in the Bible which could not be put into the hands of every child. If into the hands of those who are opposed to the Christian religion and deny the inspiration of the Scriptures there had been given any power and strength, then the responsibility would rest with the hon. gentlemen opposite.

ONTARIO LEGISLATURE

THE FIRST SESSION OF THE SIXTH PROVINCIAL PARLIAMENT.

Several Returns Wanted—County Councillors as Justices of the Peace—The Financial Debate Concluded.

WEDNESDAY, March 16.—Several returns were presented and two bills introduced.

SCHOOLS IN RUSSEL AND PRESCOTT.

Mr. EVANTUREL moved for copies of correspondence regarding schools in the French settlements in Russell and Prescott, and copies of reports respecting difficulties between English and French settlers in L'Orignal, or upon the propriety of establishing a Protestant separate school.

REGIOPOLIS COLLEGE.

Mr. MEREDITH moved for a return showing the agreement regarding the building known as Regiopolis College in Kingston, and the amount expended on it for repairs and improvements. He said an agreement binging the Province to an expenditure on capital account should have first been sanctioned by the House.

DISTRESS FOR RENT.

Mr. MOWAT said that the Government would bring in a bill or announce their policy on distress for rent, and the order for the second reading of Mr. O'Connor's bill stood over.

JUSTICES OF PEACE,

Mr. CLARKE Wellington, moved the second reading of the bill providing that all members of County Councils should be Justices of the peace.

Mr. MOWAT objected to the bill, but had no objection to the matter being discussed in th Municipal Committee. He did not think the County Councillors had as a rule the necesseary qualifications for justices of the peace.

Mr. MEREDITH objected to the system of sending bills to the Municipal Committee when the Government had decided that they could not pass. He thought County Councillors compared favorably with some whom the Government had appointed justices of the peace, and of the bill was adopted people could appoint persons favorable to the Scott Act in districts where it was in force.

The bill was read a second time.

THE BUDGET.

Mr. AWREY resumed the debate on the budget. He defended the increase in expenditure on the ground that the number of schools and mechanics' institutes had increased.

Mr. BIGGAR asked if the Government had the surplus they claimed, why was it they had run into debt?

Mr. WATERS claimed that the Government had the support of many Conservatives as well as Reformers.

Mr. WYLIE attributed the Government's success in the elections to the gerrymander and to the umbrage taken by some of the French constituencies to the course of a section of the press.

Mr. PACAUD said the result of the election in West Essex was an answer to the attacks made on him He gave some attention to the Mail, and said he would not discuss the financial question.

Mr. MARTER said that Algoma did not receive a fair share of colonization road money, and it did not get the full benefit of the money spent, as it was expended with the idea of benefitting a party. It would be better to devise a more liberal land law and spend less on immigration.

The debate was continued by Messrs. Armstrong, Willoughby, Murray, Hudson and Evanturel, the latter again attacking the Opposition over the shoulders of the Mail.

Mr. MEREDITH said it was a matter of complaint that the Government were misleading the people in regard to the true position of the financial affairs. In the event of a reajustement of the subsidies it would tell against the Province. He did not dispute that there was necessarily an increase in the expenditure, but the increase had been of undue proportion. The Government should check the expenditure unless they were prepared to resort to direct taxation. There must always be items passed on the responsibility of the Government and to the Opposition fell the duty of challenging the increase in the general expenditure. The Government had boasted of the surplus, but every dollar of it, except the drainage debentures and the money left by Sandfield Macdonald, was owing to the aid of the Dominion and had been added to its debt. He repeated his denial that he had raised a "No Popery" cry, and said that his motto was one law for all. Colonization roads must be constructed, but he objected to corrupt and improvident expenditure.

Mr. A. M. Ross said that in entering the payments on drainage debentures as a reduction of capital a mistake was made which was being corrected. He defended his statement of the assets and liabilities. He admitted they were trenching on capital for current needs. He said they had comedy from Mr. Creighton, burlesque from Mr. Clark and tragedy from Mr. Meredith, but all the criticisms were wrong, of course. Mr. Meredith had not repudiated the pamphlet issued to the Irish electors in 1883, nor the one entitled the "Lynch-Mowat Concordat" issued last year.

Mr. MEREDITH emphatically denied having anything to do with the document said to be issued in 1883. He never saw the one called the "Lynch-Mowat Concordat" and had nothing to do with it.

Mr. HARDY—Who could have got it up?

Mr. CREIGHTON—The Provincial Secretary. (Laughter.)

Mr. MEREDITH, in reply to a remark made by Mr. Hardy, said that in his address he had laid down grounds on which the affairs of the province should be conducted and he held the same views now, as they were founded on broad constitutional principles.

The House passed one item in Committee of Supply and adjourned at 11 p.m.

This Evening.

The first meeting of the series in connection with the temperance revival will be held this evening, in the lecture room of the George Street Methodist Church. It will be conducted by the "Hamilton Helpers," Messrs. Hebdon, Stead and Dunnett

Lord Salisbury's son Viscount Cranborne, will marry Lady Alice Gore, daughter of the Earl of Arran, shortly.

ROSA'S PISTOL.

It is worth $300 to Him When He Falls Among New York Thieves.

William M. Rosa is a resident of Liberty, Sullivan County. He was in Kingston today. He is a solidly built individual, with a somewhat determined expression on his face. On his vest he wears a gold badge of the Grand Army of the Republic, showing that he is an old veteran. Mr. Rosa said to a reporter of the Freeman:—"I had a little affair with bunco steers in New York, it might be well to tell, so as to warn others. I have the dates and other data right here. I was in New York on business connected with an estate. As I was going down from the City Hall to take the ferry I was accosted by a gentlemanly appearing man on the street. He made friends with me, saying he was formerly from Monticello, Sullivan County. He said he had started a factory up town to manufacture cloth out of horse hair, and he would like to have me go up and see it. He had found out my business, which is that of an agent.

"'But,' says he, 'if you don't wish to go clear up there, I have got some samples I would like to show you on Mott street, if you will go along with me.' He promised to give me enough cloth for a suit of clothes. He would like to have me take up a couple of samples to some friends of his in Sullivan. He mentioned the names of several firms in that county that I knew so naturally, I did not suspect anything. We got on a street car. He paid my fare, and we rode up to Mott street. He took me to 129 Moot street, the first door to the left hand of the number. I have it here on my book. In this room there was a little table by the window with a cloth over it. A man sat there as if he owned the office. He didn't appear to recognize my companion. The man with me said:

"'Oh, yes, excuse me,' said the other, as he reached under the table and took out a sample satchel. He opened it and showed about forty different kinds of cloth of different styles and patterns, very nice, all numbered in good order. He gave me the prices, which I knew were very low. I selected what I thought I would like to have for a suit of clothes. About as I had made my selection, in walks a man carrying an ordinary travelling satchel, saying that he was from Missouri, and had just made a sale of a number of car loads of cattle amounting to $33,000. At the same time he opened a satchel, showing large stacks of money, with $100 bills on top of each.

"'And,' said he, 'I've been swindled out of $300 across the way by a set of confidence men.'

"'How is that?' asked one of the men.

"'Well, I got betting, and seeing that I had lost I grabbed up these cards,' said he, throwing down cards used by three-card-monte men, 'and that is all I got.'

"Then the men wanted to know all about it. He showed by the cards how it was done, and all became very much interested. 'If I had it to do over again, though,' said he, 'I would bet three new hats that I could pick out the card.'

"'Well,' said one, 'I will take that bet.'

"So they tried it, and the cattle dealer lost. He handed over a $20 bill, saying, "That will pay for it.' Then the confidence man who had been with me spoke up and said:

"'I will bet I can draw that card every time.'

"'Very well,' said the drover,' I will take it.' He threw down some money and so did the other. My professed friend deftly with his finger nail put a little mark or kink on the card. I saw him do this, but seemingly no one else saw it. Of course my companion won. The drover got excited and wouldn't give up. He was determined to try again.

"'I will bet that,' said he, throwing down bills which must have amounted to a thousand dollars. The confidence man winked for me to try. I could see the little kink on the card, and was sure I could draw the card, so I could stand it no longer, but drew a card.

"'There,' said the drover, 'take your money.'

"I was a little loth to take it, of course. Take the money; it is yours.' Then spoke the confidence man:

"'It wouldn't be right for you to take all of that money unless you have money enough on your person to have covered the loss in case you lost. But you can take as much of it as you can cover.'

"I put my hand in my inside vest pocket and took out $300, saying: 'Here is $300.'

"The instant I showed the money the confidence man grabbed it out of my hands, and in ran four men, coming from behind the curtains. They had on shoes that did not make any noise. A light dawned upon me. I put my hand behind me and, quick as thought, drew my revolver, cocked it, and pointed it at the head of the man who had my money. "Give me my money, or I'll take your heart's blood,' I shouted. The fellow wilted like a rag.

"'You wouldn't kill a man for $300?'

"'Yes,' I shouted; 'I would kill you for 300 cents.'

"He handed back the money without breathing the second time. Well, I didn't wait, but put my money in my pocket and walked out. Did I make complaint at the police station? Yes, and a man was detailed to go with me. We visited the room and one of the scoundrels was there. He had put on another suit of clothes, but the officer did not make any arrest, although I told him it was one of the men."—Kingston Freeman

The Valley of Nazareth.

The valley of Nazareth, we are told, is so charming that it has been called a paradise on earth. It is full of flowers and shrubs, and butterflies and birds. Among the magnificent blossoms that in this country grow only in greenhouses, and the foreign birds with their gay, glittering feathers, are found our own loved roses and daisies, our nigtingales, blackbirds, thrushes, and larks filling the air with their sweet songs; and even the little homely sparrow and robin redbreast, that we consider so peculiarly our own, hop about and chirp gaily in Palestine as here. The people who live in the "happy valley" are more healthy and vigorous than their neighbors, or than the people who live in hot countries usually are. The fresh air from the hills makes them strong; and how sweet the air must be, passing as it does over mignonette and roses and many other flowers cherished in our gardens, and gathered to perfume our rooms, but growing there with all the reckless joy of nature. There is only one river in the valley, a little fresh brook, dancing down to the plain below, and here the women clad in their pretty dresses, which travellers tell us were brighter and more picturesque than those of their neighbors, as if even in the matter of costume they were the best of all came in those day's as they still do, with their great earthen jars, to draw the fresh bright water from the well, and carry it home to their families.—English Paper.

LATEST CABLE NEWS!

WILLIAM'S CONGRATULATIONS.

BERLIN, March 17.—Emperor William has telegraphed his congratulations to the Czar.

RETURNS THANKS.

VIENNA, March 17.—The Czar has sent a cordial message to Emperor Francis Joseph, in response to the latter's congratulations.

ST. PATRICK'S DAY.

DUBLIN, March.—A sleet and snow storm stopped all outdoor demonstration in honor of St. Patrick in Dublin. Beyond a few scrimmages in Londonderry and elsewhere, St. Patrick's day was observed in an orderly manner throughout Ireland.

THE PROGRAMME.

LONDON, March 17.—The Daily News says:—"The Government has assured the Unionist Liberals that it intends to introduce concurrently in Parliament remedial and repressive Irish proposals. The remedial measure is to divide into two parts, one dealing with prassing matters, such as the inclusion of lease holders in the operation of the Land Act and the suspension of evictions, the other, to be introduced at the next session, dealing with land purchase and local government questions."

THE TERRORIST SECTION.

ST. PETERSBURG, March 17.—The plot to assassinate the Czar, which was to have been carried out last Sunday, was arranged by members of the terrorist section of the Nihilists, and no connection with it has been traced to the faction which is conducting constitutionalist agitation, although this faction has assumed the character of a secret society with widespread ramifications. Several hundred persons affiliated with constitutionalist agitation have, however, been arrested.

FORTY-SEVEN PERSONS ARRESTED.

ST. PETERSBURG, March 17.—It is semi-officially stated that forty-seven persons, mostly students, have been arrested for connection with the recently discovered plot to assassinate the Czar. One of the prisoners is a woman.

DEFENSIVE ALLIANCE.

BERLIN, March 17.—The conferring of the order of the Black Eagle upon Count Robilant, the Italian statesman, on the Emperor William's birthday will be a national event and is regarded on all sides as a most important occurrence. The renewal of the union of Austria, Italy and Germany again makes a group willing and able to counteract all disturbers of the peace and is regarded as a guarantee of a compie defensive alliance.

AVERSE TO WAR.

ST. PETERSBURG, March 17.—The Czar is now reported to be greatly averse to war. He regards the recent plot to assassinate him as a purely Nihilistic one.

GRAY Dress Goods are all the rage this season. You can have your choice of eight shades in thirteen different qualities at TURNBULL'S. Also Ball Trimming, Hercules Braid and Buttons to match. Miss Morgan, our dressmaker, leads the fashion in dressmaking. All her work turned out promptly.

A. C. A.

Promises have been received from a number of localities promising that canoemen will attend the organization meeting of the Northern Division of the American Canoe Association this evening. The following letters will show how cordially the movement is supported. Col. Fairtlough, of the Royal Military College and its canoe club, writes:—

R. M. COLLEGE, Kingston,
16th March, 1887.

MY DEAR EDWARDS,—I hope to be in Peterborough on Friday night. I will come up by the C. P. R. from here, and ought to be in lots of time.

I am very glad you intend to adopt a name that has no distinctive nationality about it.

Hope the train won't be late.

Yours faithfully,
L. E. FAIRTLOUGH.

Mr. F. S. Rathbun, last year's Commodore of the A.C.A., writes as follows from the Deseronto Club:—

E. B. Edwards, Esq., Chairman Provisional Committee, Peterborough, Ont.

DEAR SIR,—At a meeting of the A. C. A. men in Deseronto last evening the enclosed resolution was passed, and I was instructed to forward same to you, at the same time to assure you of our hearty support and assistance. All wish to be enrolled as members of the Northern Division, and in advance accept all appointments that may be made at your meeting as final. All regret much at not being able to be present. With best wishes for a pleasant and successful meeting I am, dear sir,

Yours very truly,
F. S. RATHBUN.

Deseronto, Ont., March 17, 1887.

Peterborough canoeists and all interested should not fail to attend the meeting over the express office this evening at 8 o'clock, and show equal zeal with our visitors.

Astonishing Success

It is the duty of every person who has used Boschee's German Syrup to let its wonderful qualities be known to their friends in curing Consumption, severe Coughs, Croup, Asthma, Pneumonia, and in fact all throat and lung diseases. No person can use it without immediate relief. Three doses will relieve any case, and we consider it the duty of all Druggists to recommend it to the poor, dying consumptive at least to try one bottle, as 70,000 dozen bottes were sold last year, and no one case where it failed was reported. Such a medicine as the German Syrup cannot be too widely known. Ask your druggist about it Sample bottles to try, sold at 10 cents. Regular size, 75 cents. Sold by all Druggists and Dealers, in the United States and Canada. d90

Advice to Mothers.

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup should always be used when children are cutting teeth. It relieves the little sufferer at once; it produces natural, quiet sleep by relieving the child from pain, and the little cherub awakes "as bright as a button." It is very pleasant to taste. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain, relieves wind, regulates the bowels, and is the best known remedy for diarrhœa, whether arising from teething or other causes. 25 cents a bottle. Be sure and ask for "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup," and take no other kind.

The Daily Review.

FRIDAY, MARCH 18, 1887.

SEED GRAIN.

The Winnipeg Free Press has made a scurrilous attack upon Mr. H. H. Smith, who, as Mayor of Peterborough, won the respect of men of all parties among us, and upon Mr. N. F. Davin, the Conservative candidate for West Assiniboia, accusing them of manipulating the purchase and distribution of seed grain for the political advantage of the latter. The Toronto Globe republishes this infamous attack, but carefully conceals the complete refutation of it.

Two prominent Reform firms in Winnipeg write to make known that they supplied a large portion of this seed grain by open tender, no partiality being shown, and one of them, Mr. Stephen Nairn, adds that he wishes "to defend a gentleman (Mr. H. H. Smith), who in his official capacity has the esteem of all fair-minded men of either side of politics." McBean Bros., who are also Reformers, write to say "as one of the parties tendering we beg to state in justice to Mr. Smith, that so far as we are aware, political considerations have not entered into the awarding of the contracts and that in our opinion the lowest tenders were accepted regardless of the politics of the tenderers." It also appears that the Government, having acceded to requests from the Northwest to grant this seed grain, Mr. Smith, as Commissioner of Lands, employed, without regard to politics, members of the Northwest Council, representatives of agricultural societies and public officials to receive applications so that the quantity might be ascertained. Mr. Davin, as editor of the Regina Leader, has always warmly advocated the interests of the settlers in the Northwest and has given them every assistance in his power. He continued to do so in this case, gave the utmost publicity to the manner in which the settlers might avail themselves of this boon, and even seems to have put himself to considerable personal trouble to forward applications entrusted to him by his readers and neighbors. Because he continued his practice of doing everything in his power for the progress and benefit of the settlers in their hard task of opening up new country he receives blame instead of the praise that is his due.

Of course it is sufficient motive with the Winnipeg Free Press and Toronto Globe that these gentlemen are Conservatives, to slander them for the efficient, zealous and impartial performance of their respective duties. But these dishonest journals have the additional motive of desiring through these gentlemen to attack the Conservative Administration of the Dominion. The people of the Northwest urged that this aid should be granted, and after due consideration the Government assented, passing an Order-in-Council before there was any arrangement for a dissolution. Immediately, by their very able officer, Mr. Smith, they proceeded in the most businesslike, effectual and impartial manner to provide for the distribution. And now they are to be assailed for thus coming to the aid of the enterprising men, who are amidst hardships and privations developing the resources of our country. The comparatively trifling cost may be called extravagant by these heartless carpers, but the people of Canada will not be so niggardly. Even as an investment the expenditure will assuredly be far more than recouped by the impetus thus given to the progress of the Territories.

As to Mr. Smith, in whom our readers naturally take a more particular interest, it is only his due to say that men of all parties in the Northwest unite in praising him for the able, zealous and absolutely impartial manner in which he performs his onerous and important duties as Land Commissioner, and all agree that his appointment has been most beneficial to the settlers who find him as painstaking, fair and ready to serve their interests as our people found him when he was our Mayor.

Neither Mr. Smith, Mr. Davin nor the Dominion Ministers need fear that such unscrupulous and unfounded attacks will injure them in the eyes of honest men of whatever party.

ONTARIO FINANCES.

The debate on the financial statement of the Provincial Treasurer followed pretty much the same lines as former debates on the finances during the past few years, the greatest differences of opinion being as to whether the assets claimed by the Government are available, and should be counted as such, and in regard to the liabilities, the Treasurer still refusing to take into account the liability existing represented by railway certificates.

Taking Mr. Ross' figures as he presents them, however, it will be seen by those who are desirous of guarding the interests of the Province, that Ontario is drifting towards direct taxation much more rapidly than is desirable. According to the Treasurer's statements the surplus was diminished in 1885 to the extent of $93,576, and in 1886 it was further entrenched upon to the extent of $85,751. While admitting this, while admitting that money is being yearly borrowed by the issuance of annuities, the Treasurer is also forced to admit that the capital of the Province in the form of lands and timber is being used to swell the receipts. Deficits year after year, the surplus which Mr. Mowat did not accumulate dimishing, money being borrowed, and the capital of the Province being disposed of, such is the record of the Mowat Government, and that, too, while that Government is receiving increased aid from the Dominion. It is not a record to be proud of, and it is one that the people will awake some day and find has been a bad one for them.

The boast of the Mowat Government that they have a surplus is a most hollow one. It is not owing to their good management that direct taxation has not yet been found necessary. To make up their statements of assets, in order to make it appear that they have a large surplus, they include trust funds that should not be so counted. Compare their cash surplus with the cash surplus in 1871 and what is shown? That is a fair test, as to whether they have increased the available rest funds of the Province. In 1871 there was an actual surplus of money invested in Dominion securities and in banks, of over $3,600,000, upon which $148,700 was received as interest. In 1886 all that was left of this actual surplus was $694,845, on which $58,800 was received as interest. There has been a decrease of nearly $3,000,000 in the surplus, despite the sale of annuities and the disposal of land and timber, When the Government professes to have a larger suplus than existed in 1871, and on that ground claim credit for good management, they try to deceive the people for they include funds which were in existence in 1871, and are not counted in the surplus of that year, and the further sum of $2,800,000 which, if it should be counted at all, they did not accumulate, because it is the result of an arrangement with the Dominion. In 1873 the Dominion subsidy was increased by $291,000, and since 1884 the Provincial Government has been receiving a further sum of $142,000, so that they receive from the Dominion $433,000 yearly more than was received in 1871. If this increased aid had not been received the $600,000 residue of Sandfield Macdonald's handsome surplus would have been gone also, and instead of that remaining the balance would have been on the other side.

No improvement is promised by the Government for the present year. For 1886 the statement of receipts and expenditures show a deficit of $33,049, but the statement of assets shows that the Province is $85,751 worse off than the previous year, without taking into consideration the land and timber disposed of. And for 1887 the Government estimates another deficit of $241,583. It was decidedly cool of Mr. Ross to speak of "occasional shortages," when year after year there have been deficits and he can hold out no better prospect than a continuation of the system of expenditures exceeding the receipts. He may think it amusing to see the financial position of the Province becoming worse year after year, and he may feel like smiling when he announces the prospect of another deficit, but it is a serious matter for the people, and one that should be carefully considered and must receive anxious consideration before long.

Everybody is surprised and pleased at the quality of the 4 button Kid Glove Turnbull is selling at 50 cents a pair. All the new gray shades in the popular Alexander make now in stock.

KEENE.

From Our Own Correspondent.

Curling.—Two rinks from Campbellford, skipped by Jas. White and J. Dinwoodie played two rinks here skipped by R. McIntyre and Jno. Dickson respectively with the following result:—Rink No. 1, Keene 15, Campbellford 11; Rink No. 2, Keene 20, Campbellford 10. Majority for Keene, 14 shots.

Lecture.—Mr. J. R. Clark is expected to lecture here about the latter end of this month on "Hits and Misses." Those who heard him when here before will be sure to hear him again.

Accident.—Mr. Ed. Doris fell the other day and dislocated his shoulder, and also broke one of the bones of his forearm.

Death.—Mrs. Andrew Wier passed away on Saturday morning, last after a few week's illness. She was nearly 73 years of age, and was liked by everyone for her genial manner and great kindness. The funeral was held on Monday to Pine Grove Cemetery and was largely attended. Mr. Andrew Weir is at present confined to his bed.

LAKEFIELD.

From Our Own Correspondent.

Curling.—Two rinks of the Lakefield Curling Club went to Peterborough on Wednesday for a friendly game.

T. V. Flour Mill.—Mr. Donald McLean is now running the Trent Valley flour mill day and night. Mr. McLean claims that his flour cannot be surpassed in Ontario, and it seems to find favour in Peterborough, as he ships large quantities to that point.

Personal.—Mr. Robert Strickland arrived in Lakefield on Tuesday from England, accompanied by Mr. Harold Child, of London, England.

Ill.—Councillor Moore is ill of typhoid fever. According to latest accounts he is slightly better.

Council.—A Council meeting was held on Monday, March 14th. The Reeve was in the chair and Councillors Cox, Watson and Henderson were present. It was moved by Councillor Henderson, seconded by Councillor Watson—That the Clerk instruct the village solicitor to defend the suit brought against the Corporation by Wm. Leahy.—Carried. It was moved by Councillor Henderson, seconded by Councillor Cox,—That the Clerk is hereby instructed to call for tenders for the supply of plank and cedar stringers required by the Council for 1887, tenders to state the price per thousand for plank, per lineal foot for stringers.—Carried. The following accounts were ordered to be paid:—

M. Harrigan, balance of grave account	$ 130 00
Milner & Co, printing	11 00
Isaac Watson, wages	8 77
Jas Sutton, wages	50
Joseph Walton, wages	50
John Simpson, clearing snow	14 00

The Council then adjourned to meet at the call of the Reeve.

Food for Consumptives.

Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil, with Hydrophosphites, is a most marvellous food and medicine. It heals the irritation of the throat and lungs, and gives flesh and strength quicker and better than any other remedy known. It is very palatable, having none of the disagreeable taste of the crude oil. Put up in 50c. and $1.00 size.

CHAPTER V.

THE FIRE.

Where were Philip Dumoray's boys?

A wild glance around showed him they were nowhere in the room. The nearing flame sucked his breath and scorched his hair. He had barely time to save himself by the window through which Myra had vanished like a spirit.

Where was she now? Was she perishing in the flames with the children? She was not on the veranda. Fire and smoke poured from all the windows and mounted to the roof. They drove him from the veranda. He sprang down the iron supports to the ground. He ran around the burning building crying for help. The cook and the coachman flitted past him. These were all the persons in the house at the time, except his wife and children. The crowd came pouring in from the street, and in another moment the grounds were full of people. The house was a mass of flame. Heavens! were his boys in there? He fancied he heard a cry. He darted toward the fire like an insane person. Strong men caught him by the wrists and held him back.

In scarcely more time than it takes to read this the fire had done its work. Only the bare outer walls of the house were left. The inner walls had fallen in. What had they buried under their direful ruins? One handed Philip some clothing. He had forgotten he had only his night clothes on.

It was a pitiful thing so see him, crying for his children, calling them by their names, searching for them under the trees, peering into corners of the outbuildings, if haply they might not be hidden there. All that night he went on crazier than his insane wife. Toward morning he remembered that he was a man. He collected himself.

Messengers, descriptions of the lost children were sent in every direction. There were days, weeks of heartache for the stricken father, but no tidings of his darlings came.

Where was his wife? It was the conclusion, at first thought, that she had been burned to death, and buried under the ruins. In his agony that night Philip had not given much thought to her. But next morning a message came from Myra's mother. His wife was at her house, and would he, her husband, take her away at once, and provide for her? She had fled there in the night, from the fire. Madam did not feel safe to have her in the house.

Philip had no home for her now. There remained only one place. The poor, demented creature went to a lunatic asylum.

The origin of the fire was matter of mystery. Nothing certain could be found out. But the day after it happened the coachman came to Philip with the air of one who had something to communicate.

"It don't look well in a man to be telling tales on a woman, Mr. Dumoray," he said. "But Mary, who tended on Mrs. Dumoray, left her last night and went to a ball. I saw her at midnight. I was out myself, and I don't deny it, and didn't come home till 2 o'clock. I saw a bright light in the library, where the piles of newspapers are. I thought it was you up reading, and I didn't look in. I went by easylike, for I didn't want you to know I was out so late. I put off my shoes and slipped around to the back stairs. I saw Mrs. Dumoray going along the hall toward your room, with a night lamp in her hand. There was nobody to watch her, and she slipped out, and I think it was her set the house afire."

Philip thought so too, remembering what he had seen. But the boys, his children? Had she carried them in their sleep into her own room, or into the library, before she lit the fire? It was an awful thought.

The boys were at first given up to have perished in the burning building. But Mr. Dumoray had yet to learn the depth of deviltry and cunning of which insane hate is capable. New troubles awaited him. He had none to whom he could turn for help. His father and mother were now both dead. They had never been the same to him after his marriage. It had caused them a displeasure and disappointment they were never quite able to overcome. He took lodgings near the ruins of his home, resolved to penetrate the mystery of the disappearance of his boys. He had had the debris of the building carefully dug out and examined. A council of eminent experts was summoned. They searched the burned remains. No trace of bone or of flesh could be found. After laying their heads together they rendered an opinion of a wisdom and profundity such as only medical and chemical experts can give.

The law has a waxen nose, which the lawyer can turn to the right or left as he pleases, says the German proverb. So has medicine. The verdict of the learned ones was on this wise:

"The undersigned have to report that they have carefully examined different portions of the ashes and embers taken from the ruins of Mr. Philip Dumoray's house. They have subjected the same to rigid analysis. In their judgment traces have been found of a substance which may be construed to be the ashes of human remains. At the same time they deem it necessary to state that a similar ash is sometimes the residuum from the consumption by fire of other organic compounds.

"JAMES BENSON, M. D.,
"H. T. TOMPKINS, M. D.,
"J. L. BOYD, Pharmacist."

Here was wisdom.

Philip Dumoray was just where he was before. What should he do next? He sought every possible source of information. He examined the newspapers with fear and hope every morning, only to be overcome with the same dull, dead despair. One morning, for his comfort and encouragement, this met his eye:

"Readers of The Daily News will remember the mysterious fire which destroyed Mr. Philip Dumoray's house on Linden street a few weeks ago. At the time there were many conjectures as to its origin, but none that seemed to offer a solution of the mystery. Among the rumors current is the unpleasant one that Mr. Dumoray set fire to his own house. The gentleman's wife is out of her mind and is now in the Iron Gate asylum. The unfortunate Mrs. Dumoray was before her marriage a young lady of remarkable beauty and accomplishments, and, it is said, was crazed by domestic unhappiness. She has still some sane moments, however. During some of these flashes of reason she has let fall rambling remarks which beyond doubt point to her husband as the author of the fire. Her disordered brain clings to the fixed idea that he removed the twin boys and then fired the house. This opinion was said to be shared by Mrs. Dumoray's mother, with whom the unhappy woman took refuge when she escaped from the flames.

"Such was the rumor, too unpleasant to be credited. Accordingly, a reporter of The Daily News was sent to the house of Mrs. Dumoray's mother to trace the origin of the ugly suspicion, if possible. Mrs. Bliss is a lady noted for her charitable deeds and moves in the highest social circles.

"Our reporter was admitted to an interview, and the following conversation took place:

JACOB'S NEW NAME.

DR. CURTISS' NOTES ON THE SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON.

Lesson XII of the International Series for Sunday March 20—Text of the Lesson, Gen. xxxii, 9-12 and 24-30—Golden Text, Gen. xxxii, 26.

This lesson introduces us to the crisis of Jacob's life. The new name which he received is the sign of a complete change which was wrought in him.

God had greatly blessed him. A solitary pilgrim he went to Haran. He left Haran with two wives, one of whom he had received against his will, and eleven sons, besides numerous flocks and herds.

He finally broke away from his father-in-law, Laban, by stealth. Pursued by Laban, but delivered from the peril to which he was exposed from his anger, through God's gracious interposition, he was exposed to a new danger from his brother, whom he had so deceived years before, and who was now marching to meet him with 400 men. Through all these years Esau had not forgotten the wrong done him. Jacob was in peril of seeing all his possessions disappear in a moment, and of being slain with his wives and children.

But his presence of mind does not forsake him. He uses his best judgment in the division of his servants and property into two camps, and then in his extremity, when human foresight can do no more, betakes himself to prayer.

THE LESSON.

The God of the Covenant (vs. 9-10).—When he addresses God as the God of his father Abraham, and the God of his father Isaac, he does so with reference to the covenant made with them and the promises made to them. He not only urges these, but he reminds God that he had told him to return to his country, and that he had promised to deal well with him. He then confesses his own unworthiness of even the least of God's mercies, and ascribes to him all the great prosperity which he had enjoyed.

Vs. 11-12. He prays for deliverance from his brother Esau, and from his murderous hand, and reminds God, as a motive for sparing his life and the lives of his children, that God had promised to make his seed like the sand of the sea, that cannot be numbered for multitude.

Answering His Own Prayer—We see from the following narrative that he began to answer his own prayer, although we may doubtless say that God gave him needed wisdom. Without waiting for God to make a special demonstration he began to employ such measures as were likely to win the favor of his brother.

Taking 580 domestic animals he divided them into five droves, placing a considerable distance between them, and putting each in charge of a servant, who was to give a stereotyped and most deferential answer to Esau, as he met them and inquired to whom they belonged. The first drove would certainly make a favorable impression upon him, but what must his feelings be when he had seen the fifth and had been assured five times: "They be thy servant Jacob's; it is a present unto my Lord Esau; and behold he also is behind us."

He sent all these droves across the ford of the Jabbok, which is a stream flowing into the Jordan from the land of Moab just north of Mount Gilead. Afterward he took over his own family and possessions. All human ingenuity could do had been done, but the great struggle was still to come.

The Lonely Combat (vs. 24-26).—As he remained all alone in the deep shadows of the night a man came and wrestled with him. This was not an assassin sent by Esau to murder him, as some scholars used to say, nor was Jacob dreaming, as some German scholars used to say. We rather have a narrative related as a fact. Jacob wrestled with a man until the break of day, and when the man got no advantage over him he touched the hollow of his thigh, so that ever after Jacob limped, and for this reason his descendants did not eat the sinew of the hip which is upon the hollow of the thigh (v. 32, Revised Version).

Who then was this man who wrestled with Jacob? In Hosea xii, 4, we read that he was an angel, but farther on in our lesson we see that in the face of this angel Jacob recognized the face of God (v. 30). The angel who wrestled with him therefore was none other than the angel of Jehovah who appeared to Hagar in her extremity (Gen. xvi, 7, 13) and who partook of the hospitality of Abraham (Gen. xviii, 1-9). We may thus suppose that the Christ who was to be born in human form was revealing himself in these ways to his servants. And if Jesus, who was very God as well as very man, condescended to be a guest on so many occasions (Luke xxiv, 30, etc.), to allow the woman who was a sinner to anoint his feet (Luke vii, 37, 38), and invited Thomas to put his finger into the print of the nails and thrust his hand into his side (John xx, 27), we need not be surprised that the angel of Jehovah should condescend to wrestle with the ancestor of the Israelitish people, when by this means he was to become worthy to be father of the people of redemption.

A Physical Wrestling.—What passed in that lonely hour we cannot tell, for we have the briefest account of it. The narrative in Genesis emphasizes a physical wrestling; that in Hosea his pleadings with the angel and his tears. The one does not exclude the other. Jacob became aware that his arms were interlocked with those of a man who could bless him, and he was unwilling to let him go until the blessing came. He therefore held the angel, who sought to elude his grasp; and when the angel said, "Let me go, for the day breaketh," he replied with passionate earnestness, "I will not let thee go, except thou bless me."

The Blessing and the New Name (vs. 27-28).—The blessing was granted, and with it a new name. The patriarch had been the "heel catcher," "the supplanter," for that is the meaning of Jacob. The advantages that he had gained over Esau had been by cunning and deceit. That night the old man Jacob died, when the new man Israel was born at the breaking of the day.

He who began the contest with the angel of Jehovah as the supplanter, now leaves it, under God's gracious condescension, a victor who has striven with God. He not only prevails with God, but also with man, and therefore with his brother. As Jacob he feared his brother. As Israel he is restored to his brother's arms, and for a time at least, to his brother's love (Gen. xxxiii, 4).

Vs. 29, 30. Jacob asks for the name of this heavenly vision; but he declines to gratify his curiosity, although he grants him his blessing. Jacob, however, understands who has been with him, and calls the place Peniel; or "face of God."

POINTS TO BE REMEMBERED.

1. When we ask God to do what he has promised, we may be sure that our prayer, if offered in faith, will be answered.

2. We should do what we can to answer our own prayers. Christians should use all the skill and foresight God has given them.

3. God condescends to give such help as his humblest child may need.

4. The man who prevails with God will prevail with men. The closet is the place where the hardest battles are fought and the greatest victories won.

5. God's grace can change the meanest sinner into a noble saint.—Sunday School World.

WESTWOOD.

RACES.—The Hastings Star says the races billed to take place in Westwood came off as announced. The mild weather of the few days previous, however, rendered the use of the pond impracticable, the intended course being flooded to the depth of over a foot with water. As a make shift the road from Healy's corner to the foot of the hill, near the churches, was used, being a little under a mile. In the green race there were four entries:

Gray Billy, J. Graham, Otonabee 1 1 1
Honest John, J. W. Humphries, As'del. 2 2 4
Black Mare, C. Mills, Hastings 3 3 3
—— M. Downs, Hastings 4 4 2

For the open trot three horses toed the line as follows:

Lapidist Chief, J. Simpson, Hastings .. 1 1 1
Billy C., W. Comstock, Asphodel 2 2 2
Colonel, C. McDonald, Westwood 3 3 3

A matched race, the outcome of the foregoing, for $5 a side and a purse of $10, made up by the spectators, then took place between Graham's Gray Billy of Otonabee, and Comstock's Billy C. of Asphodel, was won by the latter taking the second and third heats. The judges were Jas. Miller, Keene; Geo. Lipsett, Peterborough, and C. Lancaster, Hastings.

If anything clogs the waste-pipes in the house we become alarmed, for sewer-gas is apt to generate disease. The children, then, are removed to their grand-parent's, or kept out of doors as much as possible, until the defect is remedied. But the waste-pipes of the human system are allowed to clog, and the sufferer, who cannot get away from the poison, becomes unfit for work or pleasure. In such cases Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Purgative Pellets will gently remove the cause, and the effect will vanish of itself. By druggists.

BEWARE

OF WORTHLESS IMITATIONS

As there are many inferior goods, corded with jute, hemp, etc., offered and sold as Coraline by some unprincipled merchants trading on the reputation of our genuine Coraline, we warn the ladies against such imposition by drawing their attention to the necessity of seeing that the name is stamped on inner side of all Coraline goods, Without which none are genuine.

'CROMPTON CORSET CO.'

THE CITY AND SUBURBS

Band of Hope.

There will be no Band of Hope meeting this evening.

Personal.

The Calgary Tribune reports Mr. Haultain and Mr. Bleecker, formerly of Peterborough, as speaking in behalf of Mr. Davis, a Conservative candidate in Alberta.

Opera House Saturday Night.

The mass meeting on Saturday night in the Opera House, for men only, promises to be very attractive. Mr. Stead is one of the leading bases of Hamilton, and Mr. Dunnet also sings very nicely. Mr. Hebdon is the leader of the band. There will be no charge for admission, but to cover expenses, a collection will be taken up.

A Company.

The proposition to form a canton militant in connection with Mount Hebron Encampment, has been meet with such favor that it has been decided to form it without delay. The new uniforms of surpassing richness are to be orderded. The uniforms for the company will cost between $1,500 and $2,000 One of the old encampment uniforms is on exhibition in the window of the Habiliment Hall.

Lakefield's Flour.

When the Lakefield curlers were defeated on Wednesday skip Strickland was not satisfied with the result of the match on his rink. He challenged the Hall rink to play in the evening for a barrel of flour to be given to the Protestant Home. His men, however, wanted to get home, but Lakefield's Reeve was bound to have it out. Accordingly he chose Messrs. McGill, McNeil and Davidson and played the Hallrink. It was decided that Mr. Strickland should win the flour by the narrow majority of 6.

The March style of Domestic patterns is now out. All the new patterns in stock at Turnbull's.

The Day in Ennismore.

St. Patrick's Day was celebrated in right royal style in Ennismore In the forenoon mass was celebrated in the Parish Church, the Rev. Father Kielty, officiating. The church was crowded nearly the whole township being present. Several went out from town. Miss McDonald, the popular organist, conducted the musical part of service in a finished manner. In the afternoon a concert was given, the hall being filled to the doors. Those taking part in it acquitted themselves, without exception, in a highly creditable manner. Among the events was a speech from Mr. Perdu, who entertained the audience to a stirring address lasting about half an hour.

The Late Miss Crawford.

The Canada School Journal of March 15th says in regard to a former resident of Peterborough;—"Canadian literature has suffered a serious loss in the person of Isabella Valancy Crawford, who died suddenly in Toronto a week or two since. The deceased lady was well known to the reading public through her contributions to the various newspapers and magazines. "The Little Bacchante" was perhaps the best known of her productions. Some of her poems evinced poetic talent of no mean order, and won her the encomiums of competent critics on both sides of the Atlantic. For several years past she has written for leading English and American journals The number of Canadians who have as yet taken their places in the higher walks of literature is necessarily small, and even a single figure like that of the deceased will be sadly missed."

COMPETENT judges say TURNBULLS is the right house to buy boys' and youth's ready made Clothing. He gives you new styles, low prices and good quality combined.

C. Stapleton's Coming Sales.

WEDNESDAY, March 23.—Sale of farm stock and implements, of Mr. Michael Collins, on his premises, lot 3, in the 2nd con. of Ennismore. Sale at 1 o'clock.

THURSDAY, March 24.—65 head of choice stock, of Wm. Crough, Esq., on his premises, lot 3, in the 6th con. of the township of Ennismore, one mile north of the Ennismore Cross. Sale at 10 o clock. Lunch at noon.

IF you have heard of anything new and have not seen it look for it at TURNBULL'S, the great novelty house. The counters are now piled with new spring goods, which we are pleased to show.

THE SWARTHY ITALIAN.

War With a Razor—P. C. McGinty Makes a Capture.

On Thursday afternoon there was another sensation among the Italian colony.

The individual who figured as a witness in the recent shooting case under the title of "Jim" went up to peanut Frank's house and while there fell into a dispute with another Italian. "Jim" became infuriated, drew a razor and rushed upon his antagonist, but the women in the house, throwing themselves in front of "Jim," prevented injury.

"Jim" then left the house and shortly afterwards P. C. McGinty got word of the affair. He hunted around and at last caught "Jim" up near the gaol. Here the officer arrested him and took him quietly to the bottom of the hill. Then the prisoner worked himself into a frenzy; kicked, leaped, and tore around, as the P. C. puts it, "like a mad bull." The nippers which were applied vigorously did not seem to effect him in the least. After much difficulty the Italian was at last lodged in the cells. Here he exhibited fury rarely seen. He jumped up at the bars, kicked the door, and yelled hideously. It was a considerable time before his rage subsided.

At the Police Court this morning it was found that his name was James Pagot. He was charged with having committed an assault with intent. Several of the Italians said that Jim was not right in his head; that he had acted queer of late. The charge, however, was substantiated and the prisoner was sent to gaol for a month.

AT HOME.

St. Patrick's Day in the Evening—A Large Gathering.

The George Street Methodist Church folks celebrated St. Patrick's Day by holding another of their delightful "At Homes" in the spacious school room of the church. The evening was spent in the same manner and the room looked just about the same as it did on previous occasions. Everybody was made to feel quite at home—the Rev. Mr. Tovell and a number of prominent members saw that this was done. Nothing was left undone to strip the entertainment of all formality. There was no Chairman and no Chairman's address. Mr. Tovell simply introduced those who entertained the audience, and before doing so he talked a little while. As he looked over the motley, merry throng that crowded the improvised parlor of huge proportions, he looked pleased and happy himself. Before stepping from the platform he said that at the far end of the room yonder (pointing to the refreshment room) the ladies would be happy to see every one in the audience at least once during the evening. Great attention was paid to the ladies in charge of this part of the programme. Everybody went to the refreshment room and came out in even better humor than when going in. As the people went in and out of the refreshment room, talking, laughing chaffing, walking around and amusing themselves in all sorts of ways a lull now and then was got by the tinkle of a bell. During this cessation of the joyous confusion some one favored the audience with music, etc. Those who gave their services during the evening were:—

Overture	Mr J E Jaques
Vocal Solo	Miss F Dame
Violin Solo	Mrs Hamilton
Recitation	Mr A E Scott
Song	Mr J E Jaques
Duet	Misses Elsworth and Wells
Singing	"Hamilton Helpers"
Instrumental selections	Mr A F. Hoover
Song	Mr W Scrimger
Violin Solo	Miss Jennie Moyse
Recitation	Miss F Salisbury
Vocal solo	Mrs Harrison
Singing	"Hamilton Helpers"

The evening's entertainment was brought to a close at a seasonable hour, and after singing the national anthem the gathering dispersed.

THE MARKET REPORTS.

REVIEW OFFICE,
Thursday evening.

The local market during the past week has been almost featureless. Owing to the sudden "bulge" in Chicago in the early part of last week the price of wheat advanded to 82 cents, receded with the decline to 80 cents and has remained fixed at that price ever since. The delivery of wheat, barley, oats and peas has been quiet. Pork has advanded, as high as $6.75 being now paid. The "corner" in American pork has shut off importation and the Canadian packers are now getting the benefit. It is the prevailing opinion that the price for live hogs this season will be 6 cents, which is equivalent to 8 cents for dressed hogs. The season is now closed for cutting up dressed hogs. Mathews' packing house, Peterborough, is now ready to receive live hogs.

Chicago Grain and Provisions.

Over Cox & Co.'s Wires.

CHICAGO, March 17.—To-day's noon cash quotations are as follows:—Wheat, 75⅝; corn, 34¾; oats, 24; pork, $20.10; lard, $7.35.

Cheese.

Mr. T. H. Hodgson, of Liverpool, writes as follows on March 5: The market continues quiet, and country demand exceedingly small; buyers continue the hand to mouth policy, and while the manner of bidding appeared to indicate an expectation of modified cost, nothing in the latter line has been granted on really choice good keeping parcels of September makes, which are still held firmly, and generally above my quotations. Some holders, however, while expressing confidence in the future, are meeting buyers whenever they show a disposition to operate, but all such offerings are limited, and it would be a difficult matter to secure very many finest Septembers at my inside quotations. I quote finest Septembers, 63 to 64s.; Augusts, 62 to 63s.; medium to fine, stock nil; medium to good, stock nil. Skims continue more or less neglected and dull, winter made Cheddars, half meats, 50 to 52s.; ditto flats, 33 to 45s.; inferior, 15 to 20s.

Make Your Homes Attractive.

Mothers and fathers who have sons and daughters growing up do not always realize as they should the great necessity of making home not merely a place in which their children eat, sleep and are clothed, but one in which they find positive happiness and enjoyment. In nine cases out of ten where you see a wild youth or a giddy girl, go to their homes, you will find them cheerless, unattractive, or perhaps actually disagreeable.

The nature of youth is excessively restless; it has a longing for action and excitement, ambitions more or less vain, and always the irrepressible desire to know a broader life. Repress these natural instincts, and you will be sure to throw them into any society that in a measure will gratify their longings. Your sons do not go to the public barrooms at first for the taste of the liquor which they have not as yet acquired; they go for the gay companions they find there. The influence for good or evil that a mother has over her sons, the control that she exercises over their destinies, is a grave responsibility. Throw open your best rooms to the children in the evenings. Have books and a magazine or two, even if you put away less money. Stimulate their ambition, and invent occupations and amusement for your children. Give them games and endear yourself to them by sharing their joys and plays. Encourage them to be affectionate. Do not with formal coldness starve them for want of caresses.—American Agriculturist.

RAILWAY SMASH UP.

An Engine and Four Cars Destroyed—The Fire.

The train which reached Peterborough this morning on the Canadian Pacific line had quite an experience. On Thursday night it left Ottawa at about 12 o'clock. When about thirteen miles out of the city, just after leaving the Stillswell station, the driver pulled the throttle to put on more steam when he noticed something indistinct ahead. He had just time to reverse and throw himself on the floor of the cab when a terrible crash came.

A short time before the arrival of the train at Stillswell a freight train had passed and the conductor had reached Bell's Corners, a few miles further on. The station master at Bell's Corners seeing the engine and a few cars come up telegraphed back to Stillswell that train No— had arrived. But the conductor of the freight train had left four cars on the track and had sent back men to signal danger to any train that might come. The station master at Stillswell, thinking the road clear, allowed the train to pass with the result that the engine of the passenger train went clean through the four box cars and in doing so smashed itself in such a way as to render itself fit for old iron only. The cars which contained lard, oil, pork, and other greasy substances, took fire and made a tremendous blaze. The engine telegraphed for arrived just in time to pull the passenger cars out and save them. The danger signals were not seen by the driver on account of the blinding snow storm which blew at the time.

There is a joke to be found in nearly everything no matter how serious the event may be. In this case the fun was created by a somniferous Lakefielder sleeping through the whole of the tumult. When he woke he heard the shouting and prying away at the car but being in Montreal a short time before in all of the St. Patrick's Day parade he imagined he was still there. He got up and astounded someone by asking what was the matter. On being told that the train was wrecked and that a fire was raging he made quick preparation to help at saving the wounded and taking care of the dead. He found, however, that his services were not required, as no one was killed and none were wounded, except the fireman. After clearing up the track, which occupied nearly all of Friday, the train proceeded on and reached town at the usual hour this morning.

A Lively Dispute.

ST. JOHN, N. B., March 18.—A stormy dispute between the Assembly and Legislative Council of this Province is in progress. The Assembly wants to abolish the Council, and the Council declines to be abolished. Members of the Council say that if either House is to be swept away it ought to be the elective branch, The Hon. Mr. James, a former Minister, said the best legislation in Canada came from New Brunswick, and the worst from the single Chamber Legislature of Ontario. On the other hand, a member of the Assembly characterized the Council as a political dead house and as the last resort of dead beasts.

Walter E. Lawton, a merchant of Broadway, New York, has absconded, after having defrauded companies and others with whom he was connected to the extent of about a million dollars. He is believed to have sailed for England and taken a large sum with him.

If anything clogs the waste-pipes in the house we become alarmed, for sewer-gas is apt to generate disease. The children, then, are removed to their grandparents, or kept out of doors as much as possible, until the defect is remedied. But the waste-pipes of the human system are allowed to clog, and the sufferer, who cannot get away from the poison, becomes unfit for work or pleasure. In such cases Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Purgative Pellets will gently remove the cause, and the effect will vanish of itself. By druggists.

HORRIBLE HOLOCAUST.

AN HOTEL IN BUFFALO BURNED WITH MANY GUESTS.

One Hundred and Twenth-five Guests Aroused by Flames—Many Said to Have Perished—Many More Seriously Injured.

BUFFALO, N. Y., March 18.—A fire was discovered at 3.30 this morning in the New Richmond Hotel. The house contained a large number of guests. Ladders were raised and as many as possible were saved. The St. James' Hall and other adjacent property were burned. Several of the guests were severely cut by glass in the windows of their rooms in trying to make their escape. Carney's saloon was converted into a hospital. Eight men and women were there horribly burned and bruised, besides many others who had escaped with nothing on but their night clothes. At 4 o'clock the entire Richmond Hotel, St. James' Hall and other property in the block were on fire. The whole place burned like a tinder box. The corrider in the centre of the building acted as a great funnel, and as the flames steamed upwards, wrapping themselves about the woodwork of several floors, the guests found themselves imprisoned by a wall of fire. Many attempted to ESCAPE FROM THE WINDOWS.

The roof of Murdock's gallery and Palacio's cigar store, adjoining the hotel, both situated in a one and a half story frame building was crushed in by falling walls, It is stated that the fire originated in the cloak room. Sergeant Jordan saw three women fall back in the flames from a window on the south side of the hotel. It is stated that the space occupied by the ruins of Creighton's saloon and Palacio's cigar store contains the remains of several unfortunate guests, who jumped from the windows on that side. A number of children are missing. Two little girls were rescued by the firemen. Three of the hotel girls are thought to have been burned to death. F. H. Bryant, a New York travelling man, was very badly burned about the feet and hands. M. W. Barson one of Oleons most prominent citizens, was burned about the hands. The number of those injured is not exactly known. Many dragged themselves to neighboring hotels and saloons and

HAD THEIR BURNS DRESSED.

A number of insurance men were in the building, and several of them were badly injured. W. J. McKay, of Niagara Falls, was one of these. He fell from the fire escape and hurt his back badly. Another, C. Dubois, of Syracuse, was severely burned about the face and hands. W. S. Dewey, of Rochester, was also scorched. Mrs. Mann, wife of one of the proprietors, and her young daughter were severely burned. Mr. Stafford, proprietor, and family are safe, though prostrated. Mark Osborne, one the hotel clerks, formerly of the Continental hotel, Philadelphia, is missing, and is supposed to be killed. A dead man lay in front of Dingen Brothers' store, covered by a mattress. People who thought it might be Superintendent Morford, of the Michigan Central Railroad, lifted up the covering, but turned it down again, saying it was not. The man Morford was afterward found. The dead man had black hair and a full face, which was

COVERED WITH BLOOD

and could not be recognized. A middle aged man with close cropped black whiskers and of heavy build, made his escape from the second or third floor on to the roof of James Creighton's saloon building, a frame structure, two stories high. He must have been severely burned internally, for he was unable to accept the means of escape afforded by a small ladder raised to him. He started to descend, but after proceeding a few steps he lost his balance and toppled over on to the sidewalk. He struck on his head and died almost instantly. The body was later identified as that of William Purcell, of this city, the local agent of Bradstreet's. By six o'clock he fire was under control. Nothing but the wall remained of what was once a splendid hotel. The Boston clothiers were burned out, also Ulbrich & Kingsley, and Peter, Paul & Bros., booksellers; James Creighton, saloon; Murdock's photograph gallery; and Jose Palacio, cigar manufacturer. This was on Main street side. Wahle's music store is uninjured, except by water. On Eagle street was St. James Hall. Nothing is left of this except the walls. On Washington street, the fire went as far as Tony Smith's saloon. This building was burned out in the rear, and ruined by water in front. A rather singular circumstance is that the elegant residence of Jewett Richmond, for whom the new hotel was named, was destroyed by fire a few weeks since.

AS FAR AS THE FIRE WENT.

FURTHER DETAILS.

BUFFALO, N. Y., March 18—At the present writing the police report ten dead at the various hospitals, and believe that there are from twenty-five to thirty killed or wounded in all.

THE BURNED HOTEL.

The Richmond was splendidly fitted up, at an expense of $75,000. Fuller & Townsend, of the Boston Clothing House, estimate their loss at $50,000, fully insured. Peter Paul & Brother's book and printing establishment was entirely cleaned out. The loss is unknown until the papers are secured from the safe. The insurance, however, will cover the greater part. Kingsley, books, loss $35,000, fully insured. Henry Smith, builder, had not yet completed his contract on the Richmond building, and had $8000 unfinished work on hand unpaid for, on which he holds insurance to the amount of $5000. At this hour (1 p.m.) the ruins are too hot to permit of a search. As far as known, are: William Pincell, of Rigdon & Co.; Martin Osborn, clerk of the Richmond; Katie Pierce, a servant; Minnie Kelly, a servant; Katie Kent, a servant; an unknown woman was found dead in the ruins of the cigar store.

THE DEAD

THE INJURED

The following is a list of the injured: Maggie Mulux, Fannie Harvey, Mary Nolan, servants, mortally injured: Geo. F. Micheils, New York; H. P. Smith, Syracuse; Edward Whalen, New York; Barry Davis, New York; W. J. Mackey, Fiagara Falls; C. W. Dubois, Syracuse; Jas. Finch, Cleveland; W. A. Haven, Montana; F. A. Kahan, New York, All these are at the different hospitals: very badly burned. Mark Osborne, hotel clerk, was burned to death.

The register and books of the hotel were burned, and as the bodies which are being excavated from the ruins are it is impossible to tell who they are. One hundred and twenty-five guests were at the hotel. About 40 are actually recovered as burned alive; about 20 are severely burned, and most of these are not expected to live; about 65 are supposed to have escaped with little or no injury.

SOME THRILLING SCENES

occurred at the burning of the Richmond this mornin. A. M. Merriam, of Toronto, representing Cox & Co., stock brokers, was on the third floor. He heard the indicator, and thinking it was morning call, leisurely touched the button in answer. A moment later he heard the cry of "fire," and dressing quickly, ran down stairs to the parlor, where he found a crowd of guests and others near the rotunda.

THE HEAT WAS TERRIFIC,

and he was badly burned about the head, face and hands. The stairs to the lower floor were gone. "Let us run through the kitchen," cried a woman, and she started, but she fell, overcome. Mr. Merriam fears she was lost. The rest of them escaped to the balconies, and were lowered to the ground on ladders.

Mary Witt, housekeeper of the Richmond, was on the fifth floor when the fire occurred. She made her escape with Mrs. Mann. The ringing of the electric bell in another room awoke her. She was half awake, and thought it was the bell to ring up the curtain in the Bunnell museum, when she heard somebody scream "Fire." Leaping out of her bed, she rushed out in her night clothes and down to the fourth floor into one of the guest's rooms fronting on Eagle street. The smoke

DROVE HER TO A WINDOW.

She hung by the ledge until rescued by the firemen. Her injuries are very painful.

H. B. Ramsay, of New York, is very seriously injured and not expected to live. He was on the fifth floor and as he rushed out of his room in his night clothes he ran against Mamie Mann, the little daughter of Mrs. W. J. Mann, in the hall. He grabbed the girl in his arms and jumped from the window to the roof of Bunnell's Museum. He picked his way with his little charge to the edge of the building and both were brought down a ladder by the firemen. Mr. Ramsay was taken to the Futch Hospital, dying. He was severely burned about the shoulders, face and arms, and he inhaled the flames while climbing out of the window. It is supposed he cannot live. While getting out of the window he buried Mamie Mann in his night gown, and thus protected her from the flames. He was loudly raving this morning in delirum, crying loudly for the little girl he had rescued.

Edward Whalen, travelling salesman, of Newbury, N. Y., was awakened by the bell in his room on the fourth floor. He was fumbling for his watch to see what time it was, when he heard in the halls. Opening his door he saw smoke and flames, whereupon he started for his window and jumped down to a shed below. Besides sustaining several factures he is also terribly burned about the face, hands and feet. His legs and feet are burnt almost to the bone, and some of his fingers are burnt off. If his life can be saved, which appears doubtful, his legs and several fingers will probably have to be amputated. He was groaning with pain this morning, and trying pluckily to endure his suffering.

THE SHRIEKS OF THE PEOPLE

LATEST CABLE NEWS

NIHILIST PLOT.

LONDON, March 18.—It is now supposed that last Sunday's plot to assassinate the Czar was planned by Degaieff, alias Jablenski, the famous Nihilist leader. It is believed he is in Switzerland. Every effort has been made to secure his arrest, but he has been able thus far to baffle the police.

THE QUEEN DEEPLY AFFECTED.

LONDON, March 18.—The attempt to assassinate the Czar was one of the most fleadish schemes ever concoted by the Anarchists. The affair has deeply affected the Queen, who is said to apprehend outrages by Socialists during the Jubilee celebration. She will, however, head the procession through the streets of London.

AMERICA'S CARDINALS.

ROME, March 18.—There was an enormous rush for tickets to yesterday's consistory; many notable Canadian and American visitors were present. Cardinals Taschereau and Gibbons have been appointed members of the congregation on extraordinary ecclesiastical affairs.

A PERFECT CONSTITUTION.

BERLIN, March 18.—One of the Emperor's physicians states that the Emperor's constitution is so wonderfully good that it resembles a perfect clock work, and will only stop when run down. It is to prevent this that he is continually watched in order to avert or cure every indisposition. "Of course," said the doctor, 'he requires a good deal of sleep. He has occasionally swooned, but they are simply the result of overwork and they no longer alarm us because we have found a certain remedy."

LABBY ESCAPES AGAIN.

LONDON, March 18.—The jury has refused to award damages to Simmons, the moneylender, who brought suit against Mr. Labouchere for libel because of an article published in Truth exposing the exorbitant rates charged by Simmons.

STILL CONFERRING.

LONDON, March 18.—Lord Hartington and Mr. Morley had a conference last night at the residence of Sir William Vernon Harcourt.

TAKEN TO DUBLIN.

DUBLIN, March 18.—Father Keller, on his journey to Dublin, met with ovations at all the stations. He was received at Thurles by Archbishop Croke and twelve priests. The Archbishop assured Father Keller of his sympathy and approval, and he warned the Government that any attempt to crush the priesthood would fail. On his arrival at Dublin Father Keller was enthusiastically received. He was not conveyed to jail. Entering the Lord Mayor's carriage he was driven through the city to the Imperial Hotel. The carriage was followed by thousands of people with banners, bands of music, etc. The Lord Mayor, in a speech, said that thousands of priests were ready to follow Father Keller to jail,

ELECTION IRREGULARITIES.

THE contention of the London Advertiser that "the electors are, during the continuance of the writs, the supreme power in the state," and that "any irregularity is cured" by their election, cannot be successfully maintained either as regards law or justice. The electors of any particular constituency are not above the law; they have not the right to repeal or amend any statute enacted by the representatives of all the constituencies sitting in Parliament. If the law is defective, the remedy is to change it, not to set it at defiance. If the statutes do not so provide they ought to be amended in the sense, that irregularities committed by any other person than the candidate should not interfere with his choice by the electors unless of such a nature as to have effected the result; that irregularities of the candidate himself should operate against him, unless they are merely technical and not a material infraction of the spirit of the law.

Applying these principles, it is clear that irregularities by deputy returning officers or their officials should not be allowed to neutralize the decision of the electors, if that is clearly indicated, but that the offender should be liable to penalties for gross faults of omission or commission. If the electors choose for their representative one who is not eligible by law, they have only themselves to thank for throwing away their votes, as if they had given them to an infant, a woman or an alien. In Prince Edward Island they seem especially fond of this course, having already had their choice annulled for giving their votes to a member of the Local Legislature contrary to the law, he having tendered an irregular resignation which might have been withdrawn if he were defeated, and it is reported on good authority that they have adopted the same course again. This is obviously not only illegal but it is unfair, for it enables a party that does not regard the existing law to obtain, by running a strong but disqualified candidate, an unfair advantage over a party that respects the law and abides by it to the extent of not running their strongest candidate if ineligible. For this reason irregularities of this kind should not be tolerated.

As to the vexed Queen's County case in New Brunswick, the reports conflict, so that at present a fair conclusion cannot be arrived at. If, as is stated, the deposit made on behalf of Mr. King was not only irregular, but was made by an unauthorized person in such a manner that it could have been withdrawn and could not have been held if the result required its forfeiture, it clearly was only a sham deposit, and Mr. King had by our law no standing as a candidate. If on the other hand the deposit, though made in a technically irregular manner or by the wrong person, was made in good faith on behalf of Mr. King and in such a way as to be made available for the forfeiture he might incur, the decision of the electors should take effect. If that is not the law it ought to be.

The fierce outcry in the organs of Mr. Blake tends rather to becloud this important subject than to elucidate any imperfections in our statutes that require amendment. They seem to claim that any Reformer should be allowed to sit even if ineligible by law, and even if elected by the grossest irregularities, should he have been able by any means to get the majority of votes. They also seem to claim that the election of any Conservative should be upset if the most farfetched technical objection can be found against him. For one salient instance the organs of Mr. Mercier proclaim triumphantly that he will upset the certain election of Mr. Joncas in Gaspe by refusing to accept his resignation as Sheriff, so that he might be disqualified as holding office. And the very organs that glory in this trick had just before boasted that Mr. Mercier had resolved to dismiss Mr. Joncas from office for the crime of being a Conservative candidate, and had even named the successor he had chosen. So, too, Reform journals are claiming that Sir John Macdonald's election for Carleton is void because, as they assert, his deposit was made in the same irregular manner as that on behalf of Mr. King, though in his case being a Reformer they hold it an outrage that he should suffer for the irregularity. It is needless to say that this claim is only another instance of their use of any falsehood to attack Sir John, for the deposit in Carleton was made by the duly appointed agent of Sir John, at the time and place and in the manner required by the statute. But though it is an unfounded claim, its falseness does not conceal their animus.

The law should be made as perfect as possible to carry out its intention of giving effect to the free choice of the electors from among eligible candidates. The Opposition should aid the Ministerialists in bringing this about, but they cannot assist in doing so by howling for the disqualification of any Conservative on the merest quibble and for the maintenance in his seat of any Reformer however clearly ineligible or wrongfully elected.

THE Mowat Administration, to excite prejudice against Sir John Macdonald, asserts that the Dominion Government has given less assistance to railways in Ontario than in the other Provinces. In making the comparison it omits a trifle of a thousand miles or so of railway constructed through Western Ontario, and opening up for settlement a vast area.

MR. A. M. Ross, the Provincial Treasurer, in the budget debate, said:—

"The hon. gentlemen opposite were accustomed to say that the Government was trenching upon the capital of the Province by using the money derived from the Crown lands. He defied them to mention a single Province which had taken these receipts and funded them."

We beg to accept the challenge of Mr. Ross, and to mention a single Province. It is Ontario. Such was the course pursued under the Administration of Mr. J. Sandfield Macdonald. When he converted part of our real estate capital into cash capital, he did not diminish it, but left it to produce an income. Mr. Ross and his colleagues have consumed this cash capital and the proceeds of further sales of our real estate capital to meet our current expenditure.

THE false charge of bribery brought by the Reformers against Mr. Temple, the Conservative member for York, N.B., has been exploded, the slanderers not being able to produce any evidence upon which the Grand Jury could even put him on trial. From various parts of the Dominion come similar reports of the breaking down of Reform calumnies of this nature, invented just before the elections for the mere purpose of unfairly prejudicing the Conservative candidates, when the inevitable refutal could not come till later.

DEPOSITIONS have been published showing wholesale attempts by a Reform canvasser to coerupt the Indian voters of Caughnawaga by means of money and whiskey. This was in the county of Laprairie, where Mr. Tasse was defeated.

KINMOUNT.

THE RAILWAY.—The Irondale railway is now open and running regular trains twice daily, between here and the terminus. There is promise of a considerable traffic and large quantities of minerals will be exported. It seems quite certain that this will become the centre of a most important mineral region, for the Americans are at length beginning to comprehend the situation, and are recognizing that this is the most important mineral district on the American continent. Our iron ore is far supieror to that of the Pennsylvania region being both richer, and more free from impurity, and it is scattered in exhaustible profusion between here and Bancroft. A tract of country, fifty miles wide, is studded with iron deposits, only awaiting capital and intelligence to develop the richest mining district in North America. It is reported here that an American syndicate has been formed to buy largely of our iron and mineral lands, and work them on a gigantic scale. This village has a prospect of illimitable possibilities.—Bobcaygeon Independent.

MARMORA.

GOLD MINING.—M. H. Powell and his staff of workers seem to be meeting with grand success in taking the gold out of the ore by the new process, known only to Mr. Powell. Miners of thirty years' experience stand astonished. They are treating it at Malone, and taking what has be raised at Deloro, part of which has been already treated, but with little success. He was in town on Monday with a bar worth in the neighborhood of $1,000.

LYNX.—Last week Mr. Frank Brown was drawing floats to Beaver Creek, about two miles up, and in coming down to the creek with a load observed a lynx following him. Stopping his team he took his whip and went back to the encounter, but at the attempt to strike the animal it growled and made as though intending to assume the defensive. Just then four others hove in sight and thinking discretion the better part of valor, Mr. Brown gave up the contest. About the same time two more were seen on the road east of the creek. Where are these lynx hunters.—News-Argus.

BOBCAYGEON.

COMMITTED.—James Mangemery, wife, daughter and son were brought before a bench of Magistrates on Tuesday, charged with assaulting John Macdermott with intent. They were committed for trial, bail being accepted.

NARROW ESCAPE.—Mr. James Wright met with a narrow escape, on Monday evening, whilst working in J. L. Read's woods. He and some others were engaged in chopping wood, and were falling a large maple. The tree was about eighteen inches through, and was leaning. They had chopped the under side, and were sawing the other, when the tree started to fall. Suddenly it split from the saw cut on the stump, ran clean up some twenty feet, then broke of on the under side, and slid back on the under half, throwing the butt a considerable distance in the rear of the stump and off to the side on which Mr. Wright stood. This back and side movement of the tree brought it directly over Wright who could not get out of the way. He fell on his face and the tree crushed his back. Fortunately the tree fell over a few sticks of wood, which received much of the weight and pressure, otherwise Wright would have been instantly crushed to death. As it was his companions had to saw the tree to get it off him, and he was taken home on a sleigh. It is expected that he will recover though he will be confined to the house for some time.—Independent.

A Large Farm.

The largest producing farm in the world lies in the south-west corner of Louisiana, owned by a northern syndicate, and having for general manager Mr. J. B. Watkins. It runs 100 miles north and south. The immense tract is divided into convenient pastures with stations of ranches every six miles. The fencing alone cost nearly $50,000. The land is best adapted to rice, sugar, corn and cotton. The cultivation, ditching, etc., is done by steam power. With the help of only three men 30 acres a day can be ploughed.—Arcadia (La.) Sentinel.

The Jubilee in Canada.

Tuesday, June 21st, has been fixed as the official date for celebrating the Queen's jubilee in the Dominion. All municipalities and corporations are, however, at liberty to choose any other date if they prefer it.

King Tofa's Atrocities.

News has been received at Lagos from the French settlement of Porto Novo, of some horrible atrocities committed by King Tofa, the reigning monarch there. A few days ago a prince and his son, whose names are not yet known here, having been accused of possessing poisons with which they intended to kill the king, were seized, and, by order of the king, their jaws were broken and their tongues cut out, and they were afterward hanged. Not very long ago two boys, sons of another prince, were murdered in the presence of their mother and sister. Both of the latter are stated to be now in prison.

Previous to this another terrible atrocity was committed on two other subjects, a man and a woman. The torture went on for four days, during which time each had an eye put out, the woman was scalped and the man otherwise ill-treated. Their bodies were afterwards cut with knives, salt being put into the wounds, and finally dry grass was tied round them and then oiled and set on fire. It is also stated that when the news of the death of one of the Lagos government commissioners reached King Tofa he ordered guns to be fired.—St. James' Gazette.

The Fishery Seizures.

HALIFAX, March 17.—The taking of evidence bearing on the seizure of the Portland schooner Ella M. Doughty commenced to-day before Mr. W. W. McLellan, the commissioner appointed for the purpose by the Vice-Amiralty Court. Three witnesses were examined and four others will give testimony to-morrow. All seven witnesses are called on behalf of the Dominion Government to prove that bait was purchased in St. Ann's Bay, C.B., for the Ella M. Doughty and delivered on board that vessel. The proceedings of the court are held in private.

OVER WORKED Women.

For "worn-out," "run-down," debilitated school teachers, milliners, seamstresses, housekeepers, and over-worked women generally, Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is the best of all restorative tonics. It is not a "Cure-all," but admirably fulfills a singleness of purpose, being a most potent Specific for all those Chronic Weaknesses and Diseases peculiar to women. It is a powerful, general as well as uterine, tonic and nervine, and imparts vigor and strength to the whole system. It promptly cures weakness of stomach, indigestion, bloating, weak back, nervous prostration, debility and sleeplessness, in either sex. Favorite Prescription is sold by druggists under our positive guarantee. See wrapper around bottle. Price $1.00, or six bottles for $5.00. A large treatise on Diseases of Women, profusely illustrated with colored plates and numerous wood-cuts, sent for 10 cents in stamps. Address, WORLD'S DISPENSARY MEDICAL ASSOCIATION, 663 Main Street, Buffalo, N. Y.

GREAT

CLEARING OUT SALE.

GENUINE ∴ BARGAINS

In Each Department.

I have decided to let the whole of my present Stock go at Wholesale Cost Price. In these days people expect Bargains, and feel justified in obtaining all they can for their money.

I will give the inhabitants of Peterboro' and surrounding country a chance for once of getting Reliable Goods at prices that will, in truth, be Bargains, of which they are invited to come and judge for themselves.

The Stock consists of the usual Staple Goods, besides a large variety of FANCY GOODS not to be had elsewhere in town, viz.:—

Dress Goods, Velveteens, Gloves, Hosiery and Underwear.

Blankets, Quilts, Table Linen, &c.

Small Wares in great variety.

Fancy Goods, such as Desks, Work Boxes, etc.

Fancy Work in Slippers, Cushions, Brackets, Silk and Filoselle Wools, etc.

Mens Underwear in Merino and Wool, and Mens Furnishings generally.

After 23 years' business in Peterborough, I wish to give my old customers and the public generally something unusual in Real Bargains, and will be pleased to see them as quickly as possible avail themselves of them, for, of course, those coming early will have the largest choice.

"Reporter—I have called, madam, to ascertain your opinion as to the truth of the rumor that your son-in-law set fire to his own house.

"Mrs. Bliss seemed overcome with emotion. Affliction such as hers should, perhaps, be sacred from the public eye. But the public is interested in unveiling the mystery, perhaps the crime, that lies back of the fire on Linden street. The lady spoke at length, with visible reluctance, substantially as follows:

"Mrs. Bliss—I would be far from laying any straw in the way of my daughter's husband. He has enough to answer for as it is. My poor darling's mental condition, and what brought her to it, are well enough known.

"Reporter—Did you understand your daughter at any time to convey the impression that she saw Mr. Dumoray applying a match to the combustible material in the library?

"Mrs. Bliss—Of course my poor daughter is out of her mind. What she says may be fact, or it may be only an insane fancy. But when she has seemed to be in her right senses she has insisted from the first that she saw her husband carry the children down stairs and out of the door to the rustic garden house. He went carefully, so as not to waken them. He left them there, and went into the library. My daughter watched him. She saw a bright blaze in the corner of the room. Then she ran away and came to me. She was frightened almost to death, as well she might have been, poor darling!

"Reporter—What motive could Mr. Dumoray have for the deed?

"Mrs. Bliss—The house was heavily insured, though I would not wish to think a man of his wealth would commit such a crime on that account. He was educated in Germany. He has often been heard to regret he ever left there. He could hide the children awhile, and then go to Germany and take them with him, after the excitement of the fire had blown over. It has been hinted to us that he wished to get rid of his wife to marry a woman in Germany. You will spare a wretched mother's feelings further, I am sure. I do not wish to be forced to conclude my son-in-law was such a monster as to—No, no, he surely would not have set fire to the house expecting that his insane wife would be burned to death! My child has been the victim of cruel wrong.

"Here the afflicted lady's feeling quite overcame her, and the reporter took his leave, after thanking her for her kindness in forcing herself to talk on a subject so repugnant to her feelings.

"Mrs. Bliss refrains from making any accusation against her son-in-law, it will be observed. Her delicacy of feeling in this respect can only increase the sympathy which must be universally drawn toward this estimable lady in her sorrows."

It fell like a thunder bolt upon Philip Dumoray. It is not too much to say that at this point his feelings also quite overcame him. He had not wholly learned, at that time, the self control which is the first duty of man to himself. He rose slowly to his feet, in a white rage, he muttered:

"——. I'll murder that old woman."

He hurried out to the street and away. He rang the bell at the Bliss mansion.

"Where is Mrs. Bliss?"

The grim old colored serving man answered:

"Yer mother-in-law's got the mewks today."

"Wha-a-t?"

"Yer mother-in-law's got the mewks."

"What do you mean?"

"She's got one of her spells, sir, when nobody can do nothing to please her. If you ask her if she'll have the carriage out she snaps your head off, and says we're tryin' to torment her into her grave. Then she draws her mouth down at the corners, and says she'll be in her grave soon enough, dear knows, with all her sufferings. Better not go in to-day, sir."

The man was an old familiar, and spoke his mind to Philip. But Philip strode past him. On a sofa up stairs lay the lady with the powerfully emotional nature. She had a wrinkled nose. It was red and shiny to-day from much rubbing. Her eyes were as the leaden, lifeless orbs of a mackerel in pickle. The good dame had an inexhaustible capacity for tears. Her mouth was drawn down at the corners habitually. To-day it was very far down, indeed. She looked up when she heard somebody coming.

She saw it was her son-in-law and put her handkerchief to her eyes. He laid a heavy hand on her shoulder. He held the paper toward her.

"Woman, what devil's lie is this?"

Instantly she removed the handkerchief and stared at him with dry, spiteful eyes.

"Go on," she said. "It's like you. You want to beat me black and blue, do you? and drive me crazy, as you did my poor darling? Go on. I'm only a weak, helpless woman."

His hand dropped. A crimson flush, turning to purple, slowly dyed the cheek of Philip Dumoray.

"If people will talk, I'm sure I can't help it," she went on complainingly. "I don't see why you come here to insult me in my own house, and my poor darling insane, and me with my nerves all shattered."

"She put up her handkerchief again.

"I beg your pardon," said Philip. "But you must know you set this lie going yourself, by your insinuations."

Down went the handkerchief.

"The idea!" exclaimed Mrs. Bliss.

Have you ever noticed how a woman looks when she says—the idea! A man never says it. Into those two words she puts all the emphasis that should go with those stronger expressions, the use of which is denied her on account of her sex. She may not swear, she may not fire a bootjack at the candle, she may not even go off and drown her sorrows. She may only say—the idea! In that one expletive she must vent all the venom and vinegar of her gentle nature.

Mrs. Bliss sat bolt upright and remarked—"The idea!"

Philip Dumoray sighed. His mind was settling into the coldness of despair. He saw the disadvantage he was at. The lady saw the advantage which was hers. Up went the handkerchief.

"You came here to bring me down with sorrow to an early grave," she whined. "As if I hadn't got enough to bear from you now, with my poor darling where she is, and my nerves all shattered—boo-hoo!"

Philip turned away. The lady had left a corner of one eye uncovered to watch him. She saw the movement, and sat upright again. She became majestic. In the consciousness of injured virtue and superior sufferings, the estimable lady fairly towered, at that moment. With a scepter-like wave of her hand towards the door, and in a toploftical tone of voice, she said:

"Relieve this mansion of your odious presence instantly!"

Well, he went.

He resolved to do what he could to right the wrong he had wrought. He set aside a portion of his property in the hands of trustees who would use the income for the care of his wife. Thus she was surely provided for.

The rest he would devote to searching the earth for his sons. He could not give them up.

He spent all his fortune in the search for his boys. At last he gave them up for dead. He returned home. No comfort for him there. He found himself looked upon with coldness and mistrust. Men who had broken his bread in better days passed him without speaking. Women who had been his mother's friends gave him a glance of horror, and hurried on, in the common belief he had fired his own house with the monstrous intent that his insane wife should perish within. Thus skillfully had malice wrought its work.

He had now to earn his bread. He looked for work. Who would give employment to one suspected of so foul a crime? No man. At length he was driven to say:

"I will go away, where no living creature has heard my name. I will shut this hateful world out of my sight."

Were not these hard lines for a young man who had always had his own way?

To be Continued.

NEWS NOTES.

Lady Tupper left England on Thursday by steamer Parisian for Canada.

The city and province of Venice have been visited by a very severe snowstorm.

In view of the improved situation Count von Munster, the German Ambassador at Paris, has issued invitations for an entertainment on the 21st inst.

The traffic receipts of the Canadian Pacific railway for the week ending March 14th were $127,000, an increase of $2,000 compared with the corresponding week last year.

The traffic receipts of the Grand Trunk railway for the week ending March 12th were $329,221, ad increase of $10,518 compared with the corresponding week last year.

The Radical press of Paris takes M de Lesseps to account for saying France is the natural friend of Germany, and advises him to stay at home in future and confine himself to canal matters.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla, being highly concentrated, requires smaller doses, and is more effective, than any other blood medicine. It is the cheapest because the best. Quality and quantity should be considered.

The Toronto City Council on Thursday adopted by-laws for the issue of debentures for $400,000 and $350,000 for the erection of a court house and city hall, which will be submitted to a vote of the ratepayers on April 14th.

"Words fail to express my gratitude," says Mr. Selby Carter, of Nashville, Tenn., "for the benefits derived from Ayer's Sarsaparilla. My system was filled with scrofula, blotches, ulcers, and mattery sores, all over my body." Mr. Carter was entirely cured by Ayer's Sarsaparilla, 8 months ago, and has had no return of the scrofulous symptoms.

A large deputation of paper manufacturers and dealers from all parts of old Canada on Thursday waited upon the Minister of Finance and Customs to ask for a readjustment of the tariff in regard to the duty on paper, blank books, and straw board. Sir Charles Tupper promised to lay the matter before his colleagues, who would give it immediate consideration.

A WONDERFUL REMEDY.

The value of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, in the protection it affords from the dangers of pulmonary disorders, cannot be overestimated. Mr. C. K. Philips, Pittsburg, Pa., writes: "About three years ago I had severe Laryngitis, which resulted in chronic hoarseness. By the use of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral I have since entirely regained my health." Mr. Henry Russell, Excelsior Printing Co., New York, writes: "Influenza became epidemic in my neighborhood. Several members of my family suffered severely with it, all of whom took Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, and were cured by it in a few days. It is a wonderful medicine for Influenza. Too much cannot be said in its favor."

E. M. Sargent, 41 Andover st., Lowell, Mass., says: "I commenced using Ayer's Cherry Pectoral about the year 1842, as a family medicine, for Coughs and Colds, and have always kept it in my house since that time. I consider it the best remedy that can be had for these complaints." Dr. J. B. Robertson, Clayton, N. C., writes: "I have used Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, in my family and practice, for a number of years, and have no hesitation in recommending it. It is an admirable preparation, and well-qualified to do all that is claimed for it." E. J. Styers, Germanton, N. C., writes: "Ayer's Cherry Pectoral is the best Cough preparation I ever saw. It gives instant relief."

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral

has cured a Cough in a few doses. It always relieves irritation of the lungs or throat, and arrests the tendency to inflammation. It strikes at the foundation of all Pulmonary diseases, is without a rival as an expectorant, and is a sure cure for the most obstinate Coughs and Colds. L. Garrett, Texana, Texas, writes: "I have used Ayer's Cherry Pectoral in my family for twenty years. For throat and lung diseases, I consider it a wonderful remedy."

PERSONAL.

To all who Buy Seeds.

"As ye sow so shall ye reap" is a truism worthy of consideration by all who are seeking for success in Garden, or Farm operations. It is evident to every thoughtful mind that Choice Flowers, Fine Vegetables and Grain, cannot be produced by sowing a poor grade of Seed. With this object in view, I have been careful in selecting my Seeds for this season's operations. I make it a point to test the vitality of my Seeds before selling them to my customers, so that the disappointment of Seed not growing is greatly lessened. My stock will be found large and choice. Trusting to be favoured with an extensive patronage this season in my new establishment, Floral Drug Store, corner of George and Charlotte streets, opposite the market.

THE CITY AND SUBURBS

They were There.

Messrs. Jim Dolan and Harry LeBrun were delighted with everything in Ennismore on St. Patrick's day.

Y. W. C. T. U.

The Young Women's Christian Temperance Union will meet on Tuesday afternoon next at 3 o'clock in the Y.M.C.A Hall.

COMPETENT judges say TURNBULLS is the right house to buy boys' and youth's ready made Clothing. He gives you new styles, low prices and good quality combined.

Badly Hurt.

This afternoon as a little son of Mr. Enos Dunford was climbing on a sleigh on George street a piece of timber came off, fell on his leg and broke it. The boy's face was considerably bruised also.

Now is the time to order your Spring Mantle or Dolman. An extensive stock of cloths to select from at TURNBULL'S, all the new spring styles being now intto-duced.

Cemetery Company.

A meeting of the Directors of the Little Lake Cemetery Company was held on Friday afternoon to make arrangements for the purchase of ornamental trees, and the transaction of other minor matters.

Accident.

This morning Mr. R. Tanner, foreman of Hall's biscuit factory, suffered a painful accident. He was preparing the "mixer" for work when his right hand was caught and the flesh was torn off his fingers. The attendant physician on examination found that fortunately no bones were broken.

The March style of Domestic patterns is now out. All the new patterns in stock at Turnbull's.

Opera House To-night.

Mass Temperance meeting conducted by the band of workers and singers from Hamilton, in the Opera House to-night. All men are invited, whether prohibitionists, wine and beer men, high license men, moderate or immoderate drinkers. No charge for admission, but a collection will be taken.

St. Patrick.

The popular priest of Fenelon Falls, the Rev. Father McEvery, preached in Lindsay on the 17th of March. His subject was, "St. Patrick and His Works." It was a magnificent discourse and is the theme of everybody's praise. The public will be gratified to learn that the reverend gentleman has consented to deliver the same address in Ennismore to-morrow (Sunday) evening at 7 o'clock.

GRAY Dress Goods are all the rage this season. You can have your choice of eight shades in thirteen different qualities at TURNBULL'S. Also Ball Trimming, Hercules Braid and Buttons to match. Miss Morgan, our dressmaker, leads the fashion in dressmaking. All her work turned out promptly.

The Churches.

The following is a list of services in the several churches to-morrow:—

ST. PETER'S CATHEDRAL.—At St. Peter's Cathedral, Roman Catholic, there will be three masses celebrated, the first at 7 a. m. the second at 8 a. m., and the third at 10.30 a. m. Vespers at 7 p. m.

ST. LUKE'S.— The regular services at St. Luke's Church will be conducted as follows: Holy Communion at 8 a.m., morning prayer Litany and sermon at 11 a. m., evensong at 7 p. m.

ST. JOHN'S CHURCH.—The regular services will be conducted as follows:—Holy Communion at 8.30 a.m.; Morning Prayer, Litany and sermon at 11 a.m.; Evening Prayer and sermon at 7 p. m.

ST. PAUL'S.—The Rev. Mr. Torrance will conduct the day's services.

BAPTIST CHURCH, Murray Street.—The Hamilton Helpers will officiate both morning and evening.

METHODIST CHURCH, Charlotte Street.—The Rev. I. Tovell will conduct the 11 o'clock service, and the Rev. F. H. Wallace the 7 o'clock service.

METHODIST CHURCH, George street.—The Rev. F. H. Wallace will conduct the 11 o'clock service, and the Rev. I. Tovell the 7 o'clock service.

ST. ANDREW'S CHURCH.—In the morning at 11 o'clock there will be a special service for children. In the evening the Rev. Mr. Bell will preach a sermon to parents, with special reference to the Bible in the schools.

METHODIST CHURCH, Mark street (Ashburnham)—The Rev. Mr. Wilson will conduct the services.

IF you have heard of anything new and have not seen it look for it at TURNBULL'S, the great novelty house. The counters are now piled with new spring goods, which we are pleased to show.

TEMPERANCE REVIVAL.

The First of the Meetings—The Hamilton Helpers Explain Their Work.

The first of the series of Gospel temperance meetings was held in the lecture room of the George Street Methodist Church on Friday evening. The attendance was quite large. The chair was occupied by the Rev. F. H. Wallace, B.D.

The meeting was opened by the audience singing "Rescue the Perishing" and prayer by Rev. Mr. Wallace.

Mr. WALLACE, after reading a Psalm, said that a year and a half ago they were agitating for the adoption of the Scott Act. They canvassed, held public meetings and obtained a victory. This was the first public temperance meeting held since then, perhaps because they thought it was a time for work. Were they better off since the Scott Act was adopted? A while ago they were despondent. They had seen how badly the Act could be enforced, and at its worst it was no worse than the license law. They had now seen where the defects were. Some things must be put right and some were being put right. The decision of Judge Galt had put an obstacle in their way. In explaining what the decision was he eulogized Mr. Rossiter. That judgment had been reversed, and the horizon was brighter. Another obstacle was the taking away of half the fines from the complainant by the Parliament and Government. When they had money for the work they could enforce the law, but it was a disgrace that they had to do work that should be done by officials—the town officials and especially the other officer who was especially appointed to enforce the Act. The main thing was to have the people back of them. Many in the town were opposed to them, and they were, therefore, to an extent forced back on moral suasion. They could make the Scott Act better than a license law, but it would never be a grand success until by moral agencies they obtained a predominant sentiment in its favor. Temperance societies and the churches were the hope of the temperance cause. He was glad that the Hamilton brethren had been brought, and he urged all to unite in the work.

Mr. HEBDON said that revivals were sometimes necessary in religious and in temperance work. They had come as plain men to devote some time to Gospel temperance work. They belonged to the Royal Templars of Temperance, the motto of which was the extinction of the liquor traffic. He explained the work of the travelling bands, and said their work had been a success all along the line. He related incidents, some of a humorous character, connected with their labors. They had now, he said, a chance to crush the monster of intemperance, and would the temperance and Christian people allow it to get the upper hand? The law could only be enforced by organization. He referred to work done by the Royal Templars, the W. C.T.U., and other societies, and said that the drinking custom was diminishing. It was a disgrace, he said, for a man to turn his parlor into a bar room and his daughter into a bar maid. He had known of a young man who received his first glass of wine from the hand of a young lady and had died of delirium tremens. A deputation which went to Ottawa with petitions for prohibition were told by Sir John Macdonald that when the country was ripe for prohibition he would give it, and they were also asked why they did not use the Scott Act. He had never drank a glass of liquor, yet he was a cripple through drink. He urged all to join in and help them.

Mr. DUNNETT took revenge on Mr. Hebdon, who had called him "the boy" of the party, by saying, "sometimes he calls me his boy and at ot er times Stead's boy. Both of them cannot be my father, and I think I will say I am Stead's boy and call Hebdon the old woman." He told of his experience with drink, which had had a strong hold on him, and he was now only striking back. He related in a very pathetic manner how he and his brother were made sober and led to conversion. He referred to traps set for young men, enlogized the perseverance of women, and concluded with an effective address to young men.

The singing of the Helpers, members Stead and Dunnett, was very pleasing. Mr. Dunnett sings nicely and Mr. Stead has certainly a very fine bass voice. The speaking of the party was plain, pointed, often humorous, and effective.

Before closing Mr. Hebdon asked all who would take a pledge to abstain from intoxicating liquor as a beverage as long as they lived to stand up, and almost the whole audience arose. The meeting closed with the doxology and benediction.

There will be a mass meeting for men in the Opera House this evening, and a meeting in the Opera House at 4 o'clock to-morrow. The Helpers will be in the Baptist church morning and evening to-morrow.

Cholera in South America.

NEW YORK, March 14.—A letter from Panama says cholera is playing havoc along the whole course of the Acoucaqua River, Chili. In Loocampo, Chili, a small town, from sixteen to twenty deaths were occurring daily and the people abandoned the place.

Astonishing Success

It is the duty of every person who has used Boschee's German Syrup to let its wonderful qualities be known to their friends in curing Consumption, severe Coughs, Croup, Asthma, Pneumonia, and in fact all throat and lung diseases. No person can use it without immediate relief. Three doses will relieve any case, and we consider it the duty of all Druggists to recommend it to the poor, dying consumptive at least to try one bottle, as 70,000 dozen bottes were sold last year, and no one case where it failed was reported. Such a medicine as the German Syrup cannot be too widely known. Ask your druggist about it Sample bottles to try, sold at 10 cents. Regular size, 75 cents. Sold by all Druggists and Dealers, in the United States and Canada. d90

SPORTS.

What Has Been Done and What is Doing.

At this season the thought of sporting people turn on summ-r sport topics and the question of the hour is "what are the prospects?" So far considerable has been done.

The canoists have been the first in the field. A new club has been organized and is growing in membership with great rapidity. Already their are ninety six members, and the enthusiastic commodore thinks that it will continue to grow till the season is well advanced. The club has been organized in an auspicious time. Unquestionably the meet of the A. C. A. this year will give it much support in its tendency to popularze the sport. Up to now no arrangements have been made as to a boat house. Committees have the matter in hand. A proposition will be made to the boat club to see if the new club can occupy the boat house. If not, perhaps one will be built. The Otonabee Club shows strength in its youth.

The Peterborough Boating Club, from present prospects, will be a live organization this year. Already a lot of "new blood" is promised. A number of the P. A. A. A. men, not satisfied with even the comprehensive list of sports embraced in the Association's list, intend to go in for boating. The canoeing branch of the club will profit by having at its head such a prominent man in canoe circles as Mr. E. B. Edwards.

The P. A. A. A. have commenced to put their house in order for the season. The various clubs have been organized and a big meeting of the friends and members of the Association will be held next week, when the annual statements will be made.

In lacrosse circles nothing has yet been done. The Riversides made a good record last season and should organize again. The annual meeting of the Peterborough Club will take place on the first Monday in April, and the annual convention of the National Amateur Lacrosse Association of Canada on Friday 8th of April in Montreal The Peterborough Club is entitled to send two delegates. The revival of lacrosse here would be popular.

As to baseball the prospects of organizing a club are nil. There is good material to form a first class amateur nine, and the game is popular, but somehow or other the nine all breaks to pieces when the first match is on. Probably a ball club will be formed in connection with the P. A. A. A.

A. C. A.

The Organization of the Northern Division—Election of Officers.

A meeting to organize the Northern Division of the A. C. A. was held in the office, over the express office on Friday evening.

There was a large and representative attendance from many parts of the Province, including Toronto, Brockville, Lindsay, Bobcaygeon, Lakefield, etc., etc. Col. Fairtlough started from Kingston but telegraphed that he was snowed up on the road.

Mr. E. B. EDWARDS, a former Commodore of the A. C. A., took the chair and explained how the formation of the Northern Division had been authorized, so the present meeting had been called for organization. A large number of clubs had resolved to join this division.

Letters were read from the Royal Military College, Kingston, Deseronto and other clubs giving their adhesion, though unable to be represented at this meeting.

The following nominating committee was chosen to select officers:—

Mr. Porteous, Lindsay C. C.
Mr. Minns, Bobcaygeon C. C.
Dr. Douglas, Lakefield C. C.
Mr. Toker, Peterborough C. C.
Mr. Jacques, Toronto C. C.
Mr. Fraser, Ubique C. C.
Mr. Bell, Brockville C. C.
Mr. Miller, Otonabee C. C.
Mr. Greenwood (for) R. M. C. C. C.
Dr. Neide (for) Deseronto C. C.

The nominations were made and the officers were elected as follows:—

VICE-COMMODORE—Col. H. C. Rogers,
REAR-COMMODORE—Col. S. T. Fairtlough.
EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE — Messrs. D. B. Jacques, Toronto C. C.; A. F. D. McGachan, Lindsay C. C.; Dr. Douglas, Lakefield C. C.; Colin Fraser, Ubique C. C.; F. S. Rathbun, Deseronto C. C.; F. Minns, Bobcaygeon C. C.

The chair was then taken by Col. H. C. Rogers as Vice-Commodore. He fittingly acknowledged the honor, and prophecised the success of the Northern Division of the A. C. A.

Many suggestions for the camp and other arrangements were discussed. The proposed date is from the 1st to the 12th of August at Stoney Lake.

The business was satisfactorily concluded and there was much enthusiasm as members of the different clubs exchanged reminiscences of past camps, and bright anticipations for the future.

Immediately after the general meeting the Executive Committee sat. They determined Stoney Lake for the locality and August 1st to 12th for the date of the camp. Necessary arrangements were made, many details, however, being left to the local officers and members to work out.

The Tichborne Estate.

Sir Henry Tichborne will come of age in May next, and will enter upon the possession of his much "claimed" estates, which will pay him a net income of about $45,000 a year.—N. Y. Tribune.

Food for Consumptives.

Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil, with Hypophosphites, is a most marvellous food any medicine. It heals the irritation of the throat and lungs, and gives flesh and strength quicker ter than any other remedy known It is very palatable, having none of the disagreeable taste of the crude oil. Put up in 50c. and $1.00 size.

AN UNPARALLELED SCENE.

Popular Excitement Over the Imprisonment of Father Keller.

DUBLIN, March 19.—The scene in the streets when Father Keller was being taken to court is unparalleled in the history of Dublin. A vast crowd had collected and when the priest appeared riding in the Lord Mayor's carriage cheer after cheer greeted him. The noise and excitement both inside and outside the court room were so great as to prevent the hearing of the case and the judge threatened to clear the court unless silence was maintained. Finally order was restored and Father Keller took the oath. He refused to testify as to his custody of funds under the plan of Campaign, on the ground that he would disclose the confidence reposed in him as a priest. The judge said there was no legal justification for his refusal, and said the question had no reference to the witness' spiritual capacity. Father Keller was then committed for contempt and was taken out of court and placed in a cab in the custody of the officers. The people immediately made a rush for the vehicle, removed the horses and dragged it through the streets to Kilmanham jail where the priest was locked up. Archbisnop Walsh of Dublin, was among the spectators in court, and he, William O'Brien, Lord Mayor Sullivan, and Timothy Harrington, M. P. followed the priest to gaol in carriages. Father Keller received a continuous ovation on the passage from the court to the gaol.

REVOLUTION RAMPANT.

The Revolt of Masses—Secret Societies Throughout Russia.

NEW YORK, March 19.—The Star's London cable says: The Berlin police to-night warned the St. Petersburg authorities that a day has been fixed by the terrorist section of the Nihilists for a simultaneous rising at St. Petersburg and Moscow and other large centres of population. Information in the possession of the Berlin police comes from the same source as that which enabled the warning to be sent to St. Petersburg that an attempt would be made on the Czar's life. The St. Petersburg police force is harassed and demoralized by the severity of their duties since the arrest of the students. The reports telegraphed that the Nihilists alone were concerned in the late plot are disproved by the fact that scores of constitutionalists have been arrested. The whereabouts of many of the arrested men is unknown to their families. Vienna reports state that the secret societies are known to be united. It is suspected they are plotting a general rising. The revolutionary movement is believed to have received an enormous impetus by the recent arrests. Branches of the revolutionary societies are stated to have been established in all of the principal towns and the movement is rapidly extending to the most remote parts of the country. It is believed that in many districts the nobility are leading the movement. The force of the agents of the secret police detailed to watch over the Czar's residence at Gatschina is now so large that the palace is completely surrounded and the entire vicinity is placed under surveillance night and day.

At Rustchuk some commotion has been caused by a letter written by the command of the Czar notifying the organizers of the fund raised for the families of the rebels shot in the recent rising against the Bulgarian Government of his Imperial Majesty's approval of the fund and of his intention to subscribe to it.

His Curiosity Satisfied.

WINNIPEG, Man., March 19.—M. H. Young, who left here in company with Alex. McArthur to find the North Pole returned yesterday. He only accompanied him as far as Norway House, when he came to the conclusion that Winnipeg was far enough north for him. Mr. McArthur went on, and is still determined to reach the pole.

The Retaliation Bill.

WASHINGTON, March 19.—Acting Secretary Fairchild to-day issued an order promulgating the Retaliation Bill.

The Canada Shipping Co's application for additional dock accommodation on the Mersey has been refused, and the question of the appropriation of berths will be raised.

WHAT IT MEANS.

True Inwardness of the B. & O. Deal—A Great Railway Policy Inaugurated.

PHILADELPHIA, March 19.—The Times says President Garrett reached Trenton fast evening where he had a conference with the representatives of the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe R. R. This appears to give confirmation to the report that the parties in control of the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe Road are also parties to the deal in a great combination with the Baltimore and Ohio as the central figure. A gentleman who is well posted said last evening: "The whole thing protends a development of railway combination such as followed the parliamentary legislation in England, and which has led to the establishment of confidence in railway property and securities there. Such a combination under the interstate commerce law will protect both the railways and the public, and develop a policy which will restore that confidence in railway securities which has been shaken by the ruinous competition of late years. Under the policy to prevail when this competition becomes a fixed fact stock jobbers and managers will no longer be able to enrich themselves at the expence of bona fide stock holders, and that is exactly what President Garrett aims at."

GREAT FLOODS IN DAKOTA.

The Territorial Capital Surrounded by Six Miles of Water.

BISMARCK, Dakota, March 19.—The Washburn gore broke Thursday night and early yesterday morning the river began to rise rapidly. A gorge was formed below the city. The ice carried everything with it and struck the immense warehouse of the Northern Pacific, one of the largest in the world. The workmen narrowly escaped drowning and in less than two hours the water was in the second stories of the river boarding houses which had been built on what is considered high ground. The warehouse, which is nearly seven hundred feet in length, was moved bodily over 300 feet and sent crushing against the bluffs. The loss to the building is over $15,000 The meadow and land south of Bismarck, comprises six thousand acres, and the ice is running over the newly made channel at the rate of ten miles an hour. The river at this point, which is usually three quarters of a mile wide, is now six miles in width. The Northern Pacific trains will be unable to cross the river for several days, and Bismarck will be the west terminus for a week. Mandan is submerged and the people are moving into the upper part of their houses. The loss at the river landing and on the meadow land here already reaches $300,000.

OUT OF WHOLE CLOTH.

No Truth Whatever in that Alleged "Fisheries Proposal."

A special despatch from Ottawa on March 19th to the Montreal Witness (Reform) says:—"There is not one word of truth in the lengthy outline of a proposal which it is alleged has been made by the Canadian to the British Government regarding the fisheries matter and which has been telegraphed to several American newspapers from here," stated a member of the Dominion Cabinet to your correspondent last night. "There is too much of this damaging bogus official information being telegraphed from Ottawa, and the Government are taking steps to punish the culprit as we have power to do" The whole despatch from beginning to end is a base imposition on the credulity of the public. To give genuinenes and official importance to his report the correspondent professes to have been shown a copy of the document, which is absolutely false. "As there appears to be considerable misapprehension as to the character of the official despatch in question, I may state," added the member of the Cabinet referred to, "that no proposal has emanated from the Dominion Government, the alleged proposal being simply a reply to a proposition made to us by the British Government regarding the settlement of the fishery dispute."

THE LACROSSE DISPUTE.

The Appeal of the Toronto Club to the Council of the National Association.

TORONTO, March 19.—The appeal of the Toronto Lacrosse Club to the Council of the National Association against the decision of the committee of management declaring the Torontos defaulters for not obeying the order of the committee to play off with the Montreal Club on the Saturday following the date of the great drawn match last autumn, has been published. The appeal contains 13 clauses, and states the case for the Torontos at length. The Council are asked to decide on the following:—

1st. Whether or not the action of the president, in accepting the note of the Cornwall delegate at the meeting held on the 23rd day of November, was justifiable and legal.

2nd. Whether the date so appointed by the said committee at the said meeting, viz., the 22nd November, 1886, was legally fixed, and, if not, that you correct it according to the provisions of section 8, of rule xxiv., and that another date be named.

3. Whether, under all the circumstances, the Toronto Lacrosse Club come under the designation of "defaulters."

4th. Whether the action of the said committee of management at the meeting held on the 14th day of March, instant, declaring the Toronto Lacrosse Club defaulters and relegating them to the foot of the list as a first class club and imposing upon them a fine of $50 was correct or justifiable.

GIRLS BRUTALLY WHIPPED.

ST. PETERSBURG, March 19.—Arrests of persons suspected of being implicated in the recent plot to assassinate the Czar have been made at Cronstadt and other garrisons. The police of Odessa arrested a gang of Nihilists and seized a quantity of explosives and tools used the manufacture of bombs. Two girls, students, have been flogged to insensibility for their connection with the Nihilist conspiracy.

CHOICE EPITHETS.

DUBLIN, March 19.—Mr. O'Brien, in a speech here last night, said Orange brutes and shameless partisans like Judge Boyd acted for the Government. "Bloody Balfour" had two great victories to boast of, the arrest of a poor fisherman and the arrest of a priest who would not be an informer. "Mr. Balfour was a simpering school girl." A programme of assassination was not likely to succeed.

FROM AN UNEXPECTED QUARTER.

LONDON, March 18.—The Daily News condemns Mr. Dillon for what it terms his unjustifiable hindrance of the business of the House in questioning the Government in regard to Father Keller's arrest.

REWARDED.

ST. PETERSBURG, March 19.—M. Poutilin, Chief Detective of the police force, has been handsomely rewarded for the zeal displayed by him in thwarting the designs of the plotters against the Czar.

ALL SOCIETIES FORBIDDEN.

ST. PETERSBURG, March 19.—The Minister of Education has decreed that students shall henceforth belong to no societies, not even those sanctioned by the Government, as experience has shown that they are liable to be misled by political agitators.

DYNAMITE AND STRYCHNINE.

ST. PETERSBURG, March 19.—It is reported that shells loaded with seven pounds of dynamite and 200 strychnine poisoned bullets have been found in the conspirators' lodgings.

IT WASN'T A BARGAIN.

SALISBURY SICK.

LONDON, March 19.—Lord Salisbury is ill, but was able to preside at the Cabinet Council to-day.

A CITY COUNCIL IN DANGER.

LONDON, March 19.—It is expected the French government will dissolve the municipal council of Marseilles, because it manifested approval of the commune yesterday.

ISISH LEGISLATION.

LONDON, March 19.—The statement is repeated to-day upon fairly good authority that the Government has adopted Mr. Chamberlain's Irish Land Bill. Lord Hartington promises his support.

RUSSIA WANTS NO WAR.

BRUSELLS, March 19.—The Nord, the Russian organ, tries to dispel the fears of the German press that Russia will seek to escape from internal troubles by a European war.

JELOUSY OF THE NATIVES.

LONDON, March 19.—The Bengal chamber of commerce has presented a memorial to the government, denouncing the system of appointing natives to offices before held by Europeans, as subversive of efficiency and likely to affect the stability of the Indian empire.

CONDEMNED TO DIE.

ST. PETERSBURG, March 20.—It is reported that the Czar received a letter dated March 1 from the Executive of the Nihilist Committee informing him that at the sitting of the committee on February 22, he was condemned to death, and that fifty members were appointed to execute the sentence.

WALES TO BE PRESENT.

LONDON, March 20.—The Prince of Wales has started for Berlin, where he will represent the Queen on the occasion of the 90th anniversary of Emperor William's birth.

THEY WANT ALEXANDER.

LONDON, March 20.—The Post's Vienna correspondent says:—A majority of the Bulgarian delegates are resolved to re-elect Prince Alexander King of Bulgaria, just as soon as the Regents deem it opportune.

COLONIAL CONFERENCE.

LONDON, March 18.—The official programme of the Colonial Conference is issued to-day. The conference meets on April 4th, with Sir Henry Holland, Secretary for the Colonies, in the chair, at the foreign office. A number of peers and colonists of distinction will be present. Colonies without responsible Governments will not be officially represented; but the secretary will invite gentlemen conversant with the affairs of such colonies to attend the opening meeting and during the discussion of particular subjects' where their knowledge would be useful. The conference will sit till April 7, when it will probably adjourn till April 15. The delegates will be entertained at a banquet by the Imperial Federation League, and will be made honorary members of the Carlton Club, an honor never before conferred. The Canadian appointment is spoken of by the members of the Imperial Federation League as inadequate, considering the importance of the conference. They say that if Sir John Macdonald cannot attend, one of his colleagues should come over with Sir Alexander Campbell to represent the views of the Government.

THE POLICE CONDEMNED.

LIMERICK, March 18.—The Municipal Council of Limerick to-day adopted a resolution condemning the police and Government of Ireland for fomenting disturbances among the people of the country for the purpose of securing justification for coercion.

NO GROUNDS FOR ANXIETY.

BERLIN, March 20.—The Post says French anxiety over the forming of a new alliance between Italy, Austria and Germany is without foundation, and that no recent event is more favorrble for the maintenance of the peace of Europe.

DISPLEASING TO FRANCE.

LONDON, March 20.—It is stated that the new alliance between Germany, Austria and Italy places each of these powers on an equality. All three will undertake the protection of individual interests, the infringement of which might disturb the peace of Europe. Annoyance is expressed in Paris that the treaty was signed while the attention of France was fixed upon Germany. A former Foreign Minister of France said to a correspondent of the London Times:—"I should have shrunk from nothing to prevent the signing of this treaty, which I consider the most serious and vexatious event for us that has happened in the past sixteen years."

A ROW IN BELFAST.

BELFAST, March 20.—A private soldier named Edgeworth was arrested here last night or drunkenness. A mob gathered and attempted to rescue the prisoner. The police were stoned and several injured. At this juncture help arrived and the crowd dispersed. Six arrests were made.

A REIGN OF TERROR.

LONDON, March 20.—Reports from St. Petersburg indicate that a reign of terrorism has commenced. Arrests are being made by the hundreds, neither age nor sex being spared where police suspicion rests. It is said that torture is being applied to some of the prisoners to obtain a revelation of Nihilistic plans.

MOVEMENT IN BULGARIA.

CONSTANTINOPLE, March 20.—The Turkish government has warned the Bulgarian government of a projected rebellious movement from Roumelia under Captain Nabokoff with a band or armed Montenegrins.

AUSTRIA AND SERVIA.

BELGRADE, March 20.—The newspaper Adjek states that a military convention has been concluded between Austria and Servia, according to the terms of which Servia will be an ally of Austria in the event of a war batween the latter country and Russia.

PATIENCE PREACHED.

Mr Gladstone Speech An Actual Government for Ireland.

LONDON, March 18.— Mr. Gladstone delivered a speech at the dinner last night given by the Yorkshire members of the House of Commons. He began by refering to his belief that there was a growing opinion in favor of Home Rule, even among its former opponents. He counselled Lord Salisbury to waken from his sleep, if he wished to banish this nightmare. The Premier, however, said Mr. Gladstone appeared determined to remain asleep. Mr. Gladstone maintained that it was impossible to deal with other questions until the Irish question had been cleared out of the way. He said; "I wish to say a word regarding what I conceive to be my obligations towards different parties and sections we have to deal with. In starting, we are agreed that Ireland asks effective self-government in affairs properly and exclusively Irish, subject to a questionable supremacy of the Imperial Parliament. Should she extend her demands beyond this limit, I frankly tell you I could no longer promote her cause, but so long as the demands she utters are just and within the bounds of moderation, I will stand fast to her cause during what remains to me, of political life." (Cheers.) Turning to the Unionists he said: "I accept Sir George Trevelyan's desire for reunion as a proof of the loyalty of his heart toward us, but I so far differ with him that if the Tories are able to settle the question satisfactorily I wish them with all my heart to do so. The present schism in our party is useful, showing as it does that we, as a political body, are placing national interests and material questions above party consideration. While there is so much talk about offers and proposals, let us not conceal from ourselves the fact that this is strictly not a question of individuals but one of nations, and when nations collide individuals are liable to be squeezed. (Laughter.) I rejoice to read what has been done and said in a spirit of approxximation. It is our first duty to do and say nothing that might wound dissidents. I rejoice in the evidences of approximation among the Liberal masses and I would wish it were the same with the Liberal party. We should, however, guard against the acceptance of formulæ which though appearing to make for an agreement prove upon examination to be valueless. It is our great duty, and I refer especially to myself, never to forget the importance of discovering if we can contrive a charge which will be in the nature of improvements on the proposals we have made. I may say that my mind has been upon the subject every day since last session. As regards the main proposals we had in view it is futile to talk of extending them, but in regard to those improvements it will be a pleasurable duty to seek them. I cherish the hope that there are a variety of points on which an improvement might be made on the proposals we submitted to the last Parliament, and that these points will multiply as we draw near the time which is still distant when we can be in a condition to give any practical effect to our political views. One point which helped our defeat and especially caused difficulty among our best friends was the proposal to use the imperial credit to buy out the Irish landlords. I cherish the hope that it will be perfectly possible to devise a plan for the safe purchase of estates in Ireland, whereby the landlord will receive perfect security with respect to the price of his property, without trenching on the imperial credit, but any such plan known to me requires as a vital condition the institution of a real Irish Government able to speak and act for Ireland, without which I fail to see how to stir a step toward the adoption of such a plan. (Cheers.) Finally, whilst continually considering how to improve on our plans, let us above all things be careful on no account to depart, under attraction, seduction, or any other phrase, whatever from the substance and reality of those plans. What I now look to is the teachings of experience and events, and I would beware of too rapid progress. What I earnestly desire is the gradual approximation of not only the Liberal rank, but of the nation at large. We want a good stock of patience, composure and good humor, reflecting upon the solidity of the ground beneath us, from which we cannot be shaken."

Mr. Gladstone resumed his seat amid loud applause.

"Of earthly goods, the best is a good wife; A bad, the bitterest curse of earthly life."

How many wives who to-day are almost distracted because of their many ailments, all tending to make home unhappy, would become the best of all earthly goods if they got rid of their troubles by using Dr. Pierce's "Favorite Prescription," which is an unfailing remedy for those diseases and weaknesses which afflict the female sex. Send ten cents in stamps for Dr. Pierce's complete treatise on these diseases, illustrated by numerous wood-cuts and colored plates. Address, World's Dispensary Medical Association, Buffalo, N. Y.

THE REFORM TARIFF DODGE.

DURING the recent election campaign Mr. Blake and some of his followers endeavoured to delude the electors by pretending to be in favour of protection for Canadian industries and to accept the N. P. with slight modifications. Most of the journals supporting Mr. Blake made for a time the the same pretence. How hypocritical was this mere trap for votes is shown by the fact that already even before the elections are completed, they are in full cry once more against our Tariff policy. The Toronto Globe the Ottawa Free Press, the London Advertiser, the Montreal Herald, the Kingston Whig and others too numerous to mention all have their jibes and jeers at the N. P. They merely made a dishonest pretence to be converted that they might fool the people of Canada into trusting them with the power to give effect to their animosity against our present tariff. Happily however they did not succeed, and our Canadian industries are safe from the injury that threatened them.

THE ALBERTA CANDIDATE.

THE Calgary Tribune a few days before the election spoke of the general rumour that the Hon. Thomas White did not visit Calgarry because he was unwilling to support either Mr. Davis or Mr. Hardisty against the other. The Tribune is an independent Reform paper and no doubt correctly describes the local estimate of the candidates. This shows how unfounded is the claim now put forward by Reform journals in Ontario, that Mr. Hardisty is to be ranked with the Opposition not with the Ministerialists. Dr. Lafferty was the Reform candidate in Alberta. Mr. Hardisty is as true a Conservative as Mr. Davis, but since Mr. Davis had the advantage of the regular party nomination, Mr. Hardisty laid a little more stress upon the professions off independence uttered by all candidates, so that he might obtain some compensating advantage in this way. It was chiefly a question of locality, the Conservatives of the north part of the constituency supporting Mr. Hardisty and those of the south part Mr. Davis against Dr. Lafferty, who alone ran in the interests of Mr. Blake, with the result of obtaining only a handful of votes.

STUPID.

ABUSE has always been a weapon in debate and consolstion in defeat for the Globe Since the Dominion elections it has been abusing almost everyone, the Returning Officers included. Here is a sample of its brilliant criticisms:—

"Stupid Inquirer—Say, how are the returns from polling places Nos. 1 and 4?

"Returning officer—Can't say. I have them here, but I havn't heard from 2 and 3 yet.

"S. I.—Why, how do they effect 1 and 4?

"R. O. (with deep disdain)—Why, I don't know how much our man needs to elect him."

The Returning Officers set a day for opening the papers with the ballots. That day is announced at the nomination. They cannot open them until the day announced, and until then they know no more about the returns than the "Stupid Inquirer" or the stupid Globe. The Returning Officer did not announce the result in East Peterborough until ten days after the election, he having properly set a day late enough for all the returns to be in, but the Globe will hardly insinuate that he did it for any ulterior purpose.

OTTAWA BOGUS NEWS.

MR. C. E. GEORGE, city editor of the Ottawa Free Press, writes to us that he is not the Ottawa correspondent of some American newspapers who recently sent them an account of a bogus interview with the Minister of Customs about the retaliatory bill. We republished from the Montreal Star a very severe but perfectly just condemnation of this crime. We frankly accept Mr. George's statement that he did not send this report, and utterly disclaim any meaning being placed upon our words implying that Mr. George sent the report or was in any way connected with it. We also willingly credit Mr. Gerge's denial, as far as it lies within his knowledge, that any member of the staff of the Free Press besides himself is a correspondent of American newspapers. Of course he cannot possibly tell if any employee or occasional correspondent of the Free Press writes or telegraphs to the American press. Anyone guilty of such conduct is not likely to boast of it, and might prefer to keep even his friends in ignorance.

For the credit of Canada the offender should be detected if possible. Most likely he is not a regular journalist, but only an amateur with a love of defamation. We hope that Mr. George, who feels so strongly the iniquity of such conduct, will aid in bringing to justice the culprit or culprits.

We never supposed that Mr. George was one of them, and his words show that he has no sympathy with them.

PROVINCIAL SUBSIDIES.

OF late the Globe has become rather more of a comic paper than Grip. Some of its performances amount almost to practical joking. In its leading article of March 18, after some nonsense about the Ministerial majority, which it now allows, but still underestimates, it addresses pathetic entreaties to the members on both sides of the House to force the Government to economize. In the very next article it suddenly shifts its ground and strongly advocates Mr. Mercier's idea that the Provincial Premiers shall meet and insist upon larger subsidies from the Dominion. For years the Mowat Administration has been living upon moneys collected for it by the Dominion Government, and at the same time loading it with abuse for collecting and handing to the Province larger sums. And now the love of extravagance increasing with its indulgence, Mr. Mowat and his friends are clamouring for larger subsidies. If this were granted Mr. Mowat would have the double benefit of having more money to distribute among his supporters, and, at the same time, having a further opportunity of vilifying Sir John Macdonald for the increase of expenditure due to the augmented subsidies. In the meantime Mr. Mowat and his friends care nothing that the money comes out of the pockets of the people of Canada. They think it a capital joke that they should have the pleasure of spending the money, while the Macdonald Administration bears the odium of raising it. Anyhow the people pay, but what does Mr. Mowat care? Instead of increasing the subsidies we think it would be better to draw the line very firmly in future, so that if Provincial Administrations will be extravagant they may have to shoulder the burden of finding the means.

NOT one Tory temperance man in Ontario voted for a Liberal candidate, no matter how good a temperance man he may have been.—Stratford Beacon.

The Beacon may think it is omniscient, but it is not; it is only reckless and careless regarding truthfulness. Its statement is not true, and the proof may be found in Peterborough.

THE Port Hope Guide quotes articles with the introductory line, "The Montreal Post, a Tory paper, says." The Guide will perhaps soon be quoting the Montreal Herald, Ottawa Free Press or Toronto Globe as Tory papers. And perhaps they are, after all, really Tory papers, and support the Reformers for—boodle, or some similar reason.

ST. PATRICK'S DAY IN ENNISMORE.

To the Editor of the Review.

SIR,—Yesterday was a big day in Ennismore. The people had made every preparation to celebrate St. Patrick's day comme il faut. The parish church was crowded to its utmost capacity, and during the holy sacrifice of the Mass a very large number were seen to approach the Communion Table. A sermon was preached by the Rev. Father Keilty and the subject was, "The Catholicity Preached by St. Patrick to our Forefathers Identical with the Catholicity which we their Descendants Practice in our Day." The Mass sung by the choir was very beautiful and very difficult. Too much praise cannot be bestowed upon the choir for their excellent rendition of Catholic music. The people of Ennismore are proud of their choir and deservedly so. But the people of Ennismore are worthy of a good choir because a collection is taken up every Sunday to further the interests of the choir. The organist is a young lady of rare ability, Miss McDonnell, of Montreal, who received her training from the ladies of the congregation, and graduated with all honors at Ville Marie Convent in that city a couple of years ago. We must not forget to mention that the church was beautifully decorated, and within the chancel we noticed two superb statues, St. Patrick and St. Bridget, which were placed in position the day before.

The congregation was dismissed at noon when the people betook themselves as rapidly as possible to their homes, where no doubt they ate their St. Patrick's day dinner with a relish. Something very interesting took place in the afternoon, which should not be omitted in this imperfect notice of the day's proceedings. At three o'clock all the children of the parish gathered around the priest's premises. He had promised them a rare treat and they were not disappointed. A young gentleman, an expert, brought Father Keilty's beautiful grey from the stable and for an hour the children were delighted with the feats of this most intelligent animal. He is a mustang and was brought to this country a few years ago from Texas. The children one may rest assured, went away wishing St. Patrick's day to come around soon again. In the evening the people assisted at a concert in the Town Hall. It was under the supervision of the school teachers and was such a success that Ennismore may well feel proud of the bright young ladies and gentlemen charged with the instruction of its youth. Speeches were made, songs were sung, dialogues recited and the proceedings finally brought to a close by the whole assembly rising as one one man and singing St. Patrick's Day.

Several gentlemen from Peterborough were present and expressed themselves as delighted.

Finally, after ringing cheers for Parnell and Constitutional methods the people dispersed to their homes sorry to part and glad to meet again.

Yours, etc.,
SPECTATOR.

Ennismore, March 18, 1886.

Extraordinary Contempt of Court.

An extraordinary incident has just occurred at the Rouen Court of Appeal. Three men who had been sentenced to various terms of imprisonment at Havre appealed to the Rouen court. They were brought in together, and on the first prisoner being asked the question, "Have you appealed?" he replied: "Yes; I do so to see if the Rouen Judges are as great rascals as those of Havre."

This piece of impudence produced a great sensation, and the man was forwith condemned to one year's imprisonment for insulting the magistrates.

What was the general surprise when the second prisoner, on being asked the same question, returned an identical reply. This time the judges dealt out a double penalty, and he was sent off with two years imprisonment to his book.

No one dreamt that the third man would dare to face the court in this insolent fashion after the punishment to which his two companions had been treated, and a thrill of amazement ran through the audience when, in answer to the formal query, "Have your appealed?" he returned the same reply:—"Yes; I did so to see if the Rouen judges are as great rascals as those of Havre."

The court sentenced this man to three years in prison.—London Telegraph.

ONTARIO LEGISLATURE

THE FIRST SESSION OF THE SIXTH PROVINCIAL PARLIAMENT.

The Lieutenant-Governor's Office—Appropriations in Aid of Schools—Municipalities to be Called on to Help Care for Lunatics.

THURSDAY, March 17.—A number of bills were introduced.

SUPPLY.

The House resolved itself into Committee of Supply.

Mr. CREIGHTON asked if it was necessary to continue two Secretaries in the Lieutenant-Governor's office.

Mr. MOWAT said that the Lieutenant-Governor did not see his way clear to reducing the staff, and he was the best judge.

Mr. WOOD thought that the vote for schools in new and poor townships might be increased.

Mr. G. W. ROSS said that the present grant was as much as the country could afford.

Mr. CLANCY said that there seemed to be a tendency to keep the grants to public schools stationary.

Mr. G. W. ROSS said that the aid given to Normal and Model schools assisted the public schools.

Mr. FRENCH said there was a growing feeling in the country that too much was expended on higher education in proportion to the aid given to common school education.

Mr. HARDY, in reply to Mr. Clarke, said the Government intended to do all they could to afford relief for lunatics confined in gaols. Altogether there were 150 in the gaols. Many of these could be attended to in houses of refuge, the erection of which in different counties the Government intended to encourage. The Government would have to draw a more strict line in regard to admissions. Over 200 idiots are waiting for admission to the cottages being erected at Orillia.

Mr. HARDY, in reply to Mr. Ingram, said that the the Prisoner's Aid Association, a Protestant institution, received a grant from the Government and St. Michael's Cathedral received a grant of $500 as being a corresponding Roman Catholic institution.

A number of items having been passed, the Committee rose. The House adjourned at 6 o'clock in honor of St. Patrick's Day.

FRIDAY, March 18.—Several petitions were introduced and bills read a first time. Among the new bills introduced was one to prevent frauds in connection with the sale of horses.

SAW LOGS.

Mr. MURRAY'S bills regulating the driving of saw logs on Ontario streams was read a second time and referred to a special committee.

RAILWAY LANDS

Mr. WOOD'S bill to amend the Railway Act came up for a second reading, and was supported by Mr. Wood and Mr. Pardee. The bill provides for a check on railroad engineers in making surveys and prohibits the condemnation of lands not absolutely necessary. Referred to a special committee.

REAL PROPERTY LIMITATION.

Mr. GRAHAM'S bill to amend the Real Property Limitation Act was the occasion of a brief debate. The author of the bill supported its provisions, and considered that the present act allowed the introduction of abuses in the vesting of titles.

Mr. MOWAT opposed the amendment and said that while the present act might not be perfect in all respects he had been unable for years to form a workable amendment. He proposed to introduce an amendment when he could find one commendable to his judgment.

The bill was withdrawn.

PRIVATE BILLS.

A number of private bills were read a second time. After sitting an hour an adjournment was carried,

GREAT CLEARING OUT SALE.

GENUINE .·. BARGAINS

In Each Department.

I have decided to let the whole of my present Stock go at Wholesale Cost Price. In these days people expect Bargains, and feel justified in obtaining all they can for their money.

I will give the inhabitants of Peterboro' and surrounding country a chance for once of getting Reliable Goods at prices that will, in truth, be Bargains, of which they are invited to come and judge for themselves.

The Stock consists of the usual Staple Goods, besides a large variety of FANCY GOODS not to be had elsewhere in town, viz.:—

Dress Goods, Velveteens. Gloves, Hosiery and Underwear.

Blankets, Quilts, Table Linen, &c.

Small Wares in great variety.

Fancy Goods, such as Desks, Work Boxes, etc.

Fancy Work in Slippers, Cushions, Brackets, Silk and Filoselle Wools, etc.

Mens Underwear in Merino and Wool, and Mens Furnishings generally,

After 23 years' business in Peterborough, I wish to give my old customers and the public generally something unusual in Real Bargains, and will be pleased to see them as quickly as possible avail themselves of them, for, of course, those coming early will have the largest choice.

BURIAL OF BLAKE'S MAJORITY.

(Dedicated to Sir John A. Macdonald.)

They nursed it tenderly day by day,
As soldiers a dying hero,
But they found it one evening cold in death
With the mercury down below zero.

So they carried it mournfully down the stairs,
And up the Globe lane they hurried,
Out to that dark and well known spot
Where their other idols were buried.

The Deacon dug a hole in the mud,
The ice with his pickaxe turning,
And the Gasman bent o'er the new made grave
With his lantern dimly burning.

No prayers were said, no funeral rites,
The Deacon tolled no bell,
No other mourners were present there
Save the ghost of Louis Riel.

And then, their dismal task complete,
They stood in gloom and sorrow,
And tearfully clasped each other's hands
As they thought of "Old To-morrow."

MY BABY.

I know a baby, oh! so sweet!
Mine, all mine!
From the golden head to the dimpled feet,
Mine, all mine!
With passionate words and soft caress
My darling's face to my own I press,
With love and longing I can't express—
Mine, all mine!

Oh! the wonderful baby eyes
Seeking mine!
Knowing no shadow or surprise
Wholly mine!
And oh! the delicate, rosy ear,
I pray harsh words it may never hear—
No trouble or sorrow must come near
This baby of mine.

I fold the fluttering baby handy
Close in mine.
Soft fingers, stronger than iron bands,
Clasping mine.
Can I not keep the hands so sweet,
Can I not keep the tender feet,
That the world's rough path they may not meet,
Dear babe of mine,

Oh! that this dainty thing should be
Mine, all mine!
That into its future I may not see,
Though wholly mine!
If only a mother's love might fold
As safe from harm as it does from cold,
No sad story would ever be told
My baby, mine!

The dear little lips are so innocent,
Raised to mine.
The baby brow is so purely bent,
Dear baby mine!
Lip and brow I fervently kiss,
Drinking the wine of a mother's bliss—
No earthly happiness like this
Can e'er be mine!

NEW CHEESE FACTORY.—Mr. H. Spence, proprietor of the Norwood Cheese Factory has commenced the erection of a cheese factory in Belmont on Mr. Robert Burgess' farm, on the Marmora road. The material is being placed on the ground and the work of construction will be proceeded with at once. Mr. Spence's successful management of the factory here will be a sufficient guarantee of the success of this venture.—Register.

LINDSAY.

ACCIDENT.—A very painful accident occurred on Saturday the 5th to Army Graham. As Herbert and Army Graham, were drawing wood to town, the wood began to slide off causing the horses to run away knocking Army off, and the sleigh passing over him, broke his leg above the knee. But under the Doctor's care the little fellow is getting along as well as could be expected. We all wish him a speedy recovery.

FALLING THROUGH A SKYLIGHT.—One night lately, a certain gentleman who had been out visiting his lady love until the "Sma' hours o' the morning," in seeking entrance to his boarding house found the door locked. He knew that the adjoining house roof was on a level with his window, and after scaling the building was cautiously advancing along the snow covered roof when—crash—down he went into the building. He had stepped on a skylight and took frame, glass and all with him. Strange to say he found himself "on his bended knees," when he came to. However, sense enough remained to direct his escape by the back door.—Warder.

PORT HOPE.

ALMOST A FIRE.—An accident occurred on Wednesday night in a house on King street that might have resulted in a night's work for the fire brigade. A large hand lamp containing about a couple of quarts of oil, was in some way knocked from a table to the floor. It broke, and the oil running over the floor caught fire and in a moment the room seemed filled with flames. The two ladies of the house were sufficient for the emergency, and pluckily smothered the fire with floor mats. It was a narrow escape and but for the presence of mind with which it was dealt, nothing could have saved the house. As it was, comparatively little damage was done.

POLICE COURT CASES.—The Police Court on Thursday was lively with spectators. The docket was seven cases of infringement of the Scott Act, and one against Mr. M. Boyd for keeping a vicious dog. The former cases, with one exception, were easily disposed of. The defendants, Messrs. Mackie, Haw, Plain, Henry, Pethick, McNaughton and Jarvis paid their fines of $50 and costs. About one case there seemed to be a misunderstanding. The original summons was made out for Mr. Robert Munro, but he being out of town for a few days, it could not be served, and another was made out against Mr. R. Jarvis, Jr., who was left in charge during Munro's absence. The case against Munro was dropped. The other drawing card at the court was a case by Wm. Johnston against Mr. Mark Boyd, demanding the destruction of a vicious dog. The result was that, while the defendant was ready to prove the dog a "Mary's little lamb," he availed himself of a loophole in the law, and only had to prove that his dog wore a tag and collar with the owner's name on it. The case was dismissed without costs, and the dog lives. Unless we mistake the law, if the dog wears a tag and a collar with the owner's name, it may not be destroyed though it chews up a whole yard. And that seems to represent about the worth of the town's by-laws. A revision of them has been talked of often, and cannot be undertaken too soon. The case in question, while not of much importance in itself, is another instance of the uselessness of many of our by-laws.—Times.

NEWS NOTES.

The St Petersburg police are alarmed by reports that numerous widespread bands of Nihilists are ready for immediate action.

The question of railway disallowance in Manitoba and the North-West is expected to be dicussed by the Cabinet at an early date.

It is understood that Mr. Sandford Fleming has been appointed a co-commissioner of Sir Alexander Campbell at the Imperial conference to be held in London next month.

A requestion for the extradition of the Italian Arinarco, in gaol at Winnipeg, for the murder of a fellow-countryman in Chicago, has been made to the Dominion Government.

Rev. William B. Gordon, rector of St. Peter's Protestant Episcopal Church, Smyrna, Del., has been appointed bishop of Mexico, and will take possession of his new see in about two weeks.

Bradstreet's reports a total of 231 failures throughout the country during the past week, against 233 for the week previous. Thirty-one of the number were in Canada, one more than the preceding week.

The Executive Committee of the Dominion Alliance met in Toronto on Friday and appointed a special committee to draft a prohibitory bill for submission to the coming session of the Dominion Parliament.

M. de Lesseps states that Prince Bismark says he desires to see France become strong, because when her strength equals that of Germany the two nations will fraternize and form a combination that will guarantee the peace of the world.

An influential deputation of Baptists waited upon the Ontario Government on Friday and advocated the bill now before the House for the union of the Toronto and Woodstock colleges. Attorney-General Mowat promised to give the matter careful consideration.

A Prince Albert dispatch alleges that a Quebec politician named Campeau visited the half-breed parishes in the Saskatchewan district and made inflammatory appeals to the Metis to vote against the Government candidate, Mr. McDowell. Mr. Laird had a majority of 43 in these parishes.

The Government of Germany has had in its possession for this last forty-five years a legacy of $4,000,000 left by Andrew Teetzel who died near Wurtemberg. The heirships of thirty persons in the United States have at last been proved. One of the heirs is a wellknown business man on Fourth avenue, Pittsburgh, Mr. J. K. Teetzel.

Mistaken Identity.

The Rev. F. A. C. Lillingston, who has accepted the living of St. James', Clapham, tells the story of a catechetical address in which it was sought to lead a congregation of children to see that the wearing of a uniform was a mark of distinction, making the individual easily recognized and involving responsibilities. "You see a man walking very erect, dressed in a red coat, who is he?" "A soldier, sir." "Right. You see a man wearing a kind of helmet, and dressed in blue, who is he?" "A policeman, sir." "Right again." Then the preacher braced himself up to sketch a parson. "You see a man dressed in a black coat, and wearing a stiff, white collar, who is he?" "A masher, sir," was the triumphant rejoinder, and—well, never mind the rest.—C. E. Temperance Journal.

Astonishing Success

It is the duty of every person who has used Boschee's German Syrup to let its wonderful qualities be known to their friends in curing Consumption, severe Coughs, Croup, Asthma, Pneumonia, and in fact all throat and lung diseases. No person can use it without immediate relief. Three doses will relieve any case, and we consider it the duty of all Druggists to recommend it to the poor, dying consumptive at least to try one bottle, as 70,000 dozen bottes were sold last year, and no one case where it failed was reported. Such a medicine as the German Syrup cannot be too widely known. Ask your druggist about it Sample bottles to try, sold at 10 cents. Regular size, 75 cents. Sold by all Druggists and Dealers, in the United States and Canada. d90

Advice to Mothers.

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup should always be used when children are cutting teeth. It relieves the little sufferer at once; it produces natural, quiet sleep by relieving the child from pain, and the little cherub awakes "as bright as a button." It is very pleasant to taste. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain, relieves wind, regulates the bowels, and is the best known remedy for diarrhœa, whether arising from teething or other causes. 25 cents a bottle. Be sure and ask for "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup," and take no other kind.

To all who Buy Seeds.

"As ye sow so shall ye reap" is a truism worthy of consideration by all who are seeking for success in Garden, or Farm operations. It is evident to every thoughtful mind that Choice Flowers, Fine Vegetables and Grain, cannot be produced by sowing a poor grade of Seed. With this object in view, I have been careful in selecting my Seeds for this season's operations. I make it a point to test the vitality of my Seeds before selling them to my customers, so that the disappointment of Seed not growing is greatly lessened. My stock will be found large and choice. Trusting to be favoured with an extensive patronage this season in my new establishment, Floral Drug Store, corner of George and Charlotte streets, opposite the market.

Saturday Night's Meeting.

The meeting for men in the Opera House on Saturday night, conducted by the Hamilton Helpers, under the auspices of the Y. M. C. A., was not largely attended. It was opened with devotional exercises, the congregational singing being led by a large male choir, and piano and cornet music. Mr. Walter Dunnett gave an interesting and practical address, in which humor was judiciously mingled. The singing of Messrs. Stead and Dunnet was liberally applauded, especially the song, "Allow Me to Move a Vote of Thanks," which called forth an encore. The meeting closed with the doxology and benediction.

CARDINAL TASCHEREAU.

Entering into Possession of His Titular Church.

ROME, March 20.—A very large number of persons, including Archbishop Carr and Bishop Keane, were present yesterday at the ceremonies attending Cardinal Taschereau's entering into possession of his Titular Church of Santa Maria della Vittoria. A procession was formed, consisting of the Canadian students of the College of the Propaganda and Carmelite fathers. Cardinal Taschereau was seated upon a throne at the left of the alter. After the reading of the brief of the cardinal's appointment, the Carmelite fathers knelt and kissed his hands. The Superior then read an address in French, to which Cardinal Tachereau replied. He said:—"Among the innumerable benefits which I owe the Pope, I count the favor of having as my titular the beautiful church so richly adorned by Prince Torlonia, of which the late Cardinal Jacobini was titular priest. In Canada the first Church was dedicated to Mary three centuries ago and became the mother of innumerable churches, which to-day cover the immense valleys of the St. Lawrence, Mississippi and Columbia rivers. At a short distance from the first church rises another dedicated to Notre Dame des Victoires, which is a place of pilgrimage where each hour of the day the faithful may be seen imploring grace or offering thanks." The Cardinal concluded by saying:—"To-day is the sixteenth anniversary of my Episcopal consecration. I ask the prayers of the fathers that I may fulfil my heavy duties worthily." The Pope has consented to give an audience during the coming week to all Americans, both Protestant and Catholics, now in Rome. Cardinal Gibbons, who was to have taken formal possession of his titular church, Santa Maria, in Trastevere to-day, has postponed that event until Friday next.

A SERMON TO PARENTS

THE REV. A. BELL ON THE BIBLE QUESTION.

He Holds that a Teacher May be Fined $10 for Reading the Bible in the Public Schools — The Scripture Selections.

On Sunday evening the Rev. Alex. Bell, pastor of St. Andrew's Church, preached a sermon to parents, with special reference to the Bible in the schools. He took his text from Deutronomy iv. 9: "Only take heed to thyself and keep thy soul diligently, lest thou forget the things which thine eyes have seen, and lest they depart from thy heart all the days of thy life; but teach them to thy sons and thy son's sons." Deuteronomy vi. 6, 7: "And these words which I command thee this day shall be in thine heart; and thou shalt teach them diligently to thy children, and shalt talk of them when thou sittest in thine house, and when thou walkest by the way, and when thou liest down, and when thou risest up." Deuteronomy xi, 18, "Therefore shall ye lay up these my words in your heart and in your soul and bind them for a sign upon your hand that they may be as a frontlet between your eyes." He also directed attention to Proverbs xxii, 6 and Ephesians v, 4, where the same admonition as was given in the text was also given.

The foregoing passages meant just this: That the words of God given to us are to be written upon our hearts and we are to practice them and we are to hand them on to our children. The Bible is one from beginning to end. What was binding at the beginning was binding at the end. One duty laid upon all parents—upon all who claimed to be God's people—was not only to practice the teachings of the Word themselves, but it was especially to teach it to their children. That not only the present generation might be instructed, but that all succeeding generations might know the Word of God. Three months ago he preached a discourse upon this subject dealing with it as it regarded ourselves and our children. He quoted at length from the sermon he preached at that time. Some thought that the sermon preached was a little out of harmony with the facts of the case, taking objection to the sentence, "it is to be regretted that the Bible has not a higher place in our public schools, and it is deeply to be regretted that those who have the power of legislation have permitted it to be in the place it is." At that time he went on to say that "The Bible is now excluded from the schools and the sooner it is put in the better for the country. At that time it was exceedingly hard to get at facts. Charges were made and explained and denied and made over again. But one thing was clear. Separate schools were granted to the Roman Church to bring up her own children in her own faith. The public schools were left to Protestants. Why, then, should the Bible be excluded from Protestant schools? Why should the Roman Catholic Archbishop interfere with what is to be taught in schools from which Roman Catholic children were withdrawn? He was not here to speak for any party nor to defend any. He was simply speaking his own mind from the conclusions partly arrived at from papers put into his hands by parties he did not know, but who, judging from the contents of those papers, were favorable to the present Government. What he had uttered in the previous sermon he had read now, and after three months, having searched the

BEST SOURCES OF INFORMATION

he could obtain, he had no reason to change his views. But he could tell his people that he was strengthened in the conclusions he arrived at then. A great objection seemed to have been raised at the expression that the Bible had been excluded from the schools, and the statement in which he regretted that those legislating had permitted this to be so. The reasons why he still held to his previous conviction he would give now. It was no hearsay evidence that led him to give expression to the words he did, but it was by the perusal of authoritative documents. He first defined the word "Bible," stating that what he meant by it was the whole Word of God, not one-sixth of it, as is this book (holding up a Ross Bible), which consists of selections taken out of the Bible. He then read as follows from Vic. 48, 1885, pages 206 and 208:

"No teacher shall use or permit to be used any text book or books in any model or public schools except such as are authorized by the Educational Department."

"In case any teacher or other person shall negligently or willfully substitute any unauthoized books or book in place of any authorized books or book in actual use upon the same subject in his school he shall for each such offence, on conviction thereof before a police magistrate or justice of peace, as the case may be, be liable to a penalty not exceeding $10."

He also read from the same, page 243, par 184, respecting the Inspector's duty, "to withhold his order from the amount apportioned from the legislative or municipal grant to any school section that the teacher uses or permits to be used as a text book not authorized by the Educational Department." Then it was plain that it was unlawful to use in the schools any book not authorized by the Department, and if any teacher violated the law he and not only that but the municipal and legislative grants are to be withheld. Now the question was, "has the Bible been authorized?" It has not been authorized. To this hour it is not. The Globe of Dec 14th proclaims that it is not and argues from that that if not authorized it cannot be excluded. Then if it is not authorized by the very words of the school law it is excluded from the schools. Now a great deal of misunderstanding has arisen from the interpertation of this word "excluded." It meant keeping out as well as ejecting. The common dictionary gave these two meanings, and everyone used the word in that sense. It was plain that if a person was excluded from certain society he could not enter. He went on to say that it had long been the desire of the clergy to have the Bible authorized—to let it in the schools on an equal footing with even the first book. Dr. Cochrane wrote to the Globe on December 2nd that the Presbyterics of Hamilton, Paris and London had agitated for it for 10 years, and their request was never granted. True, there were recommendations. But recommendations were not authority. No one was bound by recommendations. He would show the effect of these recommendations according to the report published by the Educational Department. In 1852 the trustees were recommended to have the Scriptures read twice a day, and prayers at the opening and closing of school. These recommendations were the same in 1883, and what was the result? Mr. Ross says that out of 5,316 schools in only 2,772 are the recommendations carried out, and in only 906 of these were the Scriptures read by pupil and teacher together. This was the effect of recommendations. No one need read the Scriptures unless he chooses. Was that the Bible getting into the schools? It appeared to him that it was the Bible getting out of the schools. He showed, also, that all this time these recommendations meant the whole of the Word of God, and not a part, as Mr. Ross was now endeavoring to introduce. It was this state of things that moved the leading men of the Presbyterian and other churches to agitate for the

COULD BE FINED $10

AUTHORIZATION OF THE BIBLE

in the schools. In 1882 a large committee from the different churches met in Toronto to the end that the Bible reading might be made obligatory and in the motion that they adopted at that meeting expressed their desire that the Bible would be read and that a return would be made to the scriptural and moral instruction contained in the first national readers. Then there must have been a failing away or this committee would not have asked a return. A new set of readers had been introduced without containing scriptural or moral instruction and the Educational Department was responsible for it. They asked that the teacher and children read together, but under the new system teachers alone are to read. It had been said that one Synod had approved of the selections. This Synod had courteously acknowledged what they got, though it was not all they asked for. Well, after a year the committee was called together to examine the selections and looking over the book they found serious faults. A sub-committee was appointed to examine the whole book. But when the sub-committee got the book it was so altered since presented to the general committee that they were unwilling to go on. Mr. Ross then took the thing in his own hands and since then asked no approval of the committee, nor did he submit it to them. Dr. Laing's letter of November 30th tells of this. Now this book was compiled by a gentleman named Mr. Kerr. He says frankly that from the first his object had been to compile the book in such a way as to make it acceptable to Archbishop Lynch. Then, though for use in Protestant schools, everything offensive to Roman Catholics was kept out and everything distinctly Protestant was omitted. Mr. Kerr says so. And why? That Roman Catholic children and Protestant children and Roman Catholic teachers and Protestant teachers might join in reading them. This, then, was the reason why everything Protestant was eliminated. He was sorry to state, now, that the object has been defeated by the Educational Department. As the law now stands not one Roman Catholic teacher is bound to read the Scripture selections, and not one Roman Catholic child is allowed, unless by express notification, to listen to them. He read the law relative to the teacher showing that any teacher having conscious scruples against reading the selections might decline and the trustees were advised not to exercise the power of dismissal in such case. He read from the Hon. Mr. Ross' circular to the teachers respecting the interpretation of the regulations as follows:—

"In order that parents or guardians of Roman Catholic children may be spared unnecessary trouble in giving notice to teachers under these regulations it is to be assumed that the parent or guardian of such Roman Catholic children has notified his wish to the teacher as by this rule required."

So that Roman Catholic children are sent home when the selections are read and the teacher may decline to read it then. These were undeniable facts that could not be controverted. If some there were who agreed with this arrangement they might do so. If there were some who professed to give their children 1-6 of the Bible instead of the whole, they might take the responsibility for he would not. Moreover this book of selections was not arranged in order. A chapter here and a verse there were taken out and put together. There were no references. It was not submitted to the churches for their approval, and was never approved by them Another point. It had been said that teachers had the liberty to read the Bible in the schools. He had not been able to find that in the regulations, and he would be glad if some one would point it out to him. According to the school law the fact was that, as the selections were authorized and the Bible was not, a teacher is liable to a penalty of $10 if he reads the Bible. He dealt with the objection that parts of the Bible were objectionable. He said that that objection did not come from Christian people but from infidels, and in urging that objection Christians were joining hands with infidels. The Jews were very careful to watch over the morals of their children, and yet when 5 years of age the stories of Adam, and Abraham, and Moses, and Lot, and David were told them, and they did not think it wrong. In this book of selections the Bible was turned of the Bible and one near the end were topsy-turvy. A lesson is taken from one book, then two from another, and then a return is made to the first, to leave out verses and passages as unsuitable, people might just as well say the best order in which to reveal to us His will. It had been said that Dr. Caven defended the selections. Dr. Caven did not do so. He wrote to defend Hon. Mr. Ross of charges which were made against him. No doubt Hon. Mr. Ross was charged with things for which he was not to blame. But, regarding the selections, Dr. Caven distinctly states he writes neither to "defend or endorse." He reviewed what he had arrived at:

THAT GOD DID NOT KNOW

1. The National Schools are regulated by law.
2. That law forbids all books not authorized.
3. The teacher is liable to a penalty of $10 if he uses such a book.
4. The Inspector is to withhold the municipal and legislative grants if such books be used.
5. The Bible is not authorized, nor has it ever been.
6. The Bible is excluded.

He pointed out that now matters were in even a worse state than before, for up to 1883 the whole Bible was recommended, while now only a part is authorized and teachers need not read it unless they chose. Dr. Dewart says that it is the Bible truths that he would like to see in the schools, regardless of the special binding of any book. But Dr. Dewart's idea is not fulfilled under the present system. Concluding he pointed out serious aspects of the matter. How could Roman Catholics be asked to read the Bible when they see that only a part is allowed in the schools? It gave Roman Catholic priests an argument against the Protestant Bible. They could say to their people, "Look at the Protestants. They only allow one-sixth of their own Bible to be taught." He had now discharged the duty that rested on him. How to remedy to present state of affairs the people must decide. Some might interpert what he said as having a political bearing. He repudiated any such thing. All he wanted was to be true to the trust reposed in him—to hand on the Bible unmutilated to future generations. The reasons he gave were based on authority, and if any one would show the condition of affairs to be different from what he had described he would be glad to know it. He asked the blessing of God on the preaching of the Word.

A Canadian Crook.

NEW YORK, March 19.—Albert Chabot, a young Canadian, was held to-day charged with forgery. He obtained $25 on a bogus cheque two years ago from Joseph Deiano. He has also committed other forgeries, and confesses to having perpetrated two burglaries. For the past two years Chabot spent the most of his time in Maine and Canada.

A Suit for Half a Million.

MONTREAL, March 19.—Stewart & Co., of London and St. John, N. B., have entrusted the law firm of Geoffrion & Co. with an action for half a million damages against the Bank of British North America, for refusing to cash their cheques shortly after the suspension of the Maritime bank. Manager Penfold claims that it was upon the advice of their legal adviser that the bank authorities decided not to cash Mr. Stewart's notes. Stewart & Bo., are indebted to them for a considerable amount he says and all that appears to their credit in the books of the Bank it is said is three thousand dollars. The same parties have also taken action for $100,000 against the Star for ~~st~~tatements in connection with the Maritime Bank failure.

URGED TO HELP IRELAND.

Archbishop Lynch Makes an Appeal to Lord Randolph Churchill.

NEW YORK, March 21.—The N. Y. Herald publishes a letter written by Archbishop Lynch, of Toronto, to Lord Randolph Churchill on the 18th inst. The following are extracts from the letter:—

MY DEAR LORD CHURCHILL,—You must recollect the prelate from Canada who paid a visit to the Vice-regal Lodge at Dublin in 1879 to thank your venerable and noble mother, the Duchess of Marlborough, for her kindness, liberality and charity toward the starving Irish. I had the honor then of a short acquaintance with your Lordship. On that occasion I predicted you would become a great statesman. The twinkling of your brilliant eyes, however, portrayed that you would be a little restive for a few years. I have assiduously watched your course since then—sometimes with regret (Belfast) at other times with joy, but always with great hope. The motives of your resigning a very honorable and important post in the Cabinet of England proved the honor and self-respect of a great mind.

Now, my dear Lord Randolph, the object of this letter is to beg you to study the Irish question root and branch—not in the spirit of party, but of "justice to all men." I am confident from your character of uprightness and honor, that you will even for this once join Mr. Gladstone and bring peace and prosperity to Ireland, and effect a more stable union between England and Ireland. Your lordship cannot but feel the disgraceful contradiction involved in the present attitude of the British Parliament towards Ireland. On the one hand admitting the injustice of the landlords' exactions and the utter inability of the tenants to meet them, the British House passes a law appointing a commission to regulate the rents, which results in their being reduced in many instances to one-half or one-third of their former amount. On the other hand, the machinery of that tribunal being so cumbersome and slow that fifty years would scarcely suffice for the hearing of all the cases, landlords are availing themselves of this delay and are pushing evictions by wholesale, and the British Parliament prostitutes the power of the law which should be sacred, by granting the aid of police and soldiers to assist the sheriffs and bailiffs in evicting thousands of unfortunate people, young and old, in the most inclement season of the year, amid the screams anderies of staving women and children, and the curses of enraged men, thus helping the landlords to exact the rents which the Court appointed by the Government had pronounced unjust.

Does this accord with the true philosophy of a just and legitimate Government? When authority so far forgets itself people will not be persuaded to respect it. The rule of injustice is a hard and hopeless task. Let landlords receive a fair rent, not an oppressive one, and let them restore to their poor tenants the over-payment of the past years. There are unmistakable signs in England of a growing volcano which I trust English prodence will avert. Evictions have been very unwisely fostered there. Will the time ever come when England will begin to have some regard for the honest public opinion of the world, civilized as well as uncivilized, which is to-day horrified at the news of the inhuman spectacle of evections whose only equivalents, according the England's greatest statesmen of past or modern times, are death warrants? Unfortunate victims, however, shivering with cold and suffering from hunger, after that sad day of their trials, are debarred from warming themselves at the blaze of their own burning hoveis! How the English journals would with hypocrital zeal gloat over and publish the inhumanity of such deeds! How the Pope would be called "a monster of iniquity," "a murderer of people," and be dealt with as such, if, during his temporal power, he had permitted one townland to be depopulated. Such wholesale and inhuman evictions are only heard of under the British Crown. Her most Gracious Majesty need not be grateful to her responsible ministers for disgracing her otherwise glorious reign of fifty years by the periodical oppression of poor and starving Irish, and finishing up by more than savage acts of cruelty, and violation of all true law and order. The Irish element in the United States is becoming more and more powerful. Your English papers sometimes remark when statesmen in this country speak disparagingly of England they are "trying to catch the Irish vote." By that they acknowledge that the Irish vote is a great factor in America, and the same may be said of Australia and other English-speaking countries, where the Irish congregate and multiply and prosper. Hence, you must conclude that "numbers will tell," and that the combined Irish are a powerful ingriedient in the government of this country, and that the power of their organizations is increasing every day. They hold already the balance of power in presidential and other elections. This is beyond dispute. You may judge of their temper from the tone which the Americans take in the present fishery dispute. It is said that we in Canada live under the British flag by the toleration of the United States. When there was a question of enlisting volunteers for our defence, one of our chief statesmen said "What use is there in this expense? The chief guard of five million people, in fact of fifty, will be good behavior." But good behavior means now, it appears, let Americans do as they like. English forces are distant. Better are good neighbors near than blood relations at a distance. Should any misunderstanding happen between England and the United States, Canada would, in a few days, be overrun by American troops; it would cost that Republic very little, as the Irish-American military organizations would supply very largely both men and money. It is well known that there are many annexationists here in Canada of pocket royalty who think that annexation to the United States would bring them more trade and money.

Let us finish, my dear lord, this perhaps too long letter by imploring you again to help your country, England, out of the murky chaos in which she is, and induce her to do justice at length to Ireland. Don't wait for the opportunity of the oppressed Irish, England's difficulty. Ill-treatment and calumnies will never reconcile former friends or foes. "Union is strength," and the condition of the Irish at home and abroad does not add to the strength or honor of England. We must not forget how the great Roman Empire fell England is not beyond the reach of eternal justice.

Sputtering and Smoking — Reported Cruelty of the Government.

ST. PETERSBURG, March 21.—The arrests in connection with the attempt on the Czar's life continue. It is stated that two more officers were hanged at the barracks last Thursday. A sensation has been caused by the removal of Colonel Sassonlitch from the command of the Grenadiers to a regiment on the Siberian frontier. The Grenadiers, it is said, were becoming imbued with revolutionary ideas. Colonel Sassonlitch is a brother of the famous Vera Sassonlitch. Rumors of a secret execution of officers are rife. It is also reported that a Professor of Kieff University has been executed and that Leo Hartman has been seized on the Polish frontier.

VIENNA, March 21.—A manifesto by the Russian constitutionalists has been published here. They repudiate any connection with the recent attempt on the life of the Czar. The manifesto enumerates the sins of the present regime, especially emphasizing that of humbling itself before Prince Bismarck. The three chief points of the party creed are: That a consultative chamber be summoned, the Czar retaining the right decide with the majority or minority as he pleases; that the press be granted freedom of speech; and that political prisoners be amnestied.

BERLIN, March 21.—The police here state that Degaieff, the murderer of Lieut.-Colonel Suderkin, was the ringleader of the recently discovered plot to assassinate the Czar.

BERLIN, March 21.—Two Nihilists from Zurich, Switzerland, where it is believed the plot to assassinate the Czar was hatched, came to this city and remained some days. The police had them under surveillance, and sent warning to St. Petersburg.

ST. PETERSBURG, March 21.—The official Gazette publishes a lengthy address expressing the devotion and loyalty to the Czar of the Don Cossacks.

NEW YORK, March 21.—The Star's London special says: A special from St. Petersburg to-night declares that Russian Government has instructed its representatives at the courts of the great powers to endeavor to remove the impression that in order to escape home troubles it has been decided to embark in a European war. It is asserted that the personal communications that have been exchanged during the past week between the Emperor of Germany and Austria and the Czar have improved the relations between the three powers. Berlin specials attach no importance to the summary of the official statement of the Russian situation. The concluding paragraph is declared to be a convincing proof that the Czar's advisers are not sure from one hour to another what effect suddenly arising events may have on the Czar's views on Russian imperial interests.

Lake Marine Insurance.

CHICAGO, March 21.—The managers of the lake marine insuasance pool held a conference here on Saturday, and decided to maintain the present organization with headquarters at Buffalo. The outlook for the coming season here is unprecedented in the amount of tonnage that will arrive and depart. The operation of the interstate commerce bill will, it is thought, make the demand for grain bottoms constant and imperative, and it is reported that there is now being stored at Duluth and Milwaukee grain and flour enough to employ half the available fleet during the season. These facts were discussed by the pool managers, but they finally decided to keep the headquarters at Buffalo and take in three new insurance companies, viz., the Boston Marine, the Manhattan of Germany, and the Anglo-Nevada of California.

A Suit for Divorce.

OTTAWA, March 21.—Mr. Snow, barrister, of this city, has filed an application for divorce by John Montieth, of Rousseau, Lake Algoma district, against his wife, the grounds being allegations of adultery and desertion. Mr. Montieth is an hotel keeper, and he alleges that his wife eloped, leaving behing her children, of whom there are several.

LATEST CABLE NEWS

GAOL PRIVILEGES.

LONDON, March 21.—The Irish Conservatives will raise a question why Father Keller is allowed special privileges in Kilmainham gaol. Father Keller provides his own food and has has a servant, and his friends have free access to him. Dr. Kenny, medical officer of the National League, has applied to be allowed to attend Father Keller and to supply him with champagne if his health requires it. The Conservatives will insist that the prisoner be treated according to the rules as a first-class misdemeanant.

RUSSIA AND AFGHANISTAN.

LONDON, March 21.—Sir John Gorst, Under Secretary for India, stated in the House of Commons to-night that the Government had no reason to believe Russia was designing an invasion of Afghanistan.

THE FISHERIES.

LONDON, March 21.—Sir James Ferguson, in the Commons to-night, said he hoped to lay before the House before the Easter recess a despatch from the United States Government relating to the fisheries dispute.

NO ANSWER.

LONDON, March 21.—Mr. Haggard makes no answer to the Pall Mall Gazette's charge of plagiarizing "She" from Moore's "Epicurean," probably because nobody minds what the Pall Mall Gazette says.

RELIGIOUS FEUDS.

SYDNEY, N. S. W. March 20.—Reports have been received here that an attempt was made to assassinate the Premier of the Tonga Islands, Rev. Sherley Baker, his son and daughter, on the evening of January 13. While they were out driving, several men, white and native, fired upon them wounding the latter. Seven hundred warriors attempted to lynch the suspected parties, but were dissuaded by Mr. Baker. The trouble was caused by religious quarrels between the different sects. Mr. Baker charges the adherents of Mr. Moulton, one of the missionaries, with inciting a civil war. Great excitement prevailed at last accounts and Mr. Baker was barricaded in the King's palace. Mr. Moulton denies inciting hostilities, and complains of oppression exercised by his opponents on the island.

CONCILIATORY ADDRESS.

BERLIN, March 21.—The recent threatening reposts received from St. Petersburg and Bulgaria are all sharply denied from St. Petersburg, with the additional statement that the Grand Duke Vladimir will present the Emperor with an autographic congratulatory address, assuring him of Russia's peaceful attitude. Peace is, therefore, considered assured. The threatening reports from Vienna are regarded as put forth to affect the Boerse.

A PRINCE ROBBED.

VIENNA, March 21.—A packet containing $15,000 in bank notes was recently posted at Pisa, Italy, addressed to the Archduke Este, nephew of the Emperor Francis Joseph. When the packet arrived at Vienna, it was found to contain only waste paper.

THREATENED MASSACRE.

ROME, March 21.—A despatch from Massowah says that Gen. Gene, in order to obtain the release of the Italian prisoners, delivered up six men of the Assortian tribe to Ras Aloula, who immediately beheaded them. Then the Assortians threatened to massacre the Italians and a strong guard was therefore sent and brought them safely to Massowah.

BRITISH TRADE IMPROVING.

LONDON, March 21.—British trade reports for the past week show a slight tendency to improvement in prices in iron, steel and other leading metals. Cotton goods and chemical shipments for export show an improvement, averaging an increase of 16 per cent. in the aggregate exports of staple manufactures, as compared with the corresponding period of last year. A noticeable feature of the returns for the thirteen weeks is the continued growth of the grain trade between Great Britain and India.

A DENIAL.

VIENNA, March 21.—The statement that a military convention against Russia had been concluded between Austria and Servia is semi-officially denied.

A SPLENDID BANQUET.

PARIS, March 21.—The Germany colony here will give a splendid banquet in celebration of the Emperor William's anniversary.

A STATE BANQUET.

VIENNA, March 21.—Count Kalnoky and Prince Hohenlohe have gone to Buda to join the Emperor Francis Joseph at the state banquet at the royal castle there, to which the whole German embassy have been invited, the honor of the Emperor William's birthday. Four hundred German residents of this city have signed an address of congratulations to the Emperor William, which will be forwarded to His Majesty by special courier.

NINETY YEARS OLD.

BERLIN, March 21.—Telegrams congratulating the Emperor William are coming from all the German colonies. The Emperor went to the opera Saturday evening. Yesterday the Emperor received the Grand Dukes Vladimer and Michael and afterwards he returned their visit at the Russian embassy, Crown Prince Rudolph, of Austria, has been much feted. The Prince of Wales yesterday wore the Prussian uniform. Sir Arthur Sullivan has arrived here.

RUSSIA AND GERMANY FRIENDLY.

ST. PETERSBURG, March 21.—The Official Gazette censures the Russian press for reviving the allegation that the relations between Russia and Germany are unfriendly despite the Government's denial. The paper adds that the revival of this statement is especially censurable just now, because it is made so soon after the execution of the "Bloody judgments at Rustchuk," for which many partizan journals have held Germany and her agents in Bulgaria responsible. The Gazette in conclusion says:—"Such statements are idle calumny. Russia is perfectly satisfied in confiding her interests to Germany's agents in Bulgaria. Newspaper statements discrediting the measure are groundless.'

A CONSTABLE BADLY BEATEN.

LIMERICK, March 21.—Three men have been arrested for an outrage committed by them on St. Patrick's day. While returning at night from a hurling match they attacked a constable and beat him almost to death with their hurleys. Had it not been for the timely arrival of a priest the constable would have been murdered.

A FILIBUSTERER FINED.

LONDON, March 21.—Col. Sandeval, who was charged with hiring and fitting up with munitions of war the steamer Justicia in the interest of the rebels of Venezuela during the insurrection of 1885, was arrested under the Foreign Enlistment Act, and has been found guilty and sentenced to a month's imprisonment as a first class misdemeanant and fined $2,500.

A PARIS TRAGEDY.

LONDON, March 21.—The attention of Paris is at present centred in the mystery of a triple murder in the Rue St. Honore. A demimondaine, known as Mme. Regnault her maid and daughter were found dead, Mme. Regnault lying in her nightdress at the foot of her bed with her throat cut, the maid in an adjoining room with her skull split, and the girl 12 years old, with her head severed from her body. The assassin, whose object was robbery, failed to force the safe, which held $8,000 worth of jewels, but rifled the rooms of other valuables. The only clue which the detectives have found to the identity of the murderer is a pair of cuffs and buttons. The woman's lover has not been arrested.

STOPPING BETTING.

PARIS, March 21.—At the Auteil races yesterday amid cries of "down with the police," and "restore betting," a mob led by the bookmakers surrounded the commitsaries of police and tried to force them towards the river. A scuffle ensued, during which some of the crowd were pushed into the river but escaped with a ducking. The police escaped uninjured.

BRIGHT ON IRELAND.

LONDON, March 21.—John Bright, in a letter with reference to Home Rule, says the majority of the people in Ireland would vote that their country be made a state of the American Union if their present leaders instruct them to do so, but that that would be no reason why the kingdom should consent.

A MOONLIGHTER SHOT.

DUBLIN, March 21.—The police fired upon a gang of moonlighters at Tralee last night and killed one man nomed Lenehan.

A DEMAND ON ENGLAND.

PARIS, March 21.—The French Chamber of Deputies to-day decided to consider a motion requesting the Government to demand from England a statement as to the manner in which the fund of $32,500,000 in rents paid under the convention of 1815 had been used. The fund now amounts to $200,000,000.

IRISH COERCION BILL.

LONDON, March 21.—Mr. A. J. Balfour, Chief Secretary for Ireland, intimated in the House of Commons this evening that the Government would to-morrow introduce a bill making better provision for the prevention and punishment of crime in Ireland. Mr. W. H. Smith gave notice that the Government would move that the new Irish Crimes bill have precedence over all orders of the day. Mr. John Morley gave notice that he would move an amendment to the Government's motion to the effect that the "House declines to set aside business in favour of a measure increasing the stringency of the law in Ireland, whilst no effective security is taken against the abuse of the law by the exaction of excessive rents." Mr. Morley's notice was received with loud cheers by the Irish members.

ARMING FOR PEACE.

PESTH, March 21.—Herr Tisza, the Hungarian Premier, in a speech delivered in the Lower House of the Hungarian Diet today, said that since the Austro-Hungarian extra military credits had been voted the peaceful hopes entertained by the Government had been fortified. The Government, he continued, could only maintain peace if the monarchy was in a position to throw its weight into the scale with decisive effect, and, if necessary, make an efficient defence of the country's vital interests against other powers, which, although equally desirous of peace, kept themselves prepared for war. The sacrifices made for the army, Herr Tiza declared, had been well employed, for the military strength of the monarchy was now as efficient as that of any other power.

—AN OLD OFFICER DEAD.

LONDON, March 21.—Major Pardy has just died at Bath, aged ninety-two. He was one of the very few survivors of the commissioned officers of the Peninsular war. As a lieutenant he helped to build the famous rope bridge at Alcantara over the mined spans of Trajan's structure by which Lord Hill crossed the Tagus and joined Wellington.

LOOKING TO THE UNITED STATES.

A Reform Member's Annexationist Remarks in Quebec.

QUEBEC, March 21.—The debate in the Assembly to-day on the address in reply, took an unexpected tone, which, if carried out to its legitimate conclusion, is fraught with danger to confederation.

Mr. David, member for Montreal East, one of the most noted Liberals in the Province, and who defeated Attorney-General Taillon at the late election, resumed the debate and startled the House by the tone of his evidently prepared speech. Referring to Mr. Mercier's proposition of a convention of Provincial Governments at Quebec to consider the best way of securing money from the Federal Government, he denounced Confederation in the strongest terms because it was tending to Legislative Union, which, he declared, was the height of Sir John's ambition. He was one of those who left the Conservative party when Confederation was proposed and now he had a majority of the Province, certainly all the French Canadians, on his side. In Fugland, he declared, Sir John Macdonald would have succeeded in accomplishing his sinister design (i. e. Legislative Union), had it not been for Sir George Cartier. He had not denounced his design and he was the testamentary executor of Lord Durham. He then dealt with the disputes between the provinces of the Dominion, particularly in regard to Quebec, and laid the blame for the financial position of the province on the framers of Confederation, who had only given Quebec a paltry annual allowance which was utterly inadequate to their want? "In other words," said he, "we, who had enriched the other provinces, whose customs and excise duties had been expended in opening up new provinces, which in the future may be used to crush us, were obliged to play the role of the mendicant. The present state of thing, if continued, would inevitably lend to Legislation Union, and in such an event the people of Quebec would be forced to look for relief across the border and seek for a union by which, at any rate, their material interests would be benefited."

The speech caused a great sensation and is everywhere regarded as signifying, that in the event of defeat the Liberals will make annexation their leading plank.

DIRECT TAXATION.

It is evident from some remarks made by Mr. Hardy in the Legislature last week that the Ontario Government realizes, to some extent at least, a fact that they try to hide from the people, namely that something must be done to restore the equilibrium between the receipts and expenditure or that direct taxation must be resorted to. One way would be to increase the receipts and another would be to curtail the expenditure. As to increasing the receipts, the Government has been using the surplus for that purpose, has been selling the Provincial property and has been borrowing money. They cannot do much more in the direction of using the surplus, for the simple reason that it has been drawn upon too freely; and they cannot borrow more extensively without arousing the fears of the people. So they are looking to the Dominion Treasury. As to the expenditure, they still intend to keep up the immigration department and, instead of reducing the general expenditure, they are increasing it. But Mr. Hardy's remarks, before referred to, indicate that direct taxation is to be resorted to indirectly. That looks like a paradox, but it is simply this, that burdens formely borne by the Province are to be thrown on the municipalities, and while they are carried by direct taxation it will be through the municipal instead of the Provincial treasury. Mr. Hardy's statement was that there were a number of lunatics in gaols (and thus at present supported by the municipalities) and about as many more applying for admission to asylums, but, he said, the Government would have to exercise greater descrimination in granting admission to the asylums, and, further, that many of them could be just as well confined in refuges established by the counties and the Government was urging the counties to establish such refuges. Thus the Government, after having augmented the Provincial income by depriving the municipalities of part of their revenue, now propose to throw on the municipalities a portion of the burden of providing for a class of persons whom the Province heretofore provided for. Of course, if the Government compels the municipalities to assume part of the burdens of the Province, it will lessen the necessity for direct taxation for Provincial purposes to that extent, but the work will be carried on by direct taxation, only in another form. Although professing to have a large surplus, and that the financial position of the Province is such that they may boast of it, Mr. Hardy's statements are further evidence that, despite the boasting and buncombe, the true position of affairs is as has been pointed out by Conservatives.

TECHNICAL DISQUALIFICATIONS.

Reform journals are declaring that every Reform candidate that has obtained, or thinks he has obtained a majority of the votes should be returned, in spite of any disqualification or irregularity. We go with them fully to the extent of insisting that the real decision of a majority in favor of a candidate who is qualified according to the spirit of our law should not be set aside for any quibble or mere technicality. But these Reform journals show that it is not justice and fair play, but only their party's advantage that they are seeking, for they are as eager in claiming tricky technical objections against their opponents, as they are in claiming the wildest license for their friends. For instance, we find in one of them, two editorial notes in the same column triumphantly asserting that Mr. Cargill is not eligible and that Mr. Joncas is disqualified. In both cases the claim is to upset the choice of the people on legal technicalities, with no substantial foundation, if the spirit, not the letter, of the law, is to be observed. If Mr. Joncas is disqualified it would be by the dishonest partizan action of Mr. Mercier, in refusing to accept his resignation, not because he wishes to keep him in office, but because he would frustrate the choice of the people of Gaspe. If Mr. Cargill is not eligible it is because, though he sold his business with which his postmastership went, had given up the office and left it to another, there may be a question raised as to whether he had completed the red-tape formalities of resignation in time.

We do not believe that such mere technical flaws, not deliberate law-breaking, should prevail against the choice of the people, either in the case of our friends or our opponents. The Reform critics differ from us inasmuch as they eagerly advance such technical objections against a Conservative while they claim the fullest liberty for Reformers to win elections by any means.

RECKLESS ABUSE.

It is evident that the journals supporting Mr. Blake, when they find fault with the election returns, are not endeavoring to redress any injustice, but simply to abuse the Dominion authorities with the hope of exciting prejudice against them by reckless calumny. As a striking example of this dishonest recklessness we may point out the fact that Reform journals, one after the other, are declaring that Mr. Dawson has been elected for Algoma by the Returning Officer. As the day for making the declaration had not arrived, and probably the official returns had not yet been received from distant polling places, so that the Returning Officer had declared nobody elected, these calumnators were merely assuming what they thought the Returning Officer would do, and were slandering him in advance for doing corruptly what he had not done in any manner. The fact is that the Reformers, like the Conservatives, have tolerably authentic information from the scrutineers that the electors of Algoma have given a majority of their votes to Mr. Dawson. To break the force of this rejection of their standard bearer by the people they are now abusing the Returning Officer for having made a false return even before he has made any return. Obviously the crime in their eyes is the election of a Conservative, which they anticipate, and therefore rage in anticipation.

In Chicoutimi Mr. Gagne, Conservative, was declared by the Returning Officer to be elected, but on a re-count the seat was awarded to Mr. Couture, Reform, by a majority of 1. The Reform party hold it to be a glorious victory. In Haldimand, Mr. Colter, Reform, was declared by the Returning Officer to be elected, but on a recount the seat was awarded to Dr. Montague, Conservative, by a majority of 1. The Reform party denounces this as an outrage. Do they think they can regain the lost confidence of the people of Canada by such malicious yet st e?

FOREIGNORS IN UNITED STATES TERRITORIES.

The following are the provisions of the Act recently passed by Congress to prevent the acquiring of lands in the territories of the United States by persons not citizens of that country:

(1) It shall be unlawful for any person or persons not citizens of the United States, or who have not lawfully declared their intention to become such citizens, or for any corporation not created by or under the laws of the United States, or of some state or territory of the United States, to herafter acquire, hold, or own real estate so herafter acquired, or any interest therein, in any of the territories of the United States or in the District of Columbia, except such as may be acquired by inheritance or in good faith in the ordinary court of justice in the collection by debts heretofore created; provided that the prohibition of this section shall not apply to cases in which the right to hold or dispose of lands in the United States is secured by existing treaties to the citizens or subjects of foreign countries, which rights, so far as they may exist by force of any such treaty, shall continue to exist so long as such treaties are in force and no longer.

(2) That no corporation or association more than 20 per cent of the stock of which is or may be owned by any person or persons, corporation or corporators association or associations, not citizens of the United States, shall hereafter acquire or hold or own any real estate hereafter acquired in any of the territories of the United States or of the District of Columbia.

(3) That no corporation, other than those organized for the construction or operation of railways, canals, or turn-pikes shall acquire, held, or own, more than 5,000 acres of land in any of the territories of the United States, and no railroad, canal, or turnpike corporation, shall hereafter acquire, hold, or own lands in any territory other than as may be necessary for the proper operation of its railroad, canal, or turnpike, except such lands as may have been granted to it by Act of Congress; but the prohibition of this section shall not affect the title to any lands now lawfully held by any such corporation.

(4) That all property acquired, held, or owned in violation of the provisions of this Act shall be forfeited to the United States, and it shall be the duty of the Attorney-General to enforce every such forfeiture by bill in equity or other proper process. And in any suit or proceedings that may be commenced to enforce the provisions of the Act, it shall be the duty of the court to determine the very right of the matter, without regard to matters of form, joinder of parties, multifariousness, or other matters not affecting the substantial rights either of the United States or of the parties concerned in any proceeding arising out of the matters in this Act mentioned.

SOME LIVELY SCENES.

The Parnellites Indulge in Strong Language in the Commons.

London, March 19.—The House of Commons, last night, was unexpectedly treated to a sort of prelude to the coercion debates which are likely to monopolize Parliament before long. Mr. Dillon found an opportunity to refer to the bayonetting of Hanlon by the police in Youghal as a monstrous murder. The poor man, he said, was flying from the police with his back towards them when a constable after chasing him for 50 yards lunged at him with his bayonet and instead of merely prodding him as was customary with the military drove in his bayonet by Hanlon's spine, ran it six inches in his bowels and cut a main artery. It was further stated that the same constable attempted to bayonet another flying man, who only escaped by entering a doorway. The Chief of Police was said to have exclaimed at the inquest: "I am sorry I did not fire upon them." The tone of the debate may be further judged from the fact that later in the discussion Mr. Edward Harrington spoke of the Youghal incident as Secretary Balfour's "baptism of blood." Mr. Cox described the Chief Secretary as "the Ruddygore of modern politics." The postponement of the coercion bill and the Government's decision to continue the debate on the other rules of procedure now that the closure has been voted were declared to be a great surprise and an indication of the irresolution of the Government. Mr. Balfour made an angry speech in reply. Mr. Parnell declared that the Chief Secretary might be the mildest mannered man who ever scuttled a ship or cut a throat, but he would not escape the retribution which history would assign to him. Mr. Parnell further spoke of him as having entered on the task of bloodshed with unprecedented callousness. The ministerialists unavailingly yelled for a withdrawal of the obnoxious charge, while Mr. Balfour apparently lounged languidly. Mr. Parnell accused the Government of having deliberately brought about the calamities which were the subject of lamentation and with afterwards shielding the offenders, the policeman identified in court as the slayer of Hanlon being permitted to continue on duty in the streets of Youghal. Perhaps his most effective sentence was this: "Your attempts to uphold the law are not respected because you uphold it for one side." It was a monstrous thing, he said, that a secretary who had scarcely been a week in office should have signalized that week by two such unfortunate events as the murder of that unfortunate man and the arrest of Father Keller. This provoked a scene, the Conservatives considering he had imputed murder to the Chief Secretary, though the Speaker did not sustain this impression and Mr. Parnell denied finally that he had made such a charge. The honorable member for Cork accused the Government of using the crisis to keep themselves in office.

The debate, however, led to nothing except that it gave the Parnellites one more chance of cracking a few more political skulls. Mr. Parnell, by the way, was asked the other day whether among the Radical party there was sufficient material for forming a party of stalwarts capable of working for the interests of the common people of England as he and his party had worked for the interests of the common people of Ireland. He replied in the negative. The English Radical members at present in Parliament he considered were men either too old or too domesticated or too wealthy to work together with the discipline and resolution that the Home Rule contingent has displayed through successive parliaments. During the debates on the closure the latter have taken into the lobby on each division nearly nine-tenths of all their men who were in London. From ten to a dozen were unavoidably detained in Ireland, either from ill-health or other causes; but of those who come up to Westminister they polled six out of every seven, an average which cannot be rivalled by any other party in the State. Most of the Parnellites are young men, and the proportion of unmarried men is also higher among them than in any English party.

CHAPTER VI.

TWO SCENES.

Once more, as on the first day of this story, the sun was sinking low on a summer afternoon at the stone house. Once more, too, Shirley sat beneath the willows down by the millrace. Those old trees keep rising before us constantly.

But now it was two years later than when the story began. It was the day after Shirley had read her poem and been crowned with the silver laurel wreath. School had ended for the year.

The girl wore a white dress, and had a bright red rose in her long, fair hair. The hair was no longer in braids now. It was wreathed around and around at the back of her noble head. She was beautiful enough for a young goddess, as she threw her head back in an attidue full of spirit and natural grace. Was she expecting anybody, sitting there in her white dress, with the red rose in her hair?

Two strong hands suddenly covered her eyes from behind, and a voice said:

"Guess who!"

It was a deep, sweet voice. Shirley had heard it almost every day for two years. One is not certain but she had heard it in her dreams, sometimes, lately. A kingly face, with starlike eyes, bent low beside hers. It was a serene face now, not restless and dark and bitter, as when we saw it first. It was full of peace, if still a sad face at times.

"I know. It's the cross, tiresome old teacher," replied Shirley.

But, her face, aflame with gladness and welcome, belied her words.

Mr. Morrison leaned his arms across the back of the rustic seat beside her.

"How gorgeous the sky is," he said.

"See that cloud ship," said Shirely. "It is perfect, with sails all set. It glides noiselessly toward the Islands of the Blest. We live there, all of the nice people, and you, when you are good natured." She murmured:

The Islands of the Blest, they say—
The Islands of the Blest—
Are peaceful and happy by night and by day,
Far away in the glorious west.
They need not the moon in that land of delight,
They need not the pale, pale star:
For the sun he is bright by day and by night,
Where the souls of the blessed are.

"Romantic dreamer!" exclaimed Mr. Morrison.

"He calls me romantic. I shall never get over it. Take any shape but that!"

"Well, you are romantic."

"I am built wrong, somehow. I am drawn so many different ways. I don't believe there is a single impulse or affection of human nature that I don't feel, at one time and another, within my own breast. You read to me about Spinoza, despised of the world and persecuted, living on a crust of bread, thinking out his sublime philosophy. Then I know there is nothing in this life so grand as devotion to an idea. At such times I could march singing into the flames of martyrdom. It seems to me it would be nothing to wear sackcloth, and live on black bread for life. But again, when I wear my blue silk dress, or drive with papa, and go flashing down the road and pass everybody else with our new horse—I take such delight in it that I'm ashamed of myself. I am certain the life of self denial is the sublimest life, and yet I worship all the pretty things of the world. I can't understand it at all. I have felt too, sometimes, as if I could commit a murder. What does it mean, Mr. Morrison!"

"This: you tell me you are drawn so many different ways. So it should be. Only those who are thus drawn should ever write. To the true singer it is given to be all things, to know all, to love, to suffer all in his own soul. Only then can he interpret to the race the divine music which is everywhere, but which it hears not, neither understands. Divine indeed is his calling. Such a one was Shakespeare. Such a one I believe you will be, you a woman."

"And yet,"—said Shirley.

"You mean if, after all, it was not to be. But it will be, I think. There may be storm and trouble that we don't know of in store for you. There may be hindrances that will prevent for awhile, though I cannot see how. Yet, if it should be so, do not give up. Patience will wear out everything in time. Let me give you a bit of philosophy. I have upheld myself with it when everything else failed. I have learned it at last, made it a part of my life. Think of it in the time to come, when—when I am gone. It is this: 'Reconcile yourself to the inevitable.'"

But the girl quite passed by the bit of philosophy, though she heard it.

"Are you going away, Mr. Morrison?" she asked.

"Yes, in ten minutes. Jim Sweet will be waiting for me at the gate, to take me to the stage."

She was silent a little. Then she counted on her fingers.

"You will not be back till the vacation is over. That will be six—eight—ten weeks."

"Shirley," said the master, in a low, thrilling tone, "Shirley, I am not coming back."

The blood forsook her face and fled back and settled around her heart. The master looked away. When he opened his lips, presently, the words came broken and with difficulty, at first, as though by powerful self command he compelled himself to speak. He said:

"I only decided to go to-day, suddenly. I must go to-night. I must not wait till to-morrow, even, for fear the temptation to remain here would be stronger than my will. I dare not tell what you have taught me—me, your teacher. I had lost all desire for life when I came here. You gave me back hope. All the labor of men's brains was to me a weariness and a trifle. You gave me back the desire to work, to raise myself above the common herd by worthy action.

"I was a soul in torment. I met you, my poet pupil, and you brought me peace. You gave me back courage and faith in the right. I go to join the workers. Perhaps you will hear of me, child. All that my life might have been before it shall be now, and more. You will make it so. How can I thank you, O, my angel, my blessed inspirer!"

"But—you—you go away," she gasped.

"I dare not stay," he said. "I go because it is best—best."

"But you will write—write to papa?"

"When I can—if ever I can, I will write to you; I will come back to you. I would like you to remember that always."

Both faces were pale. This was too painful.

Shirley tried to smile, but it was a weak effort. She had not learned then the iron discipline that gave her strength to smile when her heart was breaking, to laugh when her soul's eyes overflowed with weeping. That came later. She covered her face with her hands.

But the master had learned the lesson already. A flash of infinite pain, of infinite love and longing, flitted across his face. It was gone in a moment. The face which was bent down so close to Shirley's was calm, the eyes were steady, and bright, and hopeful. He drew her hands away from her face, and held them caressingly in both his own for one moment. He made a step to go, then paused and turned back, and said lightly:

"Do you know Shirley, now that I am going away, and may never see you again, I've half a mind to kiss you!"

He lowered his face again, and kissed her on the lips. Then he was gone, in a moment. At the turning of the path he glanced back at her. He stood an instant and bowed with his hat off. She never forgot his countenance as she saw it then, the serene, lofty brow, the face so full of inspiration. In all her life she never met another face so full of power and light and hope.

And he was gone!

Well, Shirley did not faint or weep. It was never her way to do either. She covered her face with her hands, and sat as if turned to stone. The shadows lengthened in the west till they shrouded the earth, but she sat there still.

* * * * * *

How could Shirley know what was passing meantime, five miles away? It seemed to her in a dumb, blind way, that for her somehow existence had been torn out from its fastenings by the roots when the teacher left her. How could she, hapless child, know that at that very moment her future, which looked so sure was indeed being torn loose from its fastenings.

Five miles away, on the other side of the village, at the moment Mr. Morrison was leaving her, a little vagabond boy walked barefoot along the turnpike road. He was anywhere from 6 to 10 years old. He did not know how old he was himself and surely nobody else knew or cared. He belonged to nobody. He had dropped from the clouds, for all anybody knew or cared.

Mis' Simpkins, that stirring, industrious creature, found him curled up asleep in an empty hencoop when she went to take down the shutters and open her grocery at 5 o'clock, as usual, one morning.

She shook him vigorously. "Here, you!" said she, "whose child are you! What are you doin' here?"

The child sat up suddenly. He rubbed his eyes, and stared about him.

"Whose child are you?" repeated Mrs. Simpkins.

"Dunno."

"How'd you get into that there hencoop?"

"Dunno."

She shook him by his ragged collar again. "None o' yer lyin' ter me. What's yer name?"

"Dunno."

"Don't that bang anything, now?" ejaculated the woman. "Tell me yer name, or I'll take a stick to you, you little riprobate."

"That's it," said the boy. "They call me Little Rip. I'm the fatherless. I set on the church steps. Moll plays she's my mother. We set on the church steps an' I wear a card that says on it 'Pity the Blind and the Fatherless.' People comes along and drops pennies into a tin cup. We was goin' to a new place, 'cause the p'lice found out she wusn't blind. I reckon Moll got drunk an' forgot me," said he, composedly. "Say, gimme some breakfast, or I'll show you a circus trick."

The infant squared off and lowered his bristly head, as if about to butt into the small grocer wife, goat fashion. He would undoubtedly have done so, but the wiry little woman was lithe as a cat and strong. On the instant she caught Little Rip, sat down upon the hen coop and spanked him till she was out of breath. The child yelled like a hyena in the meantime, till all the windows in the neighborhood were raised to see what the unearthly noise was about.

"There," said Mis' Simpkins, "I'll teach you to ax me, you little rip!"

He ate ravenously the breakfast she gave him presently.

"Land sake!" said she to Jim Sweet, "jist look at that child eat! He's got a face for all the world like a starved young pigeon. He ain't a bad lookin' young 'un either, if he was cleaned up, with them blue eyes. If that hair was washed out and combed, 'twould be as yaller an' shiny as Pet Carstone's. Looks as though his folks might ha' been somebody."

What the child had told Mis' Simpkins was absolutely all that could be found out about him. He was nobody's child. Nobody could tell whence he came. He hung about the grocery for two days. Mis' Simpkins fed him. On the third day, she turned from waiting on a customer, and caught the dirty little hand of this terrible infant thrust into the tobacco case. He was stealing her best ten cent cigars. She pounced upon him and threw him out of the shop in righteous wrath.

"You little riprobate! Ef I had the lines around your neck, I bet ye'd stretch 'em! Lemme kitch you in this store agin!"

Astonishing Success

It is the duty of every person who has used Boschee's German Syrup to let its wonderful qualities be known to their friends in curing Consumption, severe Coughs, Croup, Asthma, Pneumonia, and in fact all throat and lung diseases. No person can use it without immediate relief. Three doses will relieve any case, and we consider it the duty of all Druggists to recommend it to the poor, dying consumptive at least to try one bottle, as 70,000 dozen bottes were sold last year, and no one case where it failed was reported. Such a medicine as the German Syrup cannot be too widely known. Ask your druggist about it Sample bottles to try, sold at 10 cents. Regular size, 75 cents. Sold by all Druggists and Dealers, in the United States and Canada. d90

Advice to Mothers.

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup should always be used when children are cutting teeth. It relieves the little sufferer at once; it produces natural, quiet sleep by relieving the child from pain, and the little cherub awakes "as bright as a button." It is very pleasant to taste. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain, relieves wind, regulates the bowels, and is the best known remedy for diarrhœa, whether arising from teething or other causes. 25 cents a bottle. Be sure and ask for "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup," and take no other kind.

A WONDERFUL REMEDY.

The value of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, in the protection it affords from the dangers of pulmonary disorders, cannot be overestimated. Mr. C. K. Philips, Pittsburg, Pa., writes: "About three years ago I had severe Laryngitis, which resulted in chronic hoarseness. By the use of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral I have since entirely regained my health." Mr. Henry Russell, Excelsior Printing Co., New York, writes: "Influenza became epidemic in my neighborhood. Several members of my family suffered severely with it, all of whom took Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, and were cured by it in a few days. It is a wonderful medicine for Influenza. Too much cannot be said in its favor."

E. M. Sargent, 41 Andover st., Lowell, Mass., says: "I commenced using Ayer's Cherry Pectoral about the year 1842, as a family medicine, for Coughs and Colds, and have always kept it in my house since that time. I consider it the best remedy that can be had for these complaints." Dr. J. B. Robertson, Clayton, N. C., writes: "I have used Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, in my family and practice, for a number of years, and have no hesitation in recommending it. It is an admirable preparation, and well-qualified to do all that is claimed for it." E. J. Styers, Germanton, N. C., writes: "Ayer's Cherry Pectoral is the best Cough preparation I ever saw. It gives instant relief."

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral

has cured a Cough in a few doses. It always relieves irritation of the lungs or throat, and arrests the tendency to inflammation. It strikes at the foundation of all Pulmonary diseases, is without a rival as an expectorant, and is a sure cure for the most obstinate Coughs and Colds. L. Garrett, Texana, Texas, writes: "I have used Ayer's Cherry Pectoral in my family for twenty years. For throat and lung diseases, I consider it a wonderful remedy."

To all who Buy Seeds.

"As ye sow so shall ye reap" is a truism worthy of consideration by all who are seeking for success in Garden, or Farm operations. It is evident to every thoughtful mind that Choice Flowers Fine Vegetables and Grain, cannot be produced by sowing a poor grade of Seed. With this object in view, I have been careful in selecting my Seeds for this season's operations. I make it a point to test the vitality of my Seeds before selling them to my customers, so that the disappointment of Seed not growing is greatly lessened. My stock will be found large and choice. Trusting to be favoured with an extensive patronage this season in my new establishment, Floral Drug Store, corner of George and Charlotte streets, opposite the market.

THE CITY AND SUBURBS

No. Two.

No. two company of the City Battalion met for drill in the Parlor Rink on Monday evening. There was a good attendance of the members, who were drilled by Capt. Lapgford and Lieut. Lee.

FINE shell cordovan shoes at Kidd's new store for $4.00 per pair. Hand made.

No Scott Act Yet.

It was understood that several Scott Act cases were to come up before the Police Magistrate this morning. None came, however, but it is probable that another crusade is coming.

Live Stock.

Mr. Geo. Webber shipped by Grand Trunk Railway to-day two car loads of stall fed cattle to Montreal, the price paid averaging $28 per head. He also shipped a car load of sheep and calves.

I WILL not be undersold by anyone. See if I will! R. J. KIDD.

Hair Splitting Differences.

There was some pretty fine work done in the recent recount. In the course of the argument over one ballot Mr. Dumble pulled out one of his glossy hairs to measure the marks made on the ballot paper. Magnifying glasses were used also.

EVERYBODY is surprised and pleased at the quality of the 4 button Kid Glove TURNBULL is selling at 50 cents a pair. All the new gray shades in the popular Alexander make now in stock.

A Traveller.

Mr. Stewart, who has been residing in Peterborough for the last month, was escorted this morning by P. C. McGinty to the Police Court to answer to a charge of vagrancy. The gentleman informed His Worship that it was his intention to depart on a travelling tour, whereat His Worship acquiesced in his going.

The Hamilton Helpers.

The Hamilton trio held another of their meetings in the Charlotte Street Church on Monday evening. The church was crowded to the doors. There was speaking and singings similar to that at previous meetings. The Rev. F. H. Wallace occupied a seat on the platform. This evening the meeting will be held in the Mark Street Church, Ashburnham.

WOMEN'S rights and lefts for 65 cents a pair at R. J. KIDD'S new store.

Business Notes.

—Mr. R. J. Kidd, formerly of Lindsay, and well-known in this town, has opened a boot and shoe store in John White's old stand, George street. The premises have been remodelled and brightened up in a handsome manner.

—Gough, the clothier, has placed on exhibition four specimens of fine art, descriptive of the new spring fashions, over the front of his place of business. The portraits are about six feet by four and attract much attention.

—Dolan & Co. have placed along the Hunter street side of their building a series of paintings, describing its interior and the bargains to be obtained. Mr. Simons, brother of the cutter, is the painter.

—The sloppy weather has made trade rather dull during the last week.

ON and after Friday, 25th, we can suit any one in boots, shoes or slippers. R. J. KIDD.

Peterborough Presbytery.

The Peterborough Presbytery are in session at St. Paul's Church to-day. The following were present: Rev. Jas. Cleland, Port Hope; Rev. J. Ewing, Mount Pleasant; Rev. W. C. Windell, Cartwright; Rev. W. Bennett, Peterborough; Rev. P. Duncan, Colborne; Rev. J. Cameron, Millbrook; Rev. E. F. Torrance, Peterborough; Rev. A. Bell, Peterborough; Rev. W. White, Peterborough; Rev. Jas. Ross, Harwood; Rev. D. L. McCrae, Cobourg; Rev. C. H. Cook, Baltimore; Rev. W. E. Jamieson, Perrytown; Rev. J. Carmichael, Norwood; Rev. J. R. Craigie, Bobcaygeon; Rev. D. A. Thompson, Hastings; Rev. J. W. Mitchell, Port Hope; Rev. John Hay, Campbellford; Rev. John McEwen, Lakefield; Rev. W. A. McKenzie, Grafton; and Rev. R. Hyde, Warsaw. The elders present were as follows: Messrs. N. F. McNaughton, Cobourg; D. Smith, Lakefield; R. Borland, Hastings; P. N. Murdock, Dunsford; Geo. Morrison, Omemee; W. E. Roxburgh, Norwood; W. E. Johnston, Grafton; and Mr. Tully, Peterborough.

IF you have heard of anything new and have not seen it look for it at TURNBULL'S, the great novelty house. The counters are now piled with new spring goods, which we are pleased to show.

THE RE-COUNT.

Mr. Stevenson's Majority Slightly Decreased.

The final arguments were made on the West Peterborough re-count before His Honor Judge Weller on Monday evening. Mr. Moore appeared for Mr. Stevenson and Mr. Dumble for Mr. Cox.

The particulars of the changes made are as follows:—Ennismore Town Hall, Mr. Cox's majority decreased by one; Milburn's School House, Smith, Mr. Stevenson's majority decreased by one; Ray's School House, Smith, Mr. Cox's majority increased by one; Town Hall, North Monaghan, Mr. Cox's majority increased by one; South Monaghan, Baillieboro, Mr. Cox's majority increased by one; South Monaghan, Centreville, Mr. Cox's majority increased by two; Wright & Paton's shop, Peterborough, Mr. Cox's majority decreased by one; Duncan's shop, Peterborough, Mr. Stevenson's majority decreased by one; Metheral's shop, Peterborough, Mr. Stevenson's majority decreased by two; Mannel's shop, Peterborough, Mr. Cox's majority decreased by one; Connor's shop, Peterborough, Mr. Stevenson's majority decreased by one.

Out of the seven lost by Mr. Stevenson, four were marked thus)(instead of x, so that in intention the votes belonged to him, though according to law they were not counted. Another loss was caused by the action of a Reform Deputy Returning Officer, Mr. E. E. Henderson, who officiated at Duncan's shop, Rubidge street. On counting the ballots it was found that Mr. Geo. Webber's name was written on the back of his ballot, and it was also counted out. The other two were counted for Mr. Stevenson when they should have been counted for Mr. Cox, one at Centreville and one at Metheral's shop, Peterborough. Mr. Cox had two bad ballots counted against him, so that the vote cast for him remains the same. The result shows the vote cast as, Stevenson, 1290; Cox, 1284. Majority for Stevenson, 16. If the five ballots which were fairly intended as votes for Mr. Stevenson were counted his majority would be 21.

You might get calf boots from a calf; but where would you go for kidd boots but to KIDD'S?

Once More.

Again eight curlers have partaken of a delightful colation at Mr. Geo. Edmison's expense. The rinks were skipped by Messrs. McNeil and Edmison respectively, and the game was played on Monday evening. Mr. D. Cameron also had the pleasure of entertaining the friends. He played against Rutherford and afterwards they went and had the oysters, the Cameronians paying the bill.

COMPETENT judges say TURNBULLS is the right house to buy boys' and youth's ready made Clothing. He gives you new styles, low prices and good quality combined.

Slave Marriages Not Valid.

CINCINNATI, Ohio, March 21.—A jury, by instructions from Judge Mathews, decided to-day that a slave marriage is not valid. It was in the case of Christopher Harris, a slave in Kentucky, married a slave in 1861, slave fashion, without minister or magistrate. In 1877 he was again married in Cincinnati, while his slave wife was alive. Judge Mathews decided that the only legal slave marriage were those recorded in the county books.

Politics in the Pulpit.

TORONTO, March 21.—The Toronto Ministerial Association this morning had a lively discussion on the question, "How far is it right to introduce into the Chistrian pulpit political questions upon which the congregation may be divided." All the speakers were against the introduction of party politics, but were generally in favor of ministers asserting their right to discuss in the pulpit all questions having a moral bearing, whether of a political or social character.

Preparing for the Flood.

MONTREAL, March 21.—The flood commission have commenced experimenting on the ice in the channel. The nitro-glycerine has been tested and found successful, as a thickness of over twenty feet has been shattered to atoms. They are now waiting for a grant of five thousand dollars from the city to clear the whole channel. Citizens are already preparing for the flood by removing the effects into the top stories.

Now is the time to order your Spring Mantle or Dolman. An extensive stock of cloths to select from at TURNBULL'S, all the new spring styles being now introduced.

Big Blaze in Troy.

TROY, N. Y., March 21.—The Grand Central Theatre was entirely destroyed by fire this morning, nothing but walls being left standing. The residence of Dr. Burton, on Fourth street, near the theatre, was badly scorched. The block on Broadway, extending from Fourth street to an alley back of Quackenbushe's store, is burning now in the upper story. The flames will be confined there. The stores below are being damaged by water. The loss is roughly estimated at from $75,000 to $95,000. It is rumored that two men in Grand Central theatre are missing.

The Dakota Floods.

ST. PAUL, March 21.—A Bismarck, Dakota, special says the river is rising an inch an hour. It has already passed the high water mark of the flood of 1881. All the low lands are inundated and the houses are flooded on the Bismarck side. The only method of communication between the towns is via Cheyenne and Ogden.

BISMARCK, March 21.—The Syndicate property, including flour mills, some fifty residences and the elevator shops and everything on the south side of the track is submerged. On the Northern Pacific trains are running through to Mandan from Portland.

J. J. Daly's Restaurant.

Corner of Market Square and George Streets, is now open. Meals served at all hours. Oysters in all shapes a specialty. Also Fish, Steak, Canned Lobsters, etc., etc Everything in Season furnished at a minutes notice, Charges moderate.

ONTARIO LEGISLATURE

THE FIRST SESSION OF THE SIXTH PROVINCIAL PARLIAMENT.

MONDAY, March 21.—Several petitions were presented.

BILLS INTRODUCED.

Mr. MOWAT introduced bills regulating the custody of documents relating to land titles, and consolidating and amending the acts relating to insurance. Several bills to amend the Municipal Act were introduced, and four private bills were passed in Committee.

WOMEN VOTERS.

Mr. WATERS, moving for a return showing the number of votes polled by widows and unmarried women in the municipalities of the Province at the late municipal election, said that he thought the return would show that the classes named in the return had taken a greater interest in the municipal elections than in the previous year.

The motion was carried and the House adjourned at 3.40.

GONE WITH STANLEY.

Special Services He Expects Different Tribes to Render—The Rate of March.

The dispatch from Zanzibar a few days ago announcing that Stanley and his party had started for the Congo said his expedition included a number of Somalis. These natives, who live along the east coast of Africa, south of the Red Sea, were collected for the expedition by Major Barthelot, one of Stanley's lieutenants, who, while in London, urged Stanley to scatter some Somalis through the caravan. Major Barthelot had charge during the recent was in the Soudan of a force of 1,000 Somalis, who were attached to Gen. Wolseley's army as camel drivers. They crossed the desert from Korti to Metemneh, and, Major Barthelot said, they were as brave as lions in the battle of Abu Klea and in other engagements, and he had a very high opinion of their superiority in other respect. Stanley has never had any Somalis in his service, but he sent Major Barthelot to the Somali coast, where he secured a number of the natives, who will be tested in the most responsible positions in the carivan that the natives can fill.

Stanley's fighting force, if he is compelled to defend his expedition, will consist of 60 Soudanese soldiers, who have for years been in the Egyptian army. When Stanley went to Cairo he specially requested that a small force of these black fighters be placed at his command. Volunteers were called for, and out of a large number who offered their services 60 picked men were chosen. These men are fine specimens of Soudanese soldiers, who composed the larger part of the force with which Egypt held her Soudanese provinces. It was of such soldiers as these that Emin Pasha wrote these words last year:

Deprived of the most necessary things, for a long time without any pay, my men fought valiantly, and when at last hunger weakened them, when, after nineteen days of incredible privations and sufferings, their strength was exhausted, and when the last torn leather of the last boot had been eaten, then they cut a way through the midst of their enemies and succeeded in saving themselves. If ever I had any doubts of the negro, the history of the siege of Amadi would have proved to me the black race is in valor and courage inferior to no other, while in devotion and self-denial it is superior to many. Without any orders from capable officers, these men performed miracles, and it will be very difficult for the Egyptian government worthily to show its gratitude to my soldiers and officers.

On the long march between Stanley falls and Wadelai these soldiers will preform guard and police duty for the expedition, and will defend it if attacked. If it is necessary to fight, however, Stanley depends not more upon his soldiers than upon his Maxim gun to speedily open a way through the circle of unknown tribes north-east of Stanley falls. If Stanley has occasion to show the natives that the gun will fire 600 shots a minute, and that it will kill a hippopotamus or sink a canoe at a distance of a mile, he thinks the weapon will acquire a prestige which will make the savages glad to renounce any idea of attempting to impede his party with their poor spears and arrows. Lieut. Stairns, an officer in the engineer corps of the British army, who accompanies Stanley, has special charge of the Maxim gun.

Two members of Stanley's party, who have been among King Leopold's agents on the Congo, went directly from Liverpool to the Congo for the purpose of hiring about 300 porters to assist in transporting the goods around the Livingstone cataract to Stanley pool, where the upper Congo fleet has been ordered to be in readiness to receive the expedition. Mr. Stanley estimates that his progress on the land march will will not be greater than six to ten miles a day.

FENELON FALLS.

LIVE DEER FOR THE PARK.—Tuesday morning Mr. Joseph McArthur arrived from the north with five live deer,—two full grown ones and three fawns,—which during the afternoon were put in an enclosure made for them in the Fenelon Falls Driving Park Association's grounds. When the old ones became as tame as the young ones already are, they will all be turned loose in the park, which contains fifteen acres, and if any of them attempt to jump the fence, which is fully eight feet high, another foot or two will be added to it. The animals were captured about twenty miles north of Haliburton by men on snowshoes, and Mr. McArthur paid $40 for 4 of them and the other was presented to the Association by Mr. George Thomson.

ACCIDENTS.—While Mr. Thos. Roberts was engaged last Saturday with his mare skidding some logs, he fell in the deep snow and the animal accidentally struck him with one of her forefeet on his left thigh, which pained him severely for a long time afterwards, though the bone was not broken as he at first feared. On Monday afternoon Mr. Wm. Jordan, Sr., while showing a friend through the pulp mill, fell down a flight of steps and put his left shoulder out of joint. He was at once taken home in his cutter, and Drs. Graham and Wilson set the dislocation, after administering chloroform to the patient, who was able to come to the Falls two or three days after. On Monday evening, after dark, Mr. Samuel Johnston fell on some ice in the yard behind his store and struck the the side of his head with such violence that a slight wound was inflicted, and for a time he was partially stunned. The blow was so severe that he felt the effects for two or three days after, but is now all right again.—Gazette.

The March style of Domestic patterns is now out. All the new patterns in stock at Turnbull's.

Modern Samsons.

"Some of those western desperadoes must be very strong men," observed Mrs. Scraggs.

"Why?" asked her husband.

"That paper to-day says that two of them held up a train yesterday."

"Oh, that's nothing. Even a weak woman like you can hold up a train when there is danger of some one treading on it."

The Beauty of Tobogganing.

Nellie—"Do you mean to say you haven't been tobogganing?"

Maud—"No, I am afraid I'll fall off."

"Oh, you goose! Why, that's the fun of it."

"Falling off?"

"No, being afraid."

"But there's nothing to hold on to."

"Mercy me! You are not expected to toboggan alone."

Ayer's Sarsaparilla, being highly concentrated, requires smaller doses, and is more effective, than any other blood medicine. It is the cheapest because the best. Quality and quantity should be considered.

It Succeeded.

"Augustus," said Maud, who, as he had been calling on her for some time, thought she would give him a hint, "I should like to be an actress."

"An actress?" replied Augustus, in astonishment. "What on earth do you want to be an actress for?"

"Because then I might be engaged."

She now wears a solitaire.

Go to Kidd's new store and get a pair of boots that WILL fit your feet.

Trade with Asia.

OTTAWA, March 21.—Some time ago the British Columbia Government asked the Dominion Government to appoint a commissioner, duly qualified for the task, to proceed to Asia and enquire into the possibilities of trade between Canada and China, Japan, etc. The Government have just decided to accede to this proposal, and a commissioner will be selected and sent over as soon as the new steamship service is established on the Pacific. He will work up the trade figures and publish them for general information on his return.

"Words fail to express my gratitude," says Mr. Selby Carter, of Nashville, Tenn., "for the benefits derived from Ayer's Sarsaparilla. My system was filled with scrofula, blotches, ulcers, and mattery sores, all over my body." Mr. Carter was entirely cured by Ayer's Sarsaparilla, 8 months ago, and has had no return of the scrofuous symptoms.

How Quebec Will Celebrate.

QUEBEC, March 21.—The committee on the Queen's jubilee celebration have reported recommending the city council to request (1st) the religious authorities to hold appropriate services and to have their bells rung at noon; (2nd) the National, Religious, Literary, Benevolent and Mercantile societies and trades to join in a grand procession; (3rd) the military authorities to hold a review of all the troops in the garrison with the volunteers corps of the city and surrounding districts to be followed by a sham battle and storming of the citadal from the Plains of Abraham; 4th, to inaugurate one or more public fountains, or other monument in her majesty's honor; (5th) to terminate the day's celebration with a general illumination and grand display of fireworks.

Food for Consumptives.

Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil, with Hypophosphites, is a most marvellous food and medicine. It heals the irritation of the throat and lungs, and gives flesh and strength quicker than any other remedy known. It is very palatable, having none of the disagreeable taste of the crude oil. Put up in 50c. and $1.00 size.

THE RE-COUNT.

To the Editor of the Review.

SIR,—In your issue of the 22nd instant I read a report of the re-count in the recent election for the House of Commons, wherein you are pleased to go out of your way to single out "the action of a Reform deputy-returning officer," giving my name as having officiated in that capacity at Duncan's house, Rubidge street. In fairness I ask to be heard on the subject, and I trust you will allow me a space in your columns. I notice you do not say what I am guilty of, but simply convey an impression to the public of some improper action of mine. I understand in going over the ballots in my division the Judge, or the solicitors, discovered a ballot with the name of "George Webber" written on the back, which, you say, invalidated it. I state positively and distinctly that I have no recollection of having seen such a name written on any ballot. But, admitting that I did, inadvertently, write Mr. Geo. Webber's name on a ballot, I assert without hesitation that it was not with any desire or any intention to destroy Mr. Webber's vote or cause a loss of a vote for Mr. Stevenson. I am informed my initals were not on the back of the ballot, but instead Mr. Webber's name was written thereon. This in itself would go to show that I had written "Geo. Webber" on back of the ballot where I should have written my initials. If I had properly initialed the ballot and then written "Geo. Webber" across the back I would have felt I had done very wrong; but as a matter of fact which you omit to mention either with the above, this ballot was actually counted for Mr. Stevenson and placed in the envelope with Mr. Stevenson's ballots, the strangest part is that not one of the scrutineers, nor myself, noticed any writing on any ballot. You also omit to give me any credit for having actually saved two (2) votes for Mr. Stevenson, which is well known to Mr. Stevenson's scrutineers. If I had for a moment contemplated doing Mr Stevenson any injury by affecting the ballots, I would certainly not select such a prominent gentleman as Mr. Geo. Webber, upon whom to try the experiment, I endeavoured to act fairly, honestly and justly between the parties interested, which can, I believe, be vouched for by the scrutineers on both sides, and I regret your reporter should make special mention of my name in connection with the ordinary report of the result of the recount, as the matter was not of such a nature as to make it so important to convey a wrong impression to the public by mentioning only an insinuation.

Yours, &c.,
E. E. HENDERSON.
Peterborough, March 23rd, 1887.

NEWS NOTES.

Mr. Henry Irving will shortly appear as the hero of Lord Byron's "Werner."

Entrance examinations for the Civil Service will be held in the various cities of the Dominion on May 26th.

A trial made on the New York Central Railway of an apparatus for heating the cars by steam demonstrated the practicability of the scheme.

Two hundred and thirty-five members of the Imperial Parliament have signed a memorial in favour of preventing the publication of offensive details in divorce cases.

The prohibitory liquor bill of the Dominion Alliance will be ready for consideration at the annual meeting next month, and after being sanctioned will be introduced in the House of Commons.

The consolidating debt of the Province of Quebec is $18'155,018, which, with the floating debt claimed by Mr. Mercier to amount to $3,693,000, makes a total provincial indebtedness of $21,848,018.

Three engineer studentships of her Majesty's dockyards have been placed annually at the disposal of the Secretaries of State of the principal colonies including the Dominion, by the British Admiralty.

Work on the Sault Ste. Marie branch of the Canadian Pacific railway, which was commenced in January, and on which about fifteen hundred men are employed, will be completed by next November.

Mr. Wylde, the Canadian Commissioner now in the West Indies endeavoring to promote closer trade relations with the Dominion, writes encouraging reports of success to the Finance Department.

Fifty young Montrealers have joined a garde nobile formed in that city, after the style of the Papal garde nobile of Rome, to attend Archbishop Fabre on levees and other official occasions.

PRESIDENT CLEVELAND.

An "Eminent Physician" Says he Must Change his Mode of Living.

WASHINGTON, March 22.—Dr. Z. T. Sowers, one of the most eminent physicians of of Washington, in an interview with a reporter yesterday, declared that there is danger that President Cleveland will not live through his term unless there is a change in his mode of living. Dr. Sowers, six months before Mr. Manning's illness, made the same prediction with regard to the secretary, and advised a friend to warn him of his danger. In the interview yesterday, Dr. Sowers said: "It may be deemed impertinent to talk to the President through a newspaper man, but I know of no other way of reaching him and those about him so surely. You recall my attempts with the friends of Mr. Manning and their fruit, and I do not feel that I should take the same chances in this case. I am personally apprised of the President's condition, and while it is in no sense dangerous, it will not be long before there will be reason for alarm. President Cleveland is a large, fleshy man, and since he came to the White House he has gained enormously in flesh. When he lived in Buffalo it was his habit to take long walks. Since he came here, however, he has abandoned every form of exercise save carriage riding. This is of little or no use with the springs now used and the smooth streets for which Washington is famous. The President is a man who works with his head a great deal, is, in fact an intense brain worker. He is, in other words, a plodder, and his brain is consequently filled with an excess of blood. What is the result? He works with his head; eats enormously and fails to exercise his muscles. His blood vessels are weakened, and it is only a question of time when, in a moment of excitement, he bursts a blood vessel. I tell you, at the rate President Cleveland is now living there is great danger that he will not live throughout his term. Something should be done to bring him to realize his danger and take the proper steps to prevent the result which will surely ensue if he fails to take proper exercise. What I should recommend would be the fixing up of a room in the White house and the setting apart of a half hour every day for gymnastic exercise. That alone in my opinion will prevent a catastrophy the avoidance of which not only the president but the country at large is interested in securing."

NINETY YEARS OLD.

The Celebration in Honor of the German Emperor's Natal Anniversary.

ROME, March 22.—Monsignor Gallimberti, the special delegate sent by the Vatican to convey its congratulations to the Emperor William on the attainment of his 90th year to-morrow, telegraphs from Berlin that he has been very favorably received; that he has had an audience with Prince Bismarck and has requested an audience with the Emperor in order to personally present to him the autograph letter of congratulation sent by the Pope.

BERLIN, March 22.—Last evening, between three and four thousand students, bearing flags, banners and torches, formed in procession and marched to the palace, where the Emperor and Empress appeared at the window. President Monenck, of the students committee, called for cheers for the Emperor. The applause was tremendous, and was followed by the singing of the National Anthem, the Emperor remaining standing and bowing. The Prince of Wales paid his first visit to their Majesties yesterday.

BERLIN, March 22.—Among the numerous birthday rumors are reports that the Grand Duke of Baden will be made King of Baden and that Bismarck will be created Duke of Lunenberg.

Prince Bismarck will give a dinner to the ambassadors and diplomats, the foreign office officials and other Imperial secretaries and the chief officials this evening. Yesterday most of the schools celebrated the event in advance with speeches and recitations. Each child received a portrait and short biography of the Emperor in memory of the occasion. The students cheered loudly at Prince Bismarck's palace.

In response to the calls of the students Prince Bismarck opened his window and bowed his thanks. A similar ovation was tendered to General Von Moltke at the offices of the general staff. During the procession the Emperor called up several of the students to express his gratification at their manner of congratulating him. He said he rejoiced greatly in the spirit displayed by them and that he expected much from the academic youth of Germany as the were serious. He questioned many of the students separately regarding their birthplace, the studies they pursued, the number of terms they had completed and the corporations to which they belonged. The Empress also expressed her thanks for the ovations. At 11 o'clock when a cuirassier regiment came to relieve the guard at the palace, thousands still remained and burst into enthusiastic cheering which continued so long that at last the Emperor came to the window and again thanked the people. His appearance had a magic effect, the cheers were redoubled and the National Anthem was again sung. The Emperor waved his hand and disappeared. At a late hour crowds still remained in the vicinity of the palace.

Gen. Bradenburg, the Emperor's adjutant and Colonel Jagow, commander of the Blucher Hussars, the Crown Prince's Prussian regiment waited upon the Prince of Wales. The trumpeters of the 2nd regiment which is on guard at the palace, inaugurated the rejoicing at six o'clock this morning by playing a hymn from the cupola of the old palace chapel. The garrison will attend Divine service at 10 o'clock, and the municipal authorities at noon.

A Conservative Elected in Gaspe.

GASPE, Que., March 22.—Joncas is elected by about one hundred and forty majority. The one or two polls to hear from cannot change the result.

GRAY Dress Goods are all the rage this season. You can have your choice of eight shades in thirteen different qualities at TURNBULL'S. Also Ball Trimming, Hercules Braid and Buttons to match. Miss Morgan, our dressmaker, leads the fashion in dressmaking. All her work turned out promptly.

STRAINED RELATIONS.

Prince Bismarck Using France as a Pawn Against England.

LONDON, March 21.—Probably, as a whole, European public opinion is a trifle more sanguine as to peace than it was a week ago, but the improvement is slight and is almost wholly due to confirmation of the fact that Italy has signed the treaty with Germany and Austria. Prince Bismarck now wants England to join this alliance. Indeed, he always wants this, but now his efforts to secure English support will for a little while take the chief place in European diplomatic manœuvring. As the first consequence of this the Egyptian question will be brought forward and England menaced abruptly with a rupture with France. It would not be surprising if the relations of France and England speedily become strained to the utmost point of tension compatable with the Chancellor's game. In this he will be helped by the infatuated folly of the French in supposing the English to be their real enemies. Nothing would be so easy as to raise a howl in Paris for an invasion of England. All along this has really been nearer to the Frenchman's heart than another tussle with the heavy fisted gladiator across the Rhine. M. de Lesseps is the special evangel of this idea, and we may be sure that Prince Bismarck allowed the vain old poseur to leave Berlin more in love with it than ever. When this situation becomes sufficiently acute and the English Ministry is face to face with the alternative of giving France her own way in Egypt or fighting, then the screws will be put on to compel England to join a central European alliance on Prince Bismarck's terms. Probably this would be the best thing that could happen to Europe, because it would go very far to render a war impossible either in the Balkans or the Nosges. But England holds out demanding a guarantee of aid in case Russia attacks her in Central Asia, which neither Germany nor Austria has consented thus far to consider. So far the moment the the matter stands.

BELLEVILLE.

A GUN'S WORK.—James Chambers, of Eldorado, purchased a Winchester rifle last week, and was giving it a trial on Saturday. After firing a few shots he laid the gun down to attend to some other matters. While he was gone a son picked it up and whilst handling it discharged a shot. The bullet passed through a sleigh box and hit the boy's 3 year old brother in the stomach. Death soon resulted from the wound.—Intelligencer.

MOUNT PLEASANT.

From Our Own Correspondent,

CONCERT.—On Wednesday evening, March 16th, the members of the Cavanville base ball club, held a concert in the good Templar's Hall here, commencing at 7.30 p. m. The programme, which was efficiently carried out, was a good one. The crowd in attendance was not large, as concerts have been all the rage for the last for or five weeks here. The gross proceeds amounted to about $15.

ART ENTERTAINMENT.—Professor Huntsman gave an entertainment in the school house in this place, on March 17th, commencing at 7.30 p. m.; consisting of exercises in phonography and a number of views thrown on a canvass by a magic lantern. The entertainment was good, but the crowd in attendance was meagre owing to the fact that there have been five entertainments within the last four weeks here.

MOVED.—Mr. Wm. Rabee, who had Mr. George Jameson's farm, first north of this place, rented for the last five years, moved from it last week to another farm he has rented which is a short distance north of Omemee.

PURCHASED A FARM.—Mr. George Seney, who has been a resident of this place for some years, purchased a farm of 40 acres, east of Omemee, known as the Crawford farm, and he and his family moved to it last week. We hope they will enjoy their new place of abode.

EVERYBODY is surprised and pleased at the quality of the 4 button Kid Glove TURNBULL is selling at 50 cents a pair. All the new gray shades in the popular Alexander make now in stock.

PORT HOPE.

THE WILLIAMS MEMORIAL.—A meeting of the Williams Memorial Association was held on Monday. The Treasure's statement showed that there was $3,184.12 cash on hand and $955.75 in subscriptions outstanding. Committees were appointed to make collections.

A "CORNER" IN BARLEY.—On Monday afternoon a disaster occurred at Messrs. Ambrose & Winslow's brewery that will cost them a large sum of money and plenty of trouble. About six thousand bushels of barley had been last week stored in the north west corner of the granary. The granery is the first floor of the west extension of the brewery. Directly under the granary is the storage cellar, and above it are two malting floors laid with brick and covered with cement. In the cellar there were stored between three and four hundred hogsheads of ale, but fortunately the door from the cellar to the outside being in the north west corner very few hogsheads were stored in that corner. On Monday a number of the workmen were in the granery shovelling; also Mr. Winslow and Mr. C. Harper the book-keeper. Between four and five o'clock the granary floor in the north-west corner began to give way and with a roar like an earthquake the floor and wall fell with a tremendous noise. The air was filled with debris and a black cloud seemed to envelope the whole scene like a pall. The men were as thunderstruck for an instant, and then with a rush were dashing towards doors and windows. The granary, two malting floors, and 25 feet of the north of the wall from roof to foundation were with the 6,000 bushels of barley heaped in a splintered mass in the corner of the cellar floor. Thirty feet square of ruin Those portions of the malting floors that broke happened to be empty or the loss would have been much heavier. As it is besides the damage to the building, the only loss will be on the barley.—Times.

LATEST CABLE NEWS

BY JUDGES OR SPECIAL JURY.

LONDON, March 22.—It is reported the new Crimes Bill, instead of providing for the appointment of a special jury to consist of members not likely to be intimated as at first drafted, now proposes to give prisoners charged with special offences the option of jury trial at Newgate or by a commission of Judges in Ireland. Hon. Jos. Chamberlain dined with Secretary Balfour last night and entered into a friendly discussion of the Bill.

NO MORE PLANS GIVEN.

LONDON, March 23.—After the Chatham dockyard scandal the Admiralty department determined to revoke the practise of supplying the drawings of ships to foreign powers or individuals.

CARDINAL JACOBINI'S SUCCESSOR.

ROME, March 22.—Cardinal Van Nutelf has been appointed Papal Secretary of State.

FELL FROM GRACE.

ST. PETERSBURG, March 22.—It is reported the Katiakoff has fallen into disgrace with the Czar, owing to his continued attempts to force Russia into war.

AN ALL NIGHT SITTING.

LONDON, March 22, 6 a. m.—The House of Commons has been sitting all night and is still in session. The Government have been trying to dispose of the naval and civil service bills but the Home Rule members by obstruction have prevented any action being taken. Two hundred and sixty members are present. There is no prospect of adjournment.

THE ADJOURNMENT.

LONDON, March 23, 8 a. m.—The House of Commons is still in Committee of supply. Mr. Raikes, the Postmaster-General, relieved Mr. Courtney, the Chairman of the Committee, in the chair during the discussion of the civil service vote, because the proceedings were farcical. Mr. Tanner, member of Cork, informed the chair that a fresh batch of eloquent Parnellites would arrive on the 6 a. m. train to reinforce the Opposition vote. There is no likelihood that the House will rise before midday, as Mr. Smith, the Government leader, declared that the civil service bill must be passed before an adjournment takes place. Later.—The House of Commons passed the service act and adjourned this afternoon.

JEWISH RIOT IN TUNIS.

TUNIS, March 22.—The Jewish population of Tunis are much excited over the enforcement of the new municipal laws regulating the burials of the dead within the town. The Jews allege that these laws impose intolerable injustice on the people of their creed. All the Jewish merchants in the city have closed their places of business. A number of riots over the dispute occurred to day, in one of them one Jew was wounded. The aspect of affairs is so threatening that the city has been placed under military protection. The leader in the disturbance and ten other riotors have been arrested. One of the men resisted arrest and wounded a commissaire of the police with a revolver.

TOO COMMUNISTIC.

Paris, March 22.—M. Geolet, after consulting with the cabinet, has decided to suspend the Marseilles municipal authorities and select a new council by the "Scrutin De List."

THE PARIS MYSTERY.

PARIS, March 22.—Since the publication of the details of the murder of Mme. Marie Regnault, the wealthy courtesan of the Rue Montaigne, and the association of the Austrian Geissler, who mysteriously passed out of police ken, with the crime, excitement has run very high and the detective department was soundly denounced for its inability to solve the mystery. Many old murders have been quoted where, on slighter clues that those afforded by this crime, the guilty parties were hunted to their doom. Yesterday, however, further information was published, which goes some way towards removing the slur from the officers of Rue de Jerusalem. An Italian named Franzini was arrested, charged with the murder, and a quantity of bloody clothing found in his apartments. Franzini has confessed his guilt, but the public curosity has not yet been gratified by any details of the murder.

A POLICY OF PEACE.

BERLIN, March 22.—Prince Bismarck has assured Crown Prince Rudolph of Austria-Hungary that Germany's foreign policy is pacific; that peace is assured for 1887, and that there is no cause for disquietude in either East or West. The city is crowded. All the best hotels are filled with royal personages. Enthusiasm is universal. Weather is fine. Emperor's health is good. He began to receive his guests at 11 o'clock in the morning and appeared at his favorite window in the palace overlooking the street as often as he could find time to do so, to respond to the cheers of the people who passed by in thousands to get a glimpse of him.

A HOLY WAR.

LONDON, March 22.—Advices from Cabul state that the Ameer has sent printed circulars to the tribes of Kohistan, urging them to join him in a holy war against Russia. The circular denounces the Czar as a tyrant and promise-breaker. It warns the tribes that the Russian troops are daily advancing, and that if they ever occupy Afghanistan they will continue in possession of that country. The circular also tells the people how Turkey, fighting for the cause of Islamism, opposed Russia. The Ameer summoned the Moslem teachers and doctors throughout the country to Cabul, where they were feasted by his direction, after which the Ameer ordered them to incite the nation to a religious war against Russia. It is asserted by the Ameer's council that the war is now being actively preached. There is discontent in the garrison at Herat. The troops are paid in provisions, as no cash is available. It is stated that trouble is being fomented by Russian spies.

Cars and Contents Burned.

TORONTO, March 22.—A carload of new furniture belonging to Clark, Harrison & Co., upholsters, was destroyed by fire while the car was on the esplanade this morning. On Saturday a carload of hay was destroyed in a similar manner. Both are supposed to have been caused by sparks from a passing engine.

J. J. Daly's Restaurant.

The Daily Review.

WEDNESDAY, MARCH 23, 1887.

OUR CONSTITUTION.

In the Quebec Legislative Assembly Mr. Mercier announced that he had received a letter from Mr. Mowat, promising that Ontario would assist at the proposed Interprovincial Congress to consider changes that are advocated in the British North America Act.

Though our written Constitution was carefully framed, and is not excelled by any Constitution in the world, it would obviously be claiming too much to hold it to be perfect, for it must be liable to the imperfections inherent in all human things. Change of circumstances may also in this, as in other matters, require in course of time changed legislation. At the same time there should be great caution exercised in making any alteration, for even slight imperfections would be less injurious than constant tinkering with our Constitution. The countries that are always adopting brand-new constitutions, scientifically framed according to the latest lights, are certainly not those that are best governed. Stability of the Constitution is necessary for the stability of a country and its interests.

If, however, it is assumed that urgent necessity for change has arisen, there is a means of procuring it without having recourse to any improvised and irregular congress. In the Parliament of Canada the people of the several Provinces and Territories that compose the Dominion are represented by those whom they select for the very purpose of acting for them in matters that effect the whole. The House of Commons is our legitimate Inter-Provincial Congress, and it is not only the privilege, but the duty of its members to express the wants of their constituents in the Provinces from which they are sent. Already they have more than once required minor changes in our constitution, and the Imperial Parliament acts without hesitation in accordance with the wish of the people of Canada thus authoritively conveyed to it. What has thus been done in the past can be done again whenever the people of the different Provinces require it by the voices of those whom they send to speak for them.

As, however, it seems that this Congress is to be held, and it is useless to shut one's eyes to facts, its proceedings must have an interest for Canadians. What are the changes its organizers propose to advocate by means of this novel machinery? The original promoter, Mr. Mercier, without entering into minute details, has given the public plainly to understand that his first object is to augment the powers of the Provincial Governments at the expense of the Federal Government. This avowed attempt at disintegration should be watched with suspicion by all who wish to see the great Dominion of Canada continue in its path of unexampled progress. The great desire of all Canadians who are loyal to their country, who wish to see it powerful and prosperous, should be to do all in their power to bind it together into one great and united whole, to oppose any tendency to reduce it to a number of jarring elements. Canada may learn a valuable lesson from the history of our neighbouring country, where the exaggeration of the doctrine of "State Rights" caused a terrible civil war, resulting in the maintenance of the unity of the country, to the satisfaction now even of those sections that opposed it. There is no question with us of any part of the Dominion having had the will of other portions imposed upon it, for as it happens all the Provinces, with the possible exception of little Prince Edward Island, have by their chosen representatives agreed in establishing and maintaining our fiscal policy, our railway policy and the other beneficial measures under which Canada has prospered so greatly. There has not been a case of one Province having to submit itself to the will of the majority. So little reason is there for this claim to strengthen the several Provinces and weaken the Dominion, that it is impossible to avoid the conclusion that it is a party device to attack the Canadian Administration on the part of those who are irritated because the people of Canada will not trust them to administer their affairs. This is the more obvious to us when we recall to memory that the Reformers while in office at Ottawa were greater sticklers for the central authority than the Macdonald Administration. Mr. Blake did not hesitate to bring official complaints against the Provinces of invading and usurping the jurisdiction of the Dominion.

But it is probable that the next change in the programme of Mr. Mercier, and apparently of Mr. Mowat, is the one to which they attach the greatest importance. There is no attempt to disguise the fact that the proposed congress is to make a combined assault upon the Dominion purse. Mr. Mercier has professed that if he obtained power he would soon bring about financial equilibrium by retrenching what he said was extravagant expenditure. Mr. Mowat has been always bragging about his so-called surplus. Now it appears that Mr. Mercier's economy and Mr. Mowat's surplus are not sufficient to enable them to meet their expenditures without the help of a raid upon the Dominion Treasury, that is upon the pockets of the people of Canada. If the provisions for our Dominion were to be made afresh with our present knowledge, there are many, who would prefer to see our Province, like the States, left to finance for themselves without being coddled into extravagance by having money found for them without the responsibility of earning it. As it is Mr. Mowat is able to boast of his "generosity" (largely to his friends) when he himself finds less than a fourth of the Provincial income, over three fourths coming from grants from the Dominion and sales of the property of the people of Ontario. He has no restraint upon his extravagance when he obtains money not by any sacrifice required by him directly from the people but by free gifts from the Dominion, and the more he thus obtains the greater opportunity he has of simulating economy by abusing the Dominion Administration for its extravagance in giving him money to squander.

As the system of Provincial subsidies has been established it may be regarded as expedient to continue them, but if any change is to be made, it should be in the direction not of increase but of curtailment, or at least of finality.

The Welland Tribune thinks it a farce to call a counted-in member a popular representative. People generally have an impression that all members are counted in, and that very few members are allowed to take a seat in the House until the ballots are counted. If the Tribune, however, only objects to members being declared elected through the result of a re-count before the County Judge, it does not voice the opinions of the Reform party, because in several constituencies, West Peterborough included, the Reformers had a re-count in the hope that their candidate might by that means secure the seat. If Reformers object to County Judges re-counting the ballots, why do they ask them to do it?

In drawing as gloomy a picture as possible of the financial position in Quebec Mr. Mercier makes the deficit, the excess of liabilities over assets $11,273,868. In the liabilities however he includes the estimated deficit for the coming year, railway subsidies authorized but not yet earned, estimated cost of completing the Parliament Buildings &c. If Mr. Mowat includ d such items in his accounts, he also would show a Provincial debt for Ontario instead of a surplus.

BRASS BAND PATR M.

Scenes During the War When the Musical Forces Faced Each Other.

At one time I was a member of one of the military bands in the old army. It so happened that the regiment to which our band was attached was sent to Fort Pulaski. We were on one of the gun boats manœuvring in that region, and on one occasion in passing up the river, which had several outlet chanels or mouths, the boat ran up the wrong channel, one so narrow that it did not permit a turn of the boat except under the very guns of the rebels. The officer in command soon discovered the mistake, but the question was how he was to get out of the scrape

Some distance to the front the channel widened, so that there would be no difficulty in turning the boat for a retreat if the rebel guns which commanded that part of the channel would keep quiet. The officer called the band together, and instructed them to play "Dixie." We did it, and did our best, and that Federal gunboat swung round into the wide part of the channel, the band playing the favorite Confederate tune, and the rebels cheering instead of firing at us. As soon as the turn was made and the boat was out of the immediate range of the heavy guns, we changed instantly to "The Star Spangled Banner," and then it was bang and crash and roar, the very men who had been cheering us not two minutes before sending bullets after us.

"That," said an old Indianian, "reminds me of the Fourth of July, 1864, at Kensaw Mountain, or at least in the Kensaw campaign. The two armies were so close to each other at that time that one could hear the bands of the other almost as plain as their own. In the morning of course, the bands in the Union army celebrated the day by playing the national airs, while at the same time the bands in the Confederate army played 'Dixie,' 'Bonny Blue Flag,' and other airs then in favor with the rebels. After there had been a spirited contest as to which side could make the most noise, there was an interval of silence, and, very much to the surprise of the Union troops, one of the bands in the rebel camp played "Hail Columbia."

"Not to be outdone in the matter of courtesy, one of the Union bands played 'Dixie,' so there was for a time an interchange of compliment, the Union bands playing Confederate airs and the Confederate bands playing national airs. This provoked considerable enthusiasm and a great deal of good feeling on both sides. While the two armies were in camp at Chattanoogga I spent a good many nights on the out posts, and I never had so keen an appreciation of music as on the beautiful moonlight nights when scores of bands in the rival camps would play for the half hour preceeding taps. On one side was a canvas city of 50,000 stalwart men in blue. Over on Mission Ridge and a little beyond were as many men in gray. There were probably twenty or thirty excellent bands in each army, and when they all played, national airs on one side, Confederate airs on the other, the pickets midway between the monster camps had the benefit of both concerts.

"I remember one night after most of the bands had retired from the contest three or four of the best in each army played for an hour or more as if in rivalry. In the Union camp after the band had rendered 'Hail Columbia,' there would be cheer on cheer from 10,000 throats. At the same time the strains of 'Bonny Blue Flag' would come from the other side, to be followed by cheer on cheer from as many men. At last the band on the Union side struck up 'The Girl I Left Behind Me,' and for a minute there was silence over in the other camp; then the rebel band caught up the same strain and they played it together to the end. Then, as if by common impulse, came cheer on cheer from both camps, and the pickets, throwing caution to the winds, cheered together."—Chicago Inter-Ocean.

President Cleveland's Peril.

WASHINGTON, March 21.—Dr. Z. T. Somers, one of the most eminent physicians of Washington, in an interview with a reporter to-day declares that there is danger that President Cleveland will not live through his term unless there is a change in his mode of living. Dr. Somers, six months before Mr. Manning's illness, made the same prediction with regard to the Secretary, and advised a friend to warn him of his danger.

SHIRLEY CARSTONE

By ELIZA ARCHARD.

Copyrighted by American Press Association.

The child ran off in all haste, and disappeared around the corner. In spite of Mis' Simpkins he had abstracted one of the cigars. He was minded to learn to smoke. He wandered out into the country. He went a long way, so as to be sure he was out of the sight of the village, and the hawk eye of Mrs. Simpkins. Then he lit the cigar, and still wandered farther and farther. He did not know where he was going, and did not think about it. Little Rip put the roll of weed between his lips, and puffed away bravely, swaggering and taking long steps, as he had seen young men do. Shortly he began to feel very bad, but he kept stoutly on, with a devotion worthy of a better cause. The mail carrier passed by in his buckboard wagon.

"'Twas the most ridiculous sight I ever seen," said he afterwards. "Thar was the little cuss, lettin' on he was smokin'. The cigar had a great long ash on it. He clitched it between his fingers, jess so, like he'd seen big fellers do. He was desput ashy around the gills and so sick he staggered, but thar he cocked his mite of a head up and went on, as big as Gineral Jackson."

But at last there came a moment when even little Rip's giant will gave out. His legs failed him. He felt sure he was dying, with that awful feeling in his stomach. He was only a baby after all. He crawled to the roadside and lay down beside a huge stone. He groaned and cried bitterly, as many a big boy would like to do, but doesn't dare, when he smokes his first cigar.

* * * * * *

That same afternoon Col. Carstone said to Sam:

"Bring out Ulysses. I must break that colt. It's going to be a tough job, too. But I'll give him a lesson this afternoon."

The children's pet had grown a magnificent animal. He was a splendid sorrel, with a thin, quivering nostril, an arched neck and a flashing eye. The colonel eyed him closely as Sam led him from the stable.

Mrs. Carstone came out with her baby in her arms to see him mount.

"Take care, Tom, dear," said she. "He looks wicked."

"I never yet saw the animal I couldn't master. And a man who can manage a horse can always manage a woman. They're much alike. You must pet and master them at the same time. The man who can do that is always a very good fellow, too, I've noticed, eh, wife!"

He patted the horse on the neck.

"Ho, Lys, ho, ho. You look a little ugly, but we'll soon take that out of you."

The beautiful creature shied and reared, but Col. Carstone at length got upon his back, and was off. He was a famous horseman, and an enthusiastic lover of horses. Of the colt Ulysses he had great expectations. The animal had proved unexpectedly hard to train, however. He behaved right creditably that afternoon though, and his master took him farther than he had meant to do, beyond the village, on the State Line turnpike. It was on this road that poor little Rip had lain down, sick enough to die. He was a queer sight lying there curled around like a caterpillar, and making the outlandish, groaning noise he was.

The horse saw him and shied desperately. His master spurred him on. He refused to budge forward a step, but turned half around backwards, and danced with rage and terror. The boy saw the rearing, plunging horse, and started to run. This affrighted the beast still more. The colonel's blood was up.

"Stop where you are, you imp of Satan," he roared at the boy. The horse became almost unmanageable even for his practiced hand.

"I'll break you of this nonsense, or I'll break your neck," he said between his teeth. But he was entirely steady and cool toward the horse.

"Come, Lys," he said, encouragingly, "come—on, on!" He pressed the spurs into the creature at the same time.

In three seconds it was over.

The animal gave a snort of fury. He reared perpendicularly in the air, and fell over backwards. The colonel, preserving still his presence of mind, had barely time to free his foot. He was flung violently upon his head into the broken stone of the road.

The horse's neck was broken.

The sun went down, the shadows deepened over the lonely State Line turnpike. Horse and rider lay there still in the road.

CHAPTER VII.

FATHER AND DAUGHTER.

Till the shadows gathered Shirley sat there under the willows. Her heart seemed dead within her. She was only 16. She was very strong. Her ancestors on her father's side of the house had lived to be 100 years old, some of them. She was like her father's side of the house. Would she live to be 100 years old and have to keep on facing sorrows and disappointments like this all the time? Then life was serious business.

"Shirley! Shirley! Where are you? Come up to the house, quick!"

It was her brother Tom calling. She gave a start. Was it really growing dusk? She hastened to the house. Her mother met her at the porch.

"Where have you been all this time?" she asked. Then, without waiting for an answer, she ran on:

"Your father rode the sorrel colt away this afternoon. He has not come back. I'm afraid something has happened to him. What shall I do?"

Shirley gathered herself up. Her heart gave a bound, and then stopped with an awful stillness.

"Which way did he go?" she asked.

"Towards Linwood."

"Where's Sam?"

"Sam has gone to a negro wedding, and won't be back to-night."

The children gathered around while they talked, and watched Shirley with frightened, pleading eyes. It was Shirley they all turned to in their troubles, even then. She was herself in a moment, the good, brave daughter again.

"Get the pony, Tom, and come with me," she said.

She went to the stable and saddled Penelope, Ulysses' mate. In five minutes she and Tom were on the road to Linwood. Through the gathering gloom they sped like the wind. By the light streaming from the window they discerned a group of persons at the door of Simpkins' grocery. A small boy was telling something to the rest, throwing his arms about in excitement. It was the baby tramp, little Rip. Shirley heard these words:

"He spoke to me sassy, and he says, 'Stop, there, you little devil.' Gee! but he said it sassy. Then he kicked his heels into the horse's sides, an' he spoke to him like he was the boss, and told him to go on. But the horse shook his head to tell him he wouldn't. Then the horse jumped on his hind legs like this, and fell over. The man was throwed out into the road. The horse didn't get up again, and the man didn't get up again. They're layin' out there in the road yet, you bet!"

Shirley listened with pale lips. "It is my father!" she exclaimed. "Where was it, boy?"

"Out there," said the child, jerking his thumb over his shoulder.

"It's out on the State Line turnpike. Come Tom, quick."

She was off again, like the wind.

"Good Lord, 'twas Col. Carstone!" exclaimed Mis' Simpkins. "What if she goes out alone in the dark and finds her father dead? Men! follow her quick!"

To be Continued.

Action for Damages.

St. Catharines, March 22.—Dr. Comfort, police magistrate, has an action pending against him for $5,000 damages. He examined a man here four or five years ago, and reported him as an unsound mind. The man referred to was committed to the Hamilton insane asylum, and after his release entered suit against the doctor for $10,000 damages. The writ was issued at the instant of a lawyer in Welland, and the suit was dismissed. Now another action has been taken against the magistrate for $5,000 damages. The lawyer in this case hails from Toronto. The police magistate intends to petition the law society to have both these lawyers stripped of their gowns for instituting these actions.

Astonishing Success

It is the duty of every person who has used Boschee's German Syrup to let its wonderful qualities be known to their friends in curing Consumption, severe Coughs, Croup, Asthma, Pneumonia, and in fact all throat and lung diseases. No person can use it without immediate relief. Three doses will relieve any case, and we consider it the duty of all Druggists to recommend it to the poor, dying consumptive at least to try one bottle, as 70,000 dozen bottes were sold last year, and no one case where it failed was reported. Such a medicine as the German Syrup cannot be too widely known. Ask your druggist about it Sample bottles to try, sold at 10 cents. Regular size, 75 cents. Sold by all Druggists and Dealers, in the United States and Canada. d90

PERSONAL.

To all who Buy Seeds.

"As ye sow so shall ye reap" is a truism worthy of consideration by all who are seeking for success in Garden or Farm operations. It is evident to every thoughtful mind that Choice Flowers, Fine Vegetables and Grain, cannot be produced by sowing a poor grade of Seed. With this object in view, I have been careful in selecting my Seeds for this season's operations. I make it a point to test the vitality of my Seeds before selling them to my customers, so that the disappointment of Seed not growing is greatly lessened. My stock will be found large and choice. Trusting to be favoured with an extensive patronage this season in my new establishment, Floral Drug Store, corner of George and Charlotte streets, opposite the market.

He Has the Blues.

P. C. Pidgeon, a florrid man, though not talkative in his temperment, is seldom out of humour. This week, however, he has the blues. He has had them all week, but on Tuesday morning his state was more than usually noticeable. He held in his hand about fifty blue papers intended for Scott Act witnesses.

See adv. in another column.

Y. W. C. T. U.

The regular meeting of the Young Women's Christian Temperance Union was held on Tuesday afternoon in the Y. M. C. A. hall. Miss Edwards, President, occupied the chair. Meeting opened with singing and prayer. The "Lily of the Valley," with its purity and fragrance, was chosen as the emblem of the "Y" society, and for the motto, Phil. iv., 8, "Whatsoever things are true, whatsoever things are pure, whatsoever things are just, whatsoever things are lovely, if there be any virtue think on these things." The President urged the necessity of wearing the "White Ribbon."

Obituary.

On St. Patrick's day Mrs. Daniel Shannahan died at her home, township of Ennismore, after a protracted illness. She was the daughter of the late Joseph Sheehan, one of the earliest and most respected residents of the township. The number of people who attended the funeral, which took place on Saturday, fully attested the high esteem in which she was held by the people of the township and other places. The requiem high mass was celebrated by the Rev. Father Kielty, and afterwards, in a short discourse, he referred to the many good qualities possessed by the deceased.

SCOTT ACT.

Two Hundred Dollars in Fines—Rossiter's Remarks.

At the Police Court this morning there was a "full house" to hear the Scott Act cases.

The MAGISTRATE read two charges, one against Wm. Clancy and one against Michael Halpin, of having committed an infraction of the Scott Act between December 25th and January 25th.

The Counsel for the prosecution not being present the Chief of Police asked for a remand till to-morrow.

The MAGISTRATE refused to grant a remand, stating that if the witnesses were not brought on he would dismiss the cases.

The DEFENDANTS both objected to the dates under which the charges were made and stated that if the informations were made to cover the time up to date they would plead guilty.

Chief COOPER said that rather than have the cases dismissed he would change the dates, making the change include the time to date.

Pleas of guilty were then entered in both cases, and the former convictions being proved, a fine of $100 and costs were imposed in each case.

Scott Act Inspector Rossiter, who had been sitting in court while these arrangements were being made, did not know of the changing of the dates till it was over, and the fines were imposed. When he found that the charges were laid including the time to date he was indignant. He said Chief Cooper had no right to change the dates. Chief Cooper explained that if he hadn't the cases would have been dismissed, but this did not satisfy him. "The hotelkeepers have been selling all through the election times," he went on. "Both parties have made a handle of the Scott Act and now the handle is going to be the other way. We might have made another $100 apiece, if its money they want, if the dates hadn't been changed."

It was suggested that if he was too severe he might turn public sympathy against him.

"I don't care a copper for public sympathy," he replied, "I'm going to do my duty."

Another case was called.

A BIG HAUL.

$200,000 Waiting for Heirs—The Kenneally Family's Claims.

For about twenty years a large sum of money has lain in New York waiting for someone to claim it. At the time of the death of Wm. A. Kenneally, in 1868, his heirs were advertised for but until lately no claim has been made upon the legacy.

Wm. A. Kenneally, the deceased, was born near Tiperary, Ireland. In 1817 or 1818 he, at that time a British soldier, came to Canada with his regiment and was stationed at Amherstburg for a number of years. When his regiment was recalled to England he left his children, William and Edward, in care of Father Fluet, at Amherstburg. Edward when grown up, left Amherstburg. William went to college in Montreal, and afterwards went to New York where he amassed wealth in the wholesale dry goods trade.

Some time ago a notice of this in a newspaper was read by Mr. Wm. Kenneally, of the Kenneally House. He communicated with his relatives who state that they are the decendants of Edward. Edward had four sons: John, Martin, Dennis and Michael. Dennis and Michael are dead, but John and Martin are living. John lives in Keene and Martin at the south end of the town. They are both uncles of Wm. Kenneally, of the Kenneally House.

On Tuesday evening, young Martin, son of John, arrived in town back from New York. He says that there is no doubt that the family here are the heirs to the estate. Before going to New York he was given a letter of introduction to Mr. C. F. Wells, lawyer, from Mr. T. Menzies, and on arrival and after stating his business, they went together to the Probate Court, found the will and got at the value of the estate. It consists of $200,000 in cash and a quantity of real estate. Mr. Wells gave Martin several questions to ask his father, all of which, he says, he can answer. Mr. D. W. Dumble is acting for Mr. Wm. Kenneally.

"Our Regiment."

The Mail of March 2nd says, regarding the play to be produced in the Opera House to-morrow evening:—"'Our Regiment' was reproduced at the Grand last evening, when a large audience was present. Applause was generously but not undeservedly bestowed, and the performance was again pronouncedly successful. Mr. McDowell has indeed secured a first-class company, and the merits of each member of the organization seem to obtain a full disclosure in 'Our Regiment,' one of the brightest comedies yet presented in this city."

A Church Dynamited.

FREDONIA, Kan., March 22.—The Dunkard Church at Buffalo, Kansas, twenty miles north of here, was blown to pieces by what is supposed to have been dynamite at 8 30 o'clock last night. A buggy track to and from one window of the church is plainly to be seen, and it is expected that the unknown guilty party will soon be apprehended. The case is understood to be a bitter feeling upon the temperance question.

PETERBOROUGH PRESBYTERY.

A Resume of the Business Done at the Last Session.

The lecture room of St. Paul's Church was occupied on Tuesday by the ministers and elders belonging to the Peterborough Presbytery. The Presbytery went into session at ten o'clock in the forenoon and adjourned at noon to the school room, where the ladies of the church had prepared dinner. At half past one o'clock they again went into session and concluded the business before them. The principal work done was as follows:—

Delegates appointed to attend the General Assembly to be held in Winnipeg on the second Tuesday in June—the Rev. Messrs. C. H. Cooke, Baltimore; J. Carmichael, Norwood; J. R. Craigie, Bobcaygeon; D. A. Thompson, Hastings; J. W. Mitchell, Port Hope; W. H. Jamieson, Perrytown; John Hay, Campbellford; and Messrs. N. F. McNaughton, Cobourg; G. Morrison, Omemee; John Carnegie, Peterborough; W. E. Roxburgh, Norwood; D. McIntosh, Coldsprings; W. E. Johnston, Grafton, and J. E. Clarke, Port Hope.

Interesting reports on the state of religion, Sunday schools and temperance were presented and interesting discussions held thereon. Congregations not having sent in returns on the state of religion were exhorted to do so in the course of the present or following week.

The attempt to unite Oakhill and Garden Hill was abandoned for the present.

The usual steps were taken to obtain permission for the Rev. D. Beattie, Campbellford, and the Rev. Jas. Cleland, Port Hope, to retire from the active work of the ministry.

Messrs. A. Thompson and D. Spear, students of the first and second years in arts in Cobourg College, were recommended to the Home Mission Committee for work in the mission field during the summer.

The session minutes of Norwood and Lakefield were examined and attested.

The remit on "Ecclesiastical Co-operation" was not approved of.

The next meeting of the Presbytery will be held in Port Hope, on the 1st Tuesday of July, at 10 o'clock. At said meeting a conference will be held on the subject of "Systematic Beneficence."

I WILL not be undersold by anyone. See if I will! R. J. KIDD.

POLICE COURT.

DOMESTIC INFELICITY.

WEDNESDAY, March 23.—Mrs. Metcalf, who lives on Water street, brought her husband before the Court charged with not having supported his family. She stated that she had received nothing from her husband for the last two weeks and that he had refused to pay the rent, which is now three months due. She kept boarders but the receipts were insufficient on which to support the family. The defendant, who worksas yard-man at a hotel, stated that he gave her every cent he earned. He received $10 a month and she got it all. He hadn't spent a five cent piece in whiskey this winter. The complainant said that he came home drunk last Saturday night. The Magistrate took an account of what the defendant had contributed toward supporting the house, and it tallying pretty nearly with what he earned, the magistrate said that he had no power to send the man to goal for not earning more.

LAND OF THE MIDNIGHT SUN.

Explorer MacArthur's Companion Leaves Him to go Alone.

WINNIPEG, March 22.—T. W. H. Young, the young man who left with Mr. Alex. MacArthur to accompany him in his northern explorations, returned to this city Friday morning, having left the latter gentleman at Norway House. Although Mr. Young has only been about three weeks travelling, his skin about the face and hands is very considerably weather tanned, and portions of the nose and cheeks show marks of being frozen. He said he left MacArthur at Norway House. From thence Mr. MacArthur says he will continue his journey, but Young says he does not think the explorer will go farther than Churchill, or if he does will not return alive.

Mr. Young gave the following account of the trip to the north:

"From Selkirk we hired teams to take our supplies a considerable distance, when we transhipped them to dog trains and continued our journey along the west shore of the lake to Norway House, travelling a distance of about 400 miles. The weather was rather severe, as a strong north wind prevailed a considerable portion of the time. One night we camped out when the thermometer registered 33 degrees below zero with a strong wind blowing from the north, but we experienced much colder weather than that after, although I cannot just now remember the register of the thermometer. Mr. MacArthur was slightly frozen about the nose, but I suffered more severely, as you can see. I returned the entire distance to Selkirk on a dog train."

Mr. MacArthur's scheme is to hire Indians to continue the journey north by dog trains. The objects of his trip are to explore the west coast of Greenland, and to make an ornithological collection of the arctic regior. The enterprise is a private one, but it has been materially assisted by the Dominion Government and the Hudson's Bay Company.

Mr. Young says the reason he returned was that he "does not consider Mr. MacArthur the right man for such a trip; he has not the slightest knowledge of Arctic travelling—he is a theorist, not practical." This opinion is shared by a good many others.

NEWS NOTES.

The naval review at Portsmouth on July 23rd will be attended by the Queen.

The Supreme Court adjourned on Tuesday till May 2nd, when judgments will be delivered.

The trial of the fifteen Socialists charged with attempting to burn Vienna is in progress in that city.

Veterinary Surgeon Matthews, of the Horse Gurrds, will shortly leave England for Canada to assist Colonel Goldie in purchasing horses for the British army.

Edward Whelan, the twelfth known victim of the Buffalo hotel fire, died on Monday night. All of the injured are doing well except four, who are not expected to recover.

The annual meeting of the Provincial Board of Health was concluded in Toronto on Saturday. Various important amendments to the Health Act were adopted for submission to the Legislature.

An express train ran into a freight engine in the Grand Trunk yard at Ingersoll on Sunday, wrecking both engines and the baggage car and damaging two passenger cars. Fortunately no one was injured.

The February account of the Postoffice Savings Bank shows a total of $18,896,188.54 to the credit of depositors. During the month the deposits amounted to $578,392, and the withdrawal to $466,526.58.

It is announced that Mr. Porter, M. P. for West Huron, and Dr. Weldon, M P. for Albert, N. B., will be mover and seconder of the address in reply to the Speech from the Throne at the coming session of Parliament.

Premier Sullivan, of Prince Edward Island, on Saturday met the committee of the Privy Council appointed to consider the proposed submarine tunnel, and gave the grounds on which the Island asks the Government for assistance to the scheme.

Shortly before midnight on Sunday a fire brook out in the Chautauqua Assembly grounds, destroying about fifty cottages with their furniture and the new hotel. The loss will exceed $100,000, falling almost entirely upon summer residents.

The fifth annual report of the Canada North West Land Company says the sales of farm lands and town sites were satisfactory last year, that settlement is increasing, free homesteads are being rapidly taken up, and that a material increase of sales is expected in the near future.

At a large meeting of the friends and expupils of Upper Canada College in Toronto, resolution were adopted expressing disapproval of the proposed disendowment, and a strong deputation was appointed to address the Ontario Legislature in defence of the institution.

It is expected that the Dominion Artillery Association, at its annual meeting to be held in Ottawa on May 5th, will arrange for holding a monster competition on the Isle of Orleans, in July or August, in place of the annual trip to Shoeburyness, which will be abandoned this year.

Colonel Rhodes, President of the Geographical Society of Quebec, is urging on the Department of Marine the necessity for prompt action to forcibly break up the various ice jams between Montreal and Quebec, which he believes will result in opening navigation several weeks earlier than usual.

A correspondent of St. John, Dak., states that the reports of serious difficulties with the half-breeds in that settlement are without foundation. The dispute over the payment of taxes has been referred to the authorities at Washington, and the half-breeds will abide by their decision.

A deputation representing the different legal societies of Ontario on Tuesday waited upon the Minister of Justice and laid before him the question of the inadequate salaries of the judges in Ontario. Mr Thompson promised to law the matter before his colleagues at the earliest occasion.

Nominated.

The Rev. Dr. Burns, of Halifax, has been nominated by the Presbytery of Peterborough as Moderator of the General Assembly, to meet at Winnipeg on the 2nd Thursday in June. The Rev. Mr. Jemison, of Perrytown, has declined the appointment as delegate to the Assembly.

J. J. Daly's Restaurant.

Corner of Market Square and George Streets, is now open. Meals served at all hours. Oysters in all shapes a speciality. Also Fish, Steak, Canned Lobsters, etc., etc everything in season furnished at a minutes notice. Charges moderate.

ONTARIO LEGISLATURE

THE FIRST SESSION OF THE SIXTH PROVINCIAL PARLIAMENT.

Aid the Protestant Home—Compensation to Workmen for Injuries—The House in Committee of Supply.

TUESDAY, March 22.—A number of bills were introduced and some were read a third time.

BELLEVILLE HOSPITAL.

Mr. HARDY moved the ratification of an Order-in-Council granting aid to the Belleville hospital.—Carried.

PETERBOROUGH PROTESTANT HOME.

Mr. HARDY moved that this House doth ratify an Order-in-Council approved by the Lieutenant-Governor on the 22nd day of June, 1886, which order is to the following effect:—Upon consideration of the report of Mr. Inspector Christie, dated 3rd June, 1886, and the recommendation of the Provincial Secretary, the Committee of Council advise that, subject to the ratification of this Order by the Legislative Assembly at the next session thereof, the Protestant Home, Peterborough, be hereafter taken as named in schedule "B" of the Charity Aid Act, and receive aid accordingly from the first day of October, 1885.

The motion passed.

COMPENSATION TO WORKMEN.

MR. FRASER moved that a special committee be appointed to enquire into the operation of the Workmen's Compensation for Injuries Act, 1885, especially with reference to section 17.—Carried.

SUPPLY.

Mr. BIGGAR complained that no appropriation had been made for colonization roads in North Bruce. The people would think that the reason of the omission was that they had returned a Conservative.

Mr. CREIGHTON remarked that, the elections being over, the estimates for colinization roads had been reduced. He attacked the vote of $21,000 under this head for general purposes, contending that some indication should be given as to where it was proposed to expend this money.

Mr. MARTER said he would like the Government to try the experiment one year of indicating what roads they wanted built, and giving the money to the municipal councils to expend on the work. He believed such a method would give general satisfaction.

Mr. MEREDITH asked if the Government could not take the responsibility of giving the settlers in the late disputed territory their patents.

Mr. MOWAT hoped an understanding would soon be reached regarding the matter.

Mr. CONMEE attacked the Opposition and insinuated that their interest in the settler was simulated.

Mr. MEREDITH said that last session he had advocated the Government taking the course of issuing patents on the occasion of the introduction of the bill respecting Rainey River district.

Several items having been passed, the Committee rose and the House adjourned at 6 p. m., having been in session nearly three hours.

THE PUBLIC HEALTH.

Mortuary Returns From 26 Canadian Cities and Towns.

The total number of deaths in the month of February in the 26 chief cities and towns making monthly returns to the Department of Agriculture in Ottawa was 1,155, with no returns from Victoria, B. C. This number is less by 169 than that of the previous month's (January) record. It must not be overlooked, however, that February is three days shorter than January, and as there was an average of about 42 deaths per day, the ratio of mortality in February was but little than that of January, or of December either. There was in reality but little variation in the rate of mortality during the three last months; it being on an average during that period, about 22.4 per 1,000 of population, per annum, and for February 22 per thousand.

In Montreal, the actual rate of mortality in February was somewhat higher than in January; or 27 per 1,000 of population. Toronto, which gave an increased mortality in January, over December, shows a lower rate for February, or barely 20 per 1,000 of population. The mortality in Quebec fell in February to a rate per annum of about 24 per 1,000 of population—from 26 in January; and that in Hamilton to 15 per 1,000—from nearly 20 in January. In Ottawa, the rate which had fallen to less than 18 per 1,000 in January, increased in February to 21 per 1,000, which was still lower than had been recorded in the Capital during a long previous period. In Kingston, where an unusual high rate, for that city, had been recorded in January, the mortality fell in February about 25 per cent. below that of the previous month. In Sorel, the mortality still further declined,—from 62 per 1,000 in January to about 52 in February.

From Zymotic diseases in the twenty-six cities and towns, there was a decline in mortality in February of over 25 per cent., as compared with the previous month, the total mortality from this class of diseases being at a rate of less than 3 per 1,000 of population per annum. In Montreal and Toronto the mortality from this class was about the same as in the previous month, while in Quebec, Ottawa and Hamilton, there was a dedided decline.

From small-pox there was no deaths recorded. From diphtheria there was a decline in the number of deaths, from a total of 105 in January to 58 in February; while the totals from diarrhœal diseases declined from 31 to 22 in the same period. From measles there were 0 deaths in Montreal, there being five in January.

From constitutional diseases there was an increase in February of about seven per cent.; with a decrease from both local and developmental diseases. There was precisely the same number (viz., 39) of deaths from violence in each of the two months.—Canada Health Journal.

In reply to a deputation from the Hamilton Ministerial Association and the Prohibition Club, the city license commissioners promised to make a reduction in the number of liquor licenses issued but refused to strike off the list fifty license holders who had been convicted of violating the law.

JICARILLA BOB TOOK THE POT.

Two Men who Held Five Aces Between Them Buried the Next Day.

A Farmington, N. M., despatch says:—They had a poker game here on Saturday night in the back room of Jicarilla Bob, who was present to see if everything was fair. The men at the table were Tom Sinsabaugh, a cattle dealer, and Potter Abert, Omaha Throup, and Pap Williams, gamblers. The game had been going along for some time without much excitement and with no very large winnings, when suddenly Pap Williams, who had thrown down two cards, offered to go it blind for $50. The others saw him, and a crowd that had assembled at the bar moved over to see how the thing would come out. All the others drew three cards each. Williams ran his cards over carlessly, called for a drink, and with a cigar in one corner of his mouth, said he would bet $50. All the others stayed in, and on the show down, no one manifesting a deposition to raise it, it appeared that there were five aces out, Pap Williams having three and Potter Albert two. This discovery came very near resulting in war but at the suggestion of Jicarilla Bob the pot was left up and a new deal was had, he taking the extra ace and tearing it up.

After the new deal Abert called for four cards, Sinsabaugh for three, Throup for three, and Williams for two. There was now more than $400 in the pot, and as Abert offered to bet $50 the others felt that they would have to see him. When it came round to Abert again he concluded to raise the terms a little, and he put it up $100. This caused old man Sinsabaugh to draw out, with the remark that the water was getting two deep for a man with a little pair. The other two saw the raise and called. Down came the cards, and almost simultaneously with their appearance was the crack of a revolver, and Potter Abert fell out of his chair, while Pap Williams, gun in hand, reached over and swept in the pile of money. On the table in the front of where Abert was lying were five cards, three of them aces, while in the front of Williams were two aces, one of them being a duplicate of one in the hand of the man under the table.

So much interest was excited by the inspection of these two hands and the sweeping in by Williams of the money, that no one noticed Abert slowly rising on the other side of the table. Jicarilla Bob was the first to catch a glimpse of him, but he had time to cry out only to Williams, when Abert's bullet pierced his heart. Every man in the room except the proprietor then broke for the door, but before all had gone out Bob's voice was heard saying the dispute over the game had left no claim to the stakes, and the landlord would, therefore, take possession. Displaying two big repeaters as he said this, he was just in time to reply to a shot from the weapon of Omaha Throup. Neither man was hit, and for a minute they stood facing each other. A bystander here stepped between the two men, and the crowd, edged forward, soon separated them. Then a council of war was held, and it was agreed that the money now claimed should go to the house, the two survivors of the game received their stakes back.

The next morning Abert and William were buried just out of the town, and at the head of their graves two boards were placed, that at Abert's grave having the inscription. "Three Aces," and that at Williams' grave having "Two Aces." The Coroner's jury returned a verdict that both men came to their death from natural causes, "superinduced by overeating," a good way, as one citizen said, of covering up the fact that they were hogs. It has not yet been decided on which had the extra ace, but from the fact that in Abert's pack another ace was found, and in Williams' belt there were found two more, it is inferred that both were in the business.

THE GOVERNMENT PROGRAMME.

Coercion, Tenant Relief and Land Purchase All At Once.

LONDON, March 23.—Though neither Mr. Smith nor Mr. Balfour gave any explicit statement of the Government's Irish measures in the House of Commons yesterday, an analysis of their speeches disclosed the fact that a definite policy has been decided upon and fully elaborated, covering all legislation for Ireland that the Government will consent to propose. The programme will open with a coercion bill, conjoined with a tenants' relief bill to be introduced in the House of Lords next week. The relief proposals will consist in giving tenants power to stay evictions by declaring their inability to pay a full rent and wiping out the claim by a surrender to the Bankruptcy Court. A grand measure for land purchase will follow. This measure is now known to be based upon Mr. Chamberlain's land bank scheme. If the Government should be defeated at any point in the development of their policy they will not resign, but will appeal to the country. The confident tone of the ministerialists goes to confirm the generally accepted report that Mr. Chamberlain and Lord Hartington assisted in building the scheme and approve its final structure. The Parnellites are eager to fight at every stage, but they find the Gladstonians reluctant to support them. Instead of contesting the urgency motion to the utmost extreme the Gladstonian whips, without consulting the Parnellites, have arranged with the Government whips to divide on Morley's amendment on Thursday, thus opening the road to the passage of the Coercion before the Easter recess. The Parnellites are disposed to disregard the whips, and are arranging to continue the struggle independently.

Two Boys' Fatal Quarrel.

HALIFAX, March 23.—At Mull River, six miles from Mabou, C. B., two boys named Worth and McMullen, got into a quarrel, and Worth becoming frantic with rage, picked up a hammer and struck McMullen a terrible blow in the temple. McMullen dropped dead on the spot.

Attempted Suicide at Toronto.

TORONTO, March 23.—Charles Selway, living at No. 8 John street, attempted to commit suicide last night by hanging himself in his bedroom. He was unconscious when cut down and is still in a critical state. He has been out of employment and got despondent.

LATEST CABLE NEWS!

RUMORS ABOUT RANDOLPH.

LONDON, March 23.—Lord Randolph Churchill will arrive in England next week. His friends who were lately announcing that all compromise between him and the Ministry was impossible, are now singing a different tune. They go about whispering that a place will speedily be made for him in the Cabinet and that he will not refuse the Chancellorship of the Duchy of Lancaster nor decline any place on the front bench even under the leadership of Mr. W. H. Smith.

FLAT DENIAL.

BERLIN, March 23.—The rumors from Vienna of a new but unsuccessful attempt on the Czar's life are flately denied.

AN AGREEMENT.

BERLIN, March 23.—Prince Bismarck and the Pope have come to an agreement on the new church bill, and its discussion by the Landtag is the only remaining formality, but Herr Windthorst will not resign the leadership of the Centre.

THE CANADIAN CARDINAL.

PARIS, March 23.—Cardinal Taschereau arrived here yesterday. His eminence is delighted with the reception accorded him at the Vatican. He was especially touched by the Pope's conferring upon him a Court of Honor by nominating the Abbee Hamel and League to the rank of apostolic protonotaries, the Abbe Methot and Boldue to the rank of domestic prelates and the Abbes Marois and Tetu to the rank of secret chamberlains. The Cardinal will sail for New York on Saturday by the steamship "Gascogne."

WOULD-BE ASSASSINS EXECUTED.

ST. PETERSBURG, March 23.—It is reported that six persons were captured on Sunday in connection with the recent plot to assassinate the Czar, and hanged on Monday. DeGraieff, the man who murdered Lieut.-Col. Suidekin, the Russian Chief of Police, three years ago, and who was suspected of having planned the plot against the Czar's life, is said to have been one of the six.

FATHER KELLER'S CASE.

LONDON, March 23.—A stormy week in the House of Commons is in prospect. The debate on Mr. Morley's amendment is expected to last till Friday or later. Beyond that nobody dares to conjecture. The American Irish, according to cable despatches, are taking up the Keller case and seem disposed to base a new appeal on the arrest and imprisonment of this priest. The feelings here among the friends and allies of the Irish party is that Father Keller's case has been worked for more than it is worth. His conflict with the Court has nothing to do with his priestly office nor did the question he refused to answer relate in the remotest degree to the secrets of the confessional. He was chosen, shrewdly enough, to hold the funds for the tenants who combined under the plan of campaign. Bankruptcy proceedings were begun against one of these tenants, and Father Keller was summoned to testify respecting the funds in his possession to which the creditors were entitled, but he refused to answer even a preliminary question. The Daily News, a thorough Home Rule organ, justifies the authorities and declares that no fair minded person can say the Government is to blame, and that Mr. John Morley would have been obliged to carry out the order of Court just as Mr. Balfour is.

THE DAKOTA HALF-BREEDS.

Facts of the Dispute Between Them and the Local Authorities.

WINNIPEG, March 23.—A correspondent at St. John, Dakota, gives the following account of the half-breed troubles there: "There is no reason whatever to fear any serious difficulty with the half-breeds. There are not in this settlement upwards of one thousand families of half-breeds, as has been stated, but only about three hundred families, and among these there are only five men who took part in the fight at Batoche. These men did not bring with them any large number of horses and cattle, but came here very poor, having lost during the trouble all they possessed. The mass of the halfbreeds here are those who always claimed the country as their hunting grounds during the buffalo days, and the buffalo having disappeared they now claim the first title to the lands for settlement. The Government at Washington did furnish them with cattle and means to cultivate the soil and to support schools for their children and it is for these things that the local authorities are trying to tax them. Whether they have a right to do so has been laid before the authorities at Washington for decision and the halfbreeds will abide by that decision."

GIFTS TO THE KAISER.

His Wife Weaves Him a Sash—Others Gives Him Works of Art.

BERLIN, March 23.—Among the presents received by the Emperor is a General's sash which the Empress made for him. It is an exact pattern of the sashes worn by Frederick the Great. The empress insisted upon being the first to offer congratulations to the Emperor. Punctually as the clock struck ten she entered the Emperor's study and presented the sash and other gifts. When the Emperor appeared at his window he wore the sash. Floral presents were numerous. The Crown Princess painted for the occasion a life size portrait of Prince William around which were placed the boquets presented by members of the family. Special pleasure seemed to be afforded the Emperor by the children of Prince William, who carried their boquets to their grandfather, followed by the children of Prince Albrecht and of the Crown Prince of Sweden. Many floral tributes came from distant parts of Germany and from England. High officials of the court presented to the Emperor a picture representing a military scene. At noon a charming group in terra cotta by Eugene Blott came from Paris, entitled "Grandpapa's Birthday." A society of German architects presented a large centre piece of carved wood. One poor woman left at the door of the palace a small bunch of flowers with a petition praying for the pardon of her husband who is now in prison. The flowers and petition were placed in a position where they could attract the Emperor's attention. The petition was granted.

The Daily Review.

THURSDAY, MARCH 24, 1887.

ELECTION IRREGULARITIES.

In this Riding we have had a case of a Conservative vote being spoilt by the act of a Deputy Returning Officer, the secrecy of the ballot being violated at the same time. We willingly accept the explanation of Mr. Henderson, that if he wrote the voter's name on the ballot paper, of which he has no recollection, he did so mechanically and by inadvertence, while the name was sounding in his ears, instead of writing his initials, which were absent. But the Reform journals are not ready to accept similar explanations from Conservative officials, insisting upon treating them as wilful outrages, and exaggerating them grossly as an excuse for their defeat. Even Sir Richard Cartwright disgraced himself at the recent meeting of the Ontario Reform Club by alleging "gross partiality and gross misconduct on the part of the Returning Officers and their deputies," as a cause of the route of his present political allies. In the Peterborough instance, as in others, it may be seen that Reformers are quite as liable to make mistakes as Conservatives.

The conclusion that should be drawn from this and similar cases, is that the law should be so amended as to prevent votes from being thus invalidated.

Another point as to which Reformers have been raising a howl as usual to cover their own delinquencies is the question as to the regularity of certain election deposits. Recent legal proceedings show the kind of tricks practised by Reformers in this respect also. Mr. Shibley, the Reform candidate in Addington, did not make any deposit. Mr. Britton, a Kingston lawyer and a strong partizan of the Reform party, did make a deposit of $200, because, as he said, he wanted to have a contest. It was, Mr. Britton claimed, his deposit, his money, and was not liable to seizure by Mr. Shibley's creditors. Clearly it was no deposit by Mr. Shibley as a candidate. It cannot even be urged that it was Mr. Shibley's for the purpose of forfeiture if he failed to obtain the required number of votes, though not for other purposes, since Mr. Britton himself upset that argument. One of his claims in court was that the deposit being irregular there was in consequence no candidate, and, therefore, no deposit. By his own showing it was a mere bogus deposit and not the legal deposit by a candidate. If Mr. Shibley had received the majority of votes he most undoubtedly should not have been returned, for he was not an eligible candidate under either the letter or the spirit of the law. If that law is wrong it should be amended by Parliament, not by a single candidate or a single constituency.

The more these cases are examined the easier it is to see where the dividing line should be drawn. Irregularities committed by officials or others than the candidate, and not effecting the result except by the enforcement of technicalities, should not be allowed to counteract the choice of the majority of the electors. Acts of omission or commission by the candidate rendering him legally ineligible, should disqualify him until the law is amended.

THE Globe says that residential manhood suffrage should be adopted at once. Why does it not tell Mr. Mowat so instead of Sir John Macdonald? The Dominion as a whole is not yet ready for such a thorough extension of the franchise. The people of Ontario are ready for it and might adopt it for their Provincial franchise, but Mr. Mowat is not ready, because he dreads the people and would restrict as much as possible their power to give a verdict against him. We do not remember that the Globe gave any support to Mr. Meredith and his supporters when Mr. Mowat was obstinately voting down their resolutions in favour of manhood suffrage.

ADDRESSING the Ontario Reform Club recently Sir Richard Cartwright said that the Reformers of Ontario in the Dominion election had scarcely been able to do more than hold their own. They have only just held their own with a majority of 16 against them. This would have been considerably increased and they would have been far from holding their own if they had not won several seats by the cry of vengeance for Riel's punishment, a cry against which Sir Richard Cartwright himself voted in the House in opposition to his leader, Mr. Blake, but of which he now seems ready to take the benefit.

WHILE boasting of a surplus in Ontario will some Reform papers give the years in which Mr. Mowat added to the surplus and state how the accumulations made by his Government have been invested? A few particulars of that character would be interesting.

Modest, But Pleased.

Ontario's Premier was resplendent in a nicely brushed beaver hat, frock coat, and clean stand-up collar and cuffs when a News reporter met him in the lobby on Monday.

"What are the prospects of your going to Ottawa, Mr. Mowat? Is there any truth in the rumor that there is possibility of your superseding Mr. Blake?'

Mr. Mowat laughed and didn't say anything. He seemed rather tickled with the question, and rubbed his hands pleasantly. "Oh, I don't know," he said at length. "I can't exactly say."

"You wouldn't like to say whether there is a possibility of its becoming a fact?"

"No, I wouldn't like to say just now. I would rather not be interviewed—Please don't."

The reporter left, and Mr. Mowat walked off with the same pleased smile.—Toronto News.

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS

A NATIONAL VIEW.

The meeting of the Premiers of the different Provinces, called by Mr. Mercier, will be the means of eliciting a lot of valuable information. But the delegates will be powerless to do anything in the way of correcting abuses; and any opinion they may give will merely express the Provincial view as against the Federal. Already there has been too much expression of the Provincial view in this country. What we want is a national opinion.—Toronto World (Ind.)

ATTACKING OUR CONSTITUTION.

The Dominion Parliament is a greater body than any of the Provincial Legislatures, and it is by the Dominion Parliament that a matter of such importance should be taken up. If Confederation is to be sat upon by the Provincial Legislatures or parish politicians, it will soon be worried out of existence. Quebec has her own game to play, the object of w ich is to get her hand further into the Federal chest, but that is not a valid reason for the other Provinces aiding and abetting her.—Toronto Telegram (Indep.)

MR. BLAKE'S DUPLICITY.

Mr. Blake is accused of having "gone over to Protection," and of stating "distinctly that Protection had become necessary, owing to the large increase in the public expenditure." Mr. Blake never stated anything of the kind. What he did say was that Conservative extravagance had increased expenditure so as to necessitate a higher tariff.—Toronto Globe (Reform.)

DYNAMYTERS IN QUEBEC.

Attempt to Blow up a Salvationist Meeting House.

QUEBEC, March 22.—The city is all excitement to-night over one of the most dastardly attempts to Socialism ever recorded in the annals of this city. In gravity in beggarded the attempt to destroy the Parliament building. While the French portion of the Salvation Army were at worship in Jeffrey Hale school hall to-night, some person or persons placed within a broken pane a bomb which exploded, and caused fearful havoc to the front of the building, demolishing all the frame work and glass. Fortunately the first meeting, which was largely attended, had closed, and what is known in that order as the prayer meeting was in progress when the explosion occurred, and but few persons were present outside the staff. No persons were killed, but two or three have been seriously injured, one man having his wrist partly severed by flying glass. The force of the explosion sent the broken glass and debris a distance of some forty feet and over into the interior of the building, and came nearly making a victim of Capt. Simcoe, who was at the time leading the prayers. The building was filled with smoke and the gas extinguished leaving the place in utter darkness. The inmates were nearly frightened to death, the women fainting and screaming and the men rushing to and fro in the greatest excitement, unable to re alize what had really occurred. A visit shows the shock must have been terrific, as benches, chairs and tables were overturned in all parts of the hall, the woodwork powderburned, and the place altogether in a dilapidated condition.

The conspirators are believed to be young men belonging to the higher class of society who made themselves very conspicuous in the riots waged against the se defenceless women when they first arrived here. The police have set to work upon a clue, and should the perpetrators be captured it is hard to say what the indignant crowd will do to them.

Natural Products Free.

The question of the advisability of reciprocal free trade in natural products of the two countries is a different matter altogether. Since the last treaty was negotiated the circumstances of both countries have vastly changed. The United States have acquired a world-wide trade, and their profits will be increased in proportion to the decrease in cost of their raw material, whether that arises from proximity or any other cause. Nowhere can they get the material they require as good or as cheaply as they can here, and their forests are yearly becoming more distant than ours from their chief markets. Our coal and iron supplies are in some instances more easy of access to them; so it is for their own interests to admit our natural products free now more than ever. At the same time we would derive a similar benefit, but to a much less extent.

Upon the whole, such an arrangement is only just to the inhabitants of both countries.

The adoption of a vigorous trade policy as suggested by our Government; the settlement of the fisheries difficulty, followed by reciprocity in national products, would pave the way to such further mutual concessions as would be advantageous to both, and in such case it is reasonable to expect, without endangering or sacrificing British connection, or importing matters of sentiment into plain business transactions, that an arrangement may be evolved worthy of the intelligence of the people of both countries, adapted to the requirements of both, giving to the inhabitants of each any advantages to be derived from freer intercourse, and at the same time securing to our infant industries the protection and assistance they now have a right to expect from the people of Canada. —Arcturus.

The Dakota Flood.

BISMARCK, Dak., March 22—The flood reached its highest point yesterday, thirteen inches above high-water mark of 1881. In the afternoon the water receded somewhat and last night showed a decrease of about six inches. The first authentic news from Mandan since Friday was received last evening, when the ferry succeeded in forcing a passage across from the western shore. The water at Mandan is flowing over the Main-street sidewalks, filling basements, but has not reached the ground floors of buildings on that level. The railroad shops are badly flooded. In the roundhouse there is forty-four inches of water. The people of Mandan think the worst is over and that the damage is not so great as feared.

A Youthful Murderer.

ERIE, Ks., March 22.—Willie Sells, the boy murderer who is under sentence of death for killing his father, mother, brother and sister, but who has always protested his innocence, has now confessed his guilt. He says that his brother Waty first killed his father with a hatchet during a quarrel. Willie being enraged at this seized the hatchet and killed Waty. When finding that he was observed by his mother and sister he killed them in the same way, being greatly excited and hardly knowing why he did it.

SOMETHING NEW UNDER THE SUN!

GOUGH'S

FRESH ARRIVAL OF SPRING OVERCOATS AND SUITS

ARE THE NOBBIEST AND NEWEST UNDER THE SUN!

Those High-Price "Clothing Dealers" can't see the funny about GOUGH'S GIFT DEPARTMENT, and claim such things as beneath them. Yes, low advertising is beyond their comprehenson, because they don't understand the first principles of Low Price System. We freely admit that we are fallen clothiers, wallowing in the lowest depths of Bed Rock Prices, while our exalted brethern look down upon us from their high places, and go wild because we capture the trade.

☞Farmers, Mechanics, Merchants, Bankers and Laboring men, come in and see us, take no man's word. Envestigate and believe your own eyes, and you will be convinced that GOUGH is the Cheapest Clothier on earth.

This week we will offer extraordinary inducements. All our departments have been augmented with new features and choice stock, which will justly excite the admiration of all visitors. Call! It will pay as well as please you to see.

LACROSSE.—A meeting of the Lacrosse Club is called for Friday evening at the Drug store for the election of officers and arranging matches for the season.

LECTURE.—Mr. John R. Clark, the renowned orator, popularly known as the "Boot-Black orator," is billed to give us another treat on Tuesday next, March 29th. Those who heard him before will if possible hear him again and we are sure that they will advise everyone to hear him for themselves. The subject is "Among the Masses."

RINK.—The curling is over for the season and the rink will soon be closed. A meeting of the directors is called for Monday night at 8 o'clock at the usual place.

Inter-State Commerce Commissioners.

WASHINGTON, March 22.—The President has appointed the following Inter-State Commerce Commissioners:—Thomas M. Cooley, of Michigan, for the term of six years; W. R. Morrison, of Illinois, for the term of five years; Augustus Schoonmaker, of New York, for the term of four years; A. F. Walker, of Vermont, for the term of three years; Walter A. Bragg, of Alabama, for the term of two years.

A New Official Test.

When Cleveland took hold of the ship in Washington he appointed Bill Hyde postmaster at St. Louis. About the first act of the new official was to find out the politics of his subordinates, and this done he began sifting Republicans from Democrats without any regard for the civil service law. Among the employes who lost their heads was a good Republican who had been in the office ever since the assassination of President Lincoln. This man called on Hyde the day after his dismissal and said:

"Mr. Hyde, I received a note from you yesterday in which you say that my services are no longer required in the postoffi e."

"That's right," replied Hyde in a harsh voice.

"But I want a reason—I demand one."

"That will do you no good."

"Mr. Hyde," said the Republican, lifting his voice to a high key, "I insist that I be given a reason for my dismissal."

"Well," replied Hyde, "if you must have a reason, I'll give you one. The truth of the matter is, I don't like the color of your eyebrows."—Chicago Herald.

Difference of Taste in Novels.

Andrew Lang, to whom Rider Haggard's "She" is dedicated, prefaces a signed review in The Academy very aptly with these words: "There are stories which, like the murder applauded by Toad-in-the-Hole, you can safely 'recommend to a friend.' One would need to know the friend very well before recommending to him "She." Nothing, says George Eliot, is more destructive to friendship than a difference in taste of jokes. But a difference of taste in novels is nearly as apt to poison affection. I have acquaintances to whom I dare not mention Thackeray, others with whom 'Huckleberry Finn' is a tabooed subject, and one who does not like 'Pickwick!'"—New York Commercial Advertiser.

"Of earthly goods, the best is a good wife;
A bad, the bitterest curse of earthly life."

How many wives who to-day are almost distracted because of their many ailments, all tending to make home unhappy, would become the best of all earthly goods if they got rid of their troubles by using Dr. Pierce's "Favorite Prescription," which is an unfailing remedy for those diseases and weaknesses which afflict the female sex. Send ten cents in stamps for Dr. Pierce's complete treatise on these diseases, illustrated by numerous wood-cuts and colored plates. Address, World's Dispensary Medical Association Buffalo, N. Y.

QUARTERLY REVIEW.

DR. CURTISS' NOTES ON THE SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON.

Lesson XIII of the International Series for Sunday, March 27—Golden Text, Acts vii, 32—Review of the Past Twelve Lessons.

SUGGESTIONS FOR REVIEW.

Design of the Bible—The object of the Bible is not to satisfy our curiosity in science or history. Its end is to impart religious teaching in a way that plain people in all ages may understand. The Old Testament was first written for God's chosen people, Israel, who were to be the people of redemption. It is, therefore, not the design of the first two chapters of Genesis to afford scientific knowledge, but to teach men of every age that God created all things. God is represented as creating the world in his week, but we have no more need to suppose that it was made up of six days of twenty-four hours than to think that God is like one of ourselves.

Creation of Man—The last work which God created was man. He was the crown of the creation, the king of the earth, which God had made as his kingdom. In all the other acts of creation God simply commanded and it came into being; but he indicated the infinite superiority of man above the brutes by saying, Let us make man in our image, after our likeness. Man's superiority over the animals consists, then, in the special interest which God manifests in his creation as well as in fact that he creates him in his image. By the image and likeness of God we understand that perfect ideal form which is fitted to express a divine person and in which Jesus appeared on the Mount of Transfiguration.

The Temptation and Fall—God saw all that he had made—the earth and its king—and behold it was very good. Satan, a mighty fallen spirit, saw it, and took on as a fitting mode of representation the form of a serpent. He raised doubts in the mind of the first woman as to God's goodness and truth, and filled her with a desire for knowledge like that of God. The woman, allured by the beauty of the fruit, and desiring to enjoy the promised wisdom, fearlessly partook of the forbidden fruit, and gave to her husband and he ate. Instead of becoming like God in knowledge, she and her husband were filled with shame, until at last they were banished from Eden. In believing Satan and disbelieving God they fell into sin and misery.

The Fruit of Sin—Their sin bore fruit in the subsequent history of the world. Eve, who had known the mother's joy in the birth of a firstborn, was destined to see him a murderer. Cain and Abel, feeling the need of the Divine favor, brought their offerings to God. Cain's was rejected, while Abel's was accepted. Cain's anger burned against his brother Abel. Like a wild beast it gained possession of his heart. From that moment he was a murderer, even before the fatal blow fell. After he has slain his brother, God calls him to an account for his crime, and when he refuses to confess, tells him that his brother's blood cries from the ground. Cain is banished from God and the paternal home, and is doomed to wander a fugitive and a vagabond.

The Earth Swept by the Deluge—At last he settles down and builds a city. His descendants become famous, the men as artists and artisans, the women for their beauty and grace. At the same time there is another people, the descendants of pious Seth, who are distinguished for their worship of God. But the Sethites, charmed by the beautiful Cainite women, form marriage alliances with them. Piety dies out of the world, excepting Noah's family, and the earth becomes corrupt and full of violence; hence God determines to sweep off this wicked race by the waters of the flood. He commands Noah to prepare an ark to save himself, as well as the animals and fowls living in that region of the inhabited globe. The flood comes, the guilty race are swept from the earth, and human history begins again with the family of Noah.

Abraham Taught of God—Sin is still in the world. It is manifest in human pride. Men build them a tower that their name may not be lost, but God scatters them. Various nations are formed. The light of God's truth seems to be about extinguished; but God calls Abraham from his home in Ur of the Chaldees and tells him to go to a land that he shall tell him of. He first goes to Haran, and afterwards to Canaan. But, so far as we know, he did not derive the true religion from either of these places. In the first two the moon god was worshiped, and Canaan was the seat of gross idolatry. So far as Abram knew the true religion, he was taught of God.

Lot's Bad Choice—While other relatives came with him to Haran, only Lot attended him to Canaan. Abraham had perhaps a thousand servants all told after he had visited Egypt, at least in later times. His possessions and those of his nephew were so large that they were not able to dwell together on account of the quarrels of their herdmen. Abraham therefore gave Lot his choice. With a greediness that was disgraceful he chose the fairest territory within his range of vision. This proved, however, to be a most unfortunate choice, as all choices are likely to be that are made for the sake of gain; for he was thrown among the worst people of Canaan.

The Covenant—But God did not forsake Abram. Lot did not get the advantage after all, for God promised the land of Canaan to Abram as well as a numerous posterity, and entered into a solemn covenant with him. At the same time he showed him that the promises that he had made were not to be enjoyed until his descendants had passed through the valley of humiliation. They were to be trained in the school of affliction in Egypt before they were to receive their possession in the Promised Land. This interview of God with his servant was memorable. Abram believed on Jehovah, and he counted it to him as righteousness.

Abraham's Prayer for Sodom—The folly of Lot's choice and the generosity of Abraham were soon set forth in a strong light. While Lot was living in Sodom the place was attacked by five allied kings. At this time, had it not been for the self-sacrifice of his uncle, Lot would have lost his family and all his worldly goods; but Abraham by a timely attack rescued them from the enemy. God, however, had determined that Sodom should be destroyed. The three angels who announced the birth of Isaac to Abraham and Sarah foretold the destruction of Sodom. The patriarch prayed with the utmost urgency that it might be saved for the sake of his nephew. He thought that there were at least ten righteous persons in the place, and therefore begged that God would not destroy the righteous with the wicked.

The Judge of All the Earth Does Right—The result, however, proved that he was greatly mistaken. Two of the angels who had been the companions of the angel of Jehovah visited Sodom, only to find proof of its abominable wickedness. Not one outside of the family of Lot was righteous. Even the young men who were to have married Lot's daughters mocked at his warnings, and his wife, disobeying the divine command, became a pillar of salt. The righteous persons for whom Abraham prayed were only Lot and his two daughters, who in the light of their subsequent history were like brands plucked from the burning. Abraham's prayer was answered, and the judge of all the earth did right.

The Sacrifice of Isaac—God was faithful to his covenant. At length the son on whom every promise depended was born. We can hardly conceive what joy filled the household and the circle of friends. His name was called Isaac (meaning laughter). Never perhaps was a son more desired or more fondly loved. Abraham was to be put to the test for his own sake, for the sake of his people—the people of redemption—who were to cherish his example, and for the sake of the people of all subsequent times. God demanded then, as he does now, a complete surrender of all that the patriarch had. At the same time he clearly showed the nature of true sacrifice, and set the seal of his disapproval on human offerings, which were doubtless common at that time among the Canaanites.

Jacob and Esau—The rights of the first born son were particularly sacred in olden times; but God more than once set them aside in the family of the Patriarchs. The beloved son Isaac proved to be a weak character. He showed faith in God, but he also displayed a fondness for Esau's venison which seemed unworthy of the heir of such great promises. This son cared more for the gratification of his appetites than he did for the birthright, which opened such glorious possibilities in the future. He sold it to his brother Jacob for a mess of pottage, and finally lost the blessing of the first born by his brother's deceit. Jacob did not become the inheritor of these blessings because of his falsehood, for which he was abundantly punished, but because he had some true appreciation of the birthright. It was for this reason, when he was compelled to leave his home to escape the wrath of his brother Esau, that God made that wonderful revelation of himself to Bethel, and made himself known as the angel of Jehovah who redeemed him from all evil (Gen. xlviii, 16.

The Struggle of Jabbok.—Years of trial and discipline passed. A lonely traveler, with only a shepherd's staff, he had gone to his uncle Laban's house. About twenty years after he left, a rich sheikh, with a large family and numerous flocks and herds. He had had a religious experience of rather a superficial sort, but that experience needed to be deepened before he could become the spiritual father of his people. Saved from the wrath of Laban, he was made aware of the coming of his brother with four hundred men. That brother through all the years had not forgotten the cruel wrong done him. Jacob prayed and used all possible foresight to appease the wrath of his brother. After all his preparations were made he was left alone in the gloom of night. A man appeared and began to wrestle with him. Was it an assassin sent by his brother Esau to slay him? Before morning he could not have doubted that it was the angel of Jehovah with whom he was wrestling, and that he had power to bless him. This heavenly visitor as the morning was just dawning sought to leave him, but Jacob, who had wept in his intercession, broke out in passionate earnestness—"I will not let thee go except thou bless me." Then for the first time the angel, using his divine power, touched him. He blessed him, but he made him lame, that Jacob might not think that through his own strength he had gotten the victory. It was only through this conflict that he prevailed over men and God, and received as it were the memorial name of his spiritual consecration—Israel.

POINTS TO BE REMEMBERED.

1. The Bible is the history of redemption. Its object is not to give profane science or history.

2. Man was created in the image of God.

3. The divine image was marred and paradise was lost by the fall. That image cannot be restored or paradise regained by man's own efforts. He must be born from above, and the new Jerusalem, of which he may become a citizen, must descend from above.

4. Murder and all the horrible evils which defile the earth are the result of sin.

5. Mere civilization does not save men. Music and the arts and the charms of beauty may be the attendants of corruption and violence, the graceful drapery of the angel of light into which the god of this world seeks to transform himself.

6. There would have been no people of redemption if God had left the world to its own natural development. He first chose Noah and then Abraham.

7. Mere worldly wealth is not the best thing. Men who pursue it at the expense of every other consideration will at length find themselves as poor as Lot was when fleeing from Sodom.

8. God's covenant cannot be broken. Men fail to fulfill their engagements. God never fails to perform his promises.

9. The judge of all the earth does right. We may not be able to see it now or to make it appear to others. The time is coming when all the world will recognize His justice.

10. God demands the complete surrender of all we have. Since he gave his son for us it is but little that we should give ourselves for him.

11. Most men sell their birthright for a mess of pottage. They sell their souls for a little of this world's goods—its honors or pleasures.

12. The place of prayer is the place of victory for every believing soul.—Sunday School World.

Astonishing Success

It is the duty of every person who has used Boschee's German Syrup to let its wonderful qualities be known to their friends in curing Consumption, severe Coughs, Croup, Asthma, Pneumonia, and in fact all throat and lung diseases. No person can use it without immediate relief. Three doses will relieve any case, and we consider it the duty of all Druggists to recommend it to the poor, dying consumptive at least to try one bottle, as 70,000 dozen bottes were sold last year, and no one case where it failed was reported. Such a medicine as the German Syrup cannot be too widely known. Ask your druggist about it Sample bottles to try, sold at 10 cents. Regular size, 75 cents. Sold by all Druggists and Dealers, in the United States and Canada. d90

Advice to Mothers.

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup should always be used when children are cutting teeth. It relieves the little sufferer at once; it produces natural, quiet sleep by relieving the child from pain, and the little cherub awakes "as bright as a button." It is very pleasant to taste. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain, relieves wind, regulates the bowels, and is the best known remedy for diarrhœa, whether arising from teething or other causes. 25 cents a bottle. Be sure and ask for "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup," and take no other kind.

PERSONAL.

To all who Buy Seeds.

"As ye sow so shall ye reap" is a truism worthy of consideration by all who are seeking for success in Garden, or Farm operations. It is evident to every thoughtful mind that Choice Flowers, Fine Vegetables and Grain, cannot be produced by sowing a poor grade of Seed. With this object in view, I have been careful in selecting my Seeds for this season's operations. I make it a point to test the vitality of my Seeds before selling them to my customers, so that the disappointment of Seed not growing is greatly lessened. My stock will be found large and choice. Trusting to be favoured with an extensive patronage this season in my new establishment, Floral Drug Store, corner of George and Charlotte streets, opposite the market.

Striking Punctuality.

This month is the anniversary of Dr. Potts' first professional visit to Peterborough as a specialist. The reasonable patronage extended towards him by the residents of Peterborough deserves special mention. Dr. Potts will be at the Croft House to-day and to-morrow, Wednesday and Thursday, 23rd and 24th March, and solicits a continuation of patronage from those afflicted with chronic diseases. See adv. in another column.

An Auburn Audience.

The Hamilton Helpers held a meeting in the Auburn church on Wednesday evening. The attendence was large, the building being filled. Messrs. Hebdon and Dunnett delivered addresses, and Messrs. Stead and Dunnett sang several of their best songs. A large number took a total abstinence pledge and at the conclusion of the public meeting several were intitiated into Auburn Council of Royal Templars. This evening the Helpers will be in St. Andrew's church, and to-morrow evening in St. Paul's church, which will be be their last meeting here, as they depart on Saturday and will be succeeded by the Rev. J. Judd White and Mr. W. W. Buchanan. It is probable that a meeting of Peterborough Council of Royal Templars will be held after the public meeting on to-morrow evening.

GRASS linens, table linens, table napkins, linen handkerchiefs, etc., fresh from the loom in Belfast, Ireland, now opened out at TURNBULL'S. Grand value. See them.

A Jubilee Gathering.

The Kingston News says:—"Col. Villiers, D. A. G., has written to Ottawa asking that the military camp for this district be held here in June next, when the Queen's jubilee can be celebrated with more than usual pomp. The troops which will go into camp this year are:—3rd regiment of cavalry, Lt. Col. Boulton; Kingston field battery, Capt. Drennan; Durham field battery, Major McLean; 40th batallion, Col. Rogers, Cobourg; 46 batalhon, Col. Benson, Port Hope, and 47th, Col. Kirkpatrick. Now, in addition to the foregoing, the D. A. G. will request that the 15th of Belleville (Col. Lazier), 57th of Peterborough (Col. Rogers), and the 14th (Col. Smith), be allowed to preform their annual drill at the camp, and thus increase the facilities to properly celebrate the jubilee. There would then be 2,237 officers and men in camp exclusive of A battery and the Colledge cadets. The day mentioned for the demonstration is June 21."

A CHOICE assortment of Scotch and Canadian tweeds, worsteds and West of England pantings to choose from at TURNBULL'S. Remember there is a first-class tailor always on the premises to execute work promptly.

Runaway.

On Wednesday evening at the Canada Pacific Railway station, a few minutes after the train arrived, a team of horses horses belonging to one of the hackmen made quite a commotion and came nearly doing a good deal of harm. They were not tied and they took advantage of their freedom to dash away through a crowd of about a dozen rigs. In their way was a conveyance in which the Rev. I. Tovell, Mrs. Tovell and their little son Norman were sitting, preparatory to being driven off. One of the runaways jumped into the sleigh, but fortunately none of them were in the least injured. During the process of getting the horse out of the rig, however, Mr. P. Moffat was considerably bruised. The hack drivers should be very careful in future to see that their horses are either tied or held while at the railway stations. Being careless in this respect may sometime cost a good round bill for damages.

ANOTHER CRUSADE.

Ten Scott Act Cases Before the Court To-day.

The court room was again crowded to the doors this morning. The docket consisted of a number of Scott Act cases. The list was as follows:—

Queen vs. Brennan, Norwood.
Queen vs. McMullen, Nowood.
Queen vs. Drain, Norwood.
Queen vs. Cavanagh, Peterborough.
Queen vs. Croft, Peterborough.
Queen vs. Kenneally, Peterborough.
Queen vs. Campbell, Peterborough.
Queen vs. Giroux, Peterborough.
Queen vs. Giroux, Peterborough.
Queen vs. Garvey, Peterborough.

Messrs. Edwards and Wood were the prosecuting attorneys, and Mr. O'Meara appeared for the defence in the Giroux cases.

Inspector Darling must have been in a hurry this morning, for he appeared in court without his necktie on. "What cases have you?" was asked. "Oh," he replied blandly, "I have Mr. Drain and Mr. McMullen and Mr. Brennan. Mr. Drain is going out of the business and Mr. McMullen is also thinking of doing the same. They are both going to pay $50 fines." "Haven't they been up before?" "Yes; but we make it a first offence this time."

The cluster around the Magistrate's desk spread away, and His Worship announced that in the Queen vs. Cavanagh and Queen vs. Croft cases fines of $100 and $3.20 costs had been imposed. In the Queen vs. Garvey case $50 and $3.20 costs was imposed. Rossiter, who stood behind the railing among the crowd, smiled a grim smile of satisfaction at this announcement.

The case Queen vs. Giroux was called, and a plea of not guilty put in.

After ten witnesses had been examined, and no convicting evidence had been given, the case was adjourned.

A FULL assortment of embroideries, Torchon and Oriental lace in all the new patterns now being shown at TURNBULL'S.

A Meeting of the Association in the Parlor Rink.

The annual meeting of the members of the Peterborough Amateur Athletic Association was held in the Parlor Roller Rink on Tuesday evening. The President, Dr. Burnham, occupied the chair.

The reading of the minutes was dispensed with.

The Directors report was read as follows:—

To the members of the Peterborough Amateur Athletic Association:

At the close of this the second year of the existence of the Association, I have to congratulate you on the general result of the past season.

Mr. James Norley, our caretaker in 1885 having removed to Buffalo early last year, was succeeded by Mr. Samuel Ray, who has filled the position to the satisfaction of all concerned, and whose interest and ability in cricket have contributed in no small degree to the success of that game.

We have suffered a great loss in the death of our late respected secretary, who was so indefatigable in his efforts to further the interest of the Association, and whose familiar face will be greatly missed in all the sports.

Our constitution requiring sports to be held twice in the season, two days sports were accordingly held, one on the 24th of May and the fall sports on the 28th of September. The attendance was not as large as could be desired, but it is to be hoped that a still greater interest will be shown, and that the contest in sports will be greater by additional attractions being offered.

The present state of our finances is not satisfactory, as we have been compelled to carry over some of last season's bills unsettled. This is accounted for by work being contracted for which is of a permanent character. The principal improvements made were the erection of an additional dressing room and bath room; also a water tank now supplied by a power pump. These were greatly needed and have added much to the convenience of the members, as well as a benefit to the grounds. The purchase of an iron roller, lawn mower and hose is an expenditure that will not have to again be made.

The approaching season promises to be an active one in sporting circles. The Knights of the Paddle are organizing strongly and a division of their camp is to locate on our waters this season. It behooves us, therefore, to make our branch of summer sports as attractive as possible.

In reviewing briefly the work of the different clubs, the cricketers are to be congratulated on their success, having only once been defeated. This season promises well, and the club intend to make a tour.

The Tennis Club held a tournament for a handsome medal, presented by Mr. H. A. Hammond, which was won by Mr. Retallack.

Bicycle races were not as keenly contested as could be wished, but an improvement is looked for this year. Baseball was in about the same condition. The football season, though short, was well improved, and great spirit was shown in the matches.

And last, but not least, tobogganing was indulged in to a great extent. It is to be regretted that that the slide being so far from the centre of the town. It is feared some get the advantage of it without the Club getting the advantage of the small fee charged. It is to be hoped this will be remedied this season.

The constitution and by-laws will be a subject for discussion for the new directorate, and some amendments are considered necessary.

The Treasurer's statement is herewith submitted.

G. BURNHAM,
President.

The Treasurer's report was read, showing a small balance in hand, with a few outstanding accounts to pay.

The report of the several committees from the clubs forming the Association recommending the appointment of their representatives to the Board of Directors was presented as follows:—

CRICKET CLUB—R. B. Rogers and G. W. Hatton.

BICYCLE CLUB—Geo. Schofield and F. E. Bell.

BASEBALL CLUB—Dr. Brennan and W. Sailsbury.

LAWN TENNIS CLUB—J. Morris.

FOOT BALL CLUB—A. St. A. Smith.

SNOW SHOE CLUB—Dr. Burnham.

Mr. J. R. Cobb was appointed auditor to audit the accounts.

Dr. Halliday was elected Hon. President of the Association.

The Lady Patronesses named were: Mrs. Dr. Burnham, Mrs. R. Hamilton (Auburn), and Mrs. Weller.

The Patrons named were: Hon. R. Hamilton, Jas. Stevenson, M. P., R. A. Morrow, Geo. A. Cox and Dr. Boucher.

A discussion took place on points in the constitution, to be resumed at the next meeting.

A vote of thanks was tendered to Mr. Stevenson for the use of the rink in which to hold the meeting.

The officers of the Association will be elected at the first meeting of the Directors.

POLITICS IN THE PULPIT.

The Views of a Former Peterborough Pastor Ironically Expressed.

The Toronto Ministerial Association the other day discussed the question of "How far is it right to introduce in the Christian pulpit questions upon which the congregation may be divided," and towards the close of the debate the Rev. D. J. Macdonnell is reported to have spoken as follows:—

He warned the meeting against the tendency to independence in speaking and acting which was manifesting itself among them. (Laughter.) The introduction of politics into the pulpit was dangerous. On certain conditions it was, no doubt, safe and right. For example:—1. If a whole congregation were of the same stripe, and the minister also of the same stripe, as was the case with some congregations in Nova Scotia, and even in Ontario, it might be right for the minister to say what and as much as he pleased. (Laughter.) 2. If the minister was know to have absolutely no political opinions or sympathies—i. e., if he was a complete nonentity. 3. If he could deal with broad general principles in such a way that there could be no possibility of a suspicion that they were to be applied to any theme later than Isaiah or the Pharisees. (Laughter.) Or, 4. If he speaks at all, that it be after an election, when he can do no harm. True, they might tell that Isaiah and Jeremiah dealt with political questions; but then they had not party government, "of the people, for the people and by the people." (Laughter and cheers.) Moreover, people then had not got rid of the notion that the church had something to do with politics. Now it was different. They knew if they spoke of questions affecting the life of the match they ran the risk of being told they were out of there proper sphere; that they should devote themselves to prayer meetings and synodical committees on vestments and hymnooks, to discussions of supralapsarianism or Bourignonism, the Athanasian creed, or the great and vital question of the use of instruments of human invention in the worship of God. (Laughter.) They understood about those things, but there was high authority for stating the they were very unsafe guides on public matters. No doubt ministers were among the most intelligent readers of the news of the day, and among the most independent thinkers and actors regarding public matters; but still that beautiful old mediæval idea of religious persons and religious things clung to some of their people, and religion in their estimation belonged to the Church and Sunday school and to the Lord's table—perhaps a little of it to family life. But when it came to politics they must be careful how they were to apply religion. (Loud applause.)

I WILL not be undersold by anyone. See if I will! R. J. KIDD.

THE QUEEN'S TOUR.

Her Majesty's Programme on the Continent.

LONDON, March 23.—The royal yacht is ordered to be ready for service by the end of this week, as the Queen having changed the arrangements of the trip to the continent, is to leave Windsor on Wednesay, March 29, a week earlier than the day originally fixed for her departure. Her Majesty will leave the Castle at 9.30 in the morning for Portsmouth harbor, where she is to embark for Cherbourg on board the Victoria and Albert, which will be escorted across the channel by the three other royal yachts. Cherbourg harbour is to be reached before dusk, and the Queen will dine and sleep on board the yacht, starting at 10 on Wednesday morning, March 30, direct for Cannes. The special train on which Her Majesty travels will pass around Paris by the Cinture railway. The Queen is to reach Cannes on the afternoon of March 31, and will remain there until the evening of Wednesday, April 6, when she proceeds to Aix-les-Bains, travelling by way of Marseilles and Lyons. The Queen will be accompanied by the Princess Beatrice and Prince Henry of Battenberg, and is to be attended only by a very small suite. Her Majesty has abandoned her intended visit to Darmstadt and she will return home from Aix-les-Bains through Paris, where the royal party will probably stop at the Embassy for a couple of days. The Queen is to stay at Aix-les-Bains for about eighteen days, and she will occupy the Villa Mottet, where she resided during her last visit two years ago. The court returns to Windsor not later than April 29.

A Georgian Cyclone Pit.

Perhaps the largest, best arranged, best furnished and most costly cyclone pit in the country is owned by Ed. Brown, of Eatonton. It is situated near the back door of his residence, and is large enough to accommodate his entire family. The walls are of brick, laid in cement, the floor is carpeted, has a fireplace and a chimney, and the room is handsomely furnished. The family could spend the night there with as much comfort as in the dwelling. In preparing it Mr. Brown had an eye to its permanency and spared no expense in making it pleasant and comfortable. To guard against the contingency of the house blowing over on it and imprisoning the inmates, a large sewer pipe leads off from the pit in an opposite direction a distant of 100 yards, through which the family could escape. This unique underground dwelling is throughly protected against water rising from below or running in from above. The cost was $500.—Savannah Times.

ANOTHER HOLOCAUST.

Twelve Miners Burned to Death in a Boarding House.

BESSEMER, Mich., March 23.—The boarding house of Bond & Clancy, at the Colby mine, was burned about 4 o'clock this morning, and twelve persons perished in the flames. The building was a two-story frame structure, and burned like tinder, leaving no time for an alarm after the fire was discovered. Twenty one boarders occupied rooms in the second story, only nine of whom escaped by jumping from the windows. Several are seriously injured but none fatally.

The names of the victims, who were all labourers at the Colby mine, are as follows: John Sutton, Max Privedell, Henry Saam, J. Brass, John Raal, James Ryan, John Lyons, Simon Rizzo, T. Brassa, William Williams, John Garvey and one unknown. The bodies are so completely charred as to prevent identification. There is no clue to the origin of the fire. The victims were all single men.

Bessemer is one of the mining towns brought into existence by the development of the Gogebic mining region. It has over one thousand population, besides a large floating element, and is one of the most prominent of the new points on the Lake Shore and Western Railroad. It is within 15 miles of the western end of the Upper Peninsula, in Ontonagon County, and about 50 miles from Ontonagon, in a south-westerly direction.

TURNBULL'S dress goods counter and shelves are now filled with new good in every conceiveable shade, with trimmings to match. His prices are the lowest and styless the best. Look through and be convinced.

THE RECOUNT.

To the Editor of the Review.

SIR,—In your issue of the 22nd inst. I notice a remark about a certain ballot marked Geo. Webber in the division where I was scrutineer for Mr. Stevenson. Now, sir, in all fairness to Mr. Henderson, the Returning Officer, I must say I think he acted very fairly with all parties, I don't think that he ever intended to spoil any one's ballot.

THE VANCOUVER ELECTION.

The Old Conservative Member Returned by a Large Majority.

NEW WESTMINSTER, B. C., March 23.—The election in the Vancouver district to-day resulted in the re-election of S. W. Gordon, Conservative, by 170 majority.

At the first election in 1871, R. Wallace Conservative, was elected by 94 majority. In 1872, Sir F. Hicks, Conservative, was elected by acclamation. In 1874, A. Bunster, Conservative, was elected by 121 majority, and in 1878, by 69 majority. In 1882, S. W. Gordon, Conservative, was elected by 155 majority.

THE LATEST FIRE HORROR.

Twelve Bodies Taken From the Rescue or Boarding House.

MARQUETTE, Mich., March 24.—The fire at Bond & Clancy's boarding-house yesterday morning was even more disastrous than was at first thought. When the flames were first discovered they were bursting through the windows, and in a few minutes the building was completely demolished. With one accord those who awoke rushed to the windows, and jumped to the ground in their nightclothes. Twelve were burned to death, and their charred and blackened trunks, are lost to all resemblance to human form. Five men are so badly burned that their recovery is deemed impossible. Twenty-five others are more or less burned. One man, whose body was unidentified, was seen through the smoke and flames vainly endeavouring to jump until too late. Both went down into the seething flames, locked in each other's arms. Some of the scenes were pitiful in the extreme. It all occurred so quickly there were but few spectators to the worst part save the inmates first aroused. Some poor fellows jumped to the ground and rendered helpless by the fall, begged others to drag them away from the flames. Owing to the large number of new arrivals it is hardly possible to give an accurate list of the dead. There are some missing whose absence is unaccounted for.

The following are known to be dead:—James Ryan, John Garvey, William Williams, Henry Saam, Max Brivedell, Simon Brizzo, two Italians, father and son, names unknown, and four men who came on Tuesday night.

Those badly burned and who may die are: August Pierce, Celestie Pierce, B. Brizzo, James Lynch and John Floyd.

The origin of the fire is shrowded in mystery. The coroner's jury returned a verdict of accidental death exonerating the company from blame.

NORWOOD.

BEAT IT, WHO CAN?—Mr. Geo. Elliott, one of Asphodel's most successful farmers and stock raisers, has a percheron colt, not yet two years old, which weighs 1,060 pounds.

TEMPERANCE LECTURE.—Mr. W. W. Buchanan, of Hamilton, Dominion Councillor of the Royal Templars of Temperance, delivered a powerful address to a large audience in the Methodist Church here, on Wednesday evening of last week.

A NEW COUNCILLOR WANTED.—On account of the resignation of Councillor Harper, a meeting of the electors of the village will be held in the Town Hall on Thursday next, 31st inst., at 12 o'clock, for the purpose of nominating a candidate to fill the vacancy. If more than the necessary number are nominated and a poll demanded, a poll will be opened on Thureday, April 7th.—Register.

CAMPBELLFORD.

LYNX.—The lynx that was seen in Mr. Ivey's woods a few weeks ago, returned last week, and took up its quarters in the same neighborhood. Two men who were desirous of getting a shot at it followed it with dogs for two hours, but the nimble and wary creature kept out of their reach.

THE ELECTRIC LIGHT.—The next step our progressing village is about to make is the introduction of the electric light. It has found its way down at the paper mills, and now our streets are to be illuminated by the same power, and probably some of our merchants will provide incandescent lamps for their stores. Negotiations with the electricians have been in progress for a short time past, and we believe everything is favorable for its adoption.—Herald.

ONTARIO LEGISLATURE

THE FIRST SESSION OF THE SIXTH PROVINCIAL PARLIAMENT.

Vacant Offices—Exemption of Salaries of Government Officials—Returns Ordered—Married Women Franchise—Income Tax.

WEDNESDAY, March 23.—A couple of bills were introduced.

VACANT REGISTRARSHIPS.

Mr. MONK made enquiries regarding the appointment of a Registrar for Carleton.

Mr. MOWAT said that Patrick J. Coffey was appointed Registrar of Carleton, and Mr. G. W. Badgerow County Attorney of York. Commissions were prepared accordingly on December 22nd, but had not been forwarded in the ordinary way. The Government thought these appointments should be carried out, and new commissions would be forwarded. Nothing had been done in regard to the shrievalties of Lincoln and Wellington, except to receive applications, and both would be filled after the close of the session. The Lennox Registrarship had been dealt with in the same way as Carleton, and a new commission would be prepared in favor of Mr. Stephen Gibson. He had forgotten this when answering a former enquiry.

BIBLE IN THE SCHOOLS.

Mr. Ross, in reply to Mr. Clarke (Wellington), said that the Government desired to have the Bible read in the schools systematically. They believed it would be an advantage if the readings were from the book of selections, but prejudice had been created against it, and where trustees had decided that the Bible should be read the Government had no desire to interfere. If modifications in the regulations were necessary to carry out this view they would be made.

VACANT OFFICES.

Mr. MEREDITH moved for a return regarding vacancies in offices since January, 1884. He said offices had remained vacant for months, some over a year, and the Government had made use of vacant offices by dangling them before the eyes of gentlemen who hoped to get them. In regard to all the public offices becoming vacant during the last ten months, the Government had systematically adopted the course of leaving them vacant for from twelve to eighteen months. This policy could not be in the public interests. The statement that the deputies had satisfactorily discharged the duties would lead to the reflection that there was no necessity for appointing these officers at high salaries.

Mr. MOWAT tried to hide behind Ottawa. He also said that these offices were ministerial ones and the duties might properly be preformed by deputies. There was difficulty in filling the offices, for there were rival applicants, many of whom deserved well of the Government.

Mr. CREIGHTON taunted Mr. Mowat with continually pleading the action of the Dominion Government and yet continually condemning that Government. If it were so that deputies efficiently performed the duties it would be better to give them a slight increase of salary and save money which, on the Government's showing, was wasted.

The motion passed.

EXEMPTIONS.

Mr. CREIGHTON moved that in the opinion of the House it was unjust that salaries of Dominion officials should be exempt and that steps should be taken by the Ontario Government to obtain a decision as to the right to tax them from the Privy Council.

Mr. MOWAT said that such an appeal would not be successful. The Dominion Parliament should pass an act declaring, so far as it was in their power to declare, that these salaries were not given on the assumption that they should be exempt. He moved an amendment regretting that the Dominion had not passed such legislation.

Mr. H. E. CLARKE said that Mr. Mowat was shirking his responsibility.

Mr. MEREDITH said that Mr. Mowat was ready to go to the Privy Council when political capital was to be made, but as this case only effected the municipalities he was not ready to appeal. The question was an important one and ought to be settled by the highest court.

Mr. DRURY though the motion was a trap.

Mr. CREIGHTON condemned Mr. Mowat's attempt to shift the responsibility on the Dominion. At Ottawa the case would be surrounded with difficulties, partly because of the difference of practice in the several provinces.

Mr. HARDY defended the Government.

Mr. FRENCH said that Mr. Mowat's amendment was designed to make political capital, while Mr. Creighton's motion was made with a legitimate desire to do good.

Mr. STRATTON said that, as Mr. Mowat had been so often sustained by the Privy Council, and as he had no doubt given this matter careful attention, they might rely on his judgment. It would not interfere much with the Dominion Government to ask them to pass an Act such as was suggested by Mr. Mowat.

The amendment was carried by a vote of 52 to 32.

TOLLS ON RIVERS.

Mr. LEES moved for a return giving particulars regarding tolls fixed under the statute for protecting the public interest in rivers and streams.

Mr. PARDEE said that there were no rivers on which tolls had been fixed since the statute was passed.

The motion was withdrawn.

CONVICTIONS.

Mr. CLARKE (Wellington) moved for a return regarding convictions in counties and the number of Justices of the Peace.

SEED GRAIN.

Mr. ARMSTRONG moved for a return regarding amounts due and amounts paid the Government by Muskoka settlers for seed grain.

PETERBOROUGH BOUNDARY.

A number of Private bills were passed in Committee, including one by Mr Stratton to declare and define the correct boundary between the township of Smith and the Town of Peterborough.

TOLL ROADS.

The question of toll roads was referred to a special committee.

WOMAN SUFFRAGE.

Mr. WATERS moved the second reading of the bill to enable married women to vote for members of Municipal Councils.

Mr. FRASER opposed the bill. He believed many wanted to give the franchise to women simply for the purpose of carrying the Scott Act and prohibition. He moved the six months hoist.

After a debate Mr. Fraser's amendment was carried by a vote of 55 to 19, Messrs. Blezard and Stratton voting for the hoist.

INCOME ASSESSMENT.

Mr. INGRAM moved the second reading of the bill to raise the expenditure on income to $800.

After debate the bill was read a second time and the House adjourned at 10.35 p.m.

A GYPSY'S PROPHECY.

Curious Prediction Made by the Famous Preciosa.

LONDON, March 24.—A number of anecdotes are related concerning Emperor William's long life and the possible number of years still left to him. One, illustrating popular superstition, is worth repeating. It is to the effect that at the time of the Furstenstag at Frankfort, in 1863, King Willam one day, walking in the neighborhood of Baden-Baden, accompanied by Herr von Bismarck and some ladies and gentlemen, passed a gypsy hut. One of the ladies exclaimed:—"That is where the famous gypsy girl Preciosa tells fortunes." The party, who were all in walking dress, entered the hut and had their fortunes told in succession, the king, whose identity was concealed, coming last. Preciosa held his hand a long while in silence and then said:—"I see a great crown, great victories and great age. You will live ninety-six years, but your last days will bring many troubles and much sorrow." The King forgot all about the prophecy till in 1884, when, at a ball at the Russian Embassy in Berlin, the Hungarian Countess Ernody, whose mother was a Tzigane, was presented to him. During a long conversation it was incidentally mentioned that the Countess possessed the gift of chiromancy. The Emperor held out his hand and the Countess, after examining the lines, gravely said: "Your Majesty is destined to live ninety-six years." The Emperor, it is added, was much struck by the coincidence.

According to the Vienna Tagblatt, physicians of the Emperor have declared that he has no organic failing, and that there is nothing to prevent him from attaining the age of one hundred, provided he takes care of himself. But this is just what he does not do. According to authentic statistics there are at present in the Kingdom of Prussia, no less than five thousand persons over ninety years of age, six hundred of them are ten years older than the Emperor. In all parts of Prussia there are plenty of people between ninety and ninety-five. The oldest are to be found in the Provinces of Posen, Silesia, and East and West Prussia.

RAILWAY DISASTERS.

A Freight Train Drops Through a Bridge—Nine Men Killed.

RICHMOND, Va., March 24.—This morning a freight train went through the bridge over the Big Otter River, nine miles from Liberty, on the Norfolk and Western Railway. The bridge was in process of repair, and eight or nine workmen were killed and several others wounded. None of them were train hands as far as known. The engine and several cars crossed the bridge safely before the structure gave way.

TWO TRAINS WRECKED.

NORTH-EAST, Md., March 24.—A passenger train on the Baltimore and Philadelphia Railway collided with a through freight at Leslie at 3 o'clock this morning. Both trains were badly wrecked and the locomotives entirely telescoped. On the passenger train were two carloads of Immigrants, but no one outside of the crews of the locomotives were injured. Geo. Cregnan, fireman of the eastbound train, was fatally injured, and Engineer Geo. Robinett and Fireman Geo. Armstrong were severely injured. The express matter was strewn and scattered in every direction. The accident is attributed to the engineer of the eastbound train being late and trying to reach the usual place of crossing.

RUSSIAN TREACHERY.

Endeavoring to Induce Afghanistan's Troops to Mutiny.

NEW YORK, March 24.—The Star's London special says: A Simla despatch states that native emissaries of Russia has been discovered among the Ameer's troops at Cabul. They fled before their capture could be effected. Several officers and soldiers have appeared before the Ameer and testified to an attempt to induce them to join in a mutiny of the Ameer's troops on the resumption of military operations in the Chalzai country. The version of the Ameer's letter to the Simla disposes of the statement in the official Russian press that a holy war is about to be preached in Afghanistan, which was intended to be directed against the British predominance in Asia. The letter explicitly calls on the nation to rise in resistence to Russia aggression. Official advices to Downing street from the Indian Government state that the relations of the Government with the Ameer continue on the former friendly footing. A new British camp is being formed on the Afghan frontier to facilitate communications with the Ameer in the event of a Russian invasion, now believrd at Cabul to be imminent.

Under the Hammer.

NEW YORK, March 24.—The sale of the collection of works of art, owned by the late A. T. Stewart, commenced last night. A number of pictures were sold at a sacrifice but on the whole the prices realized were fair. "Cattle," by Constantine Troyon, of Paris, went to D. C. Lyle for $7,150; "The Chariot Race," by Jean Leon Gerome, of Paris, which cost $30,000, was knocked down to Henry K. Eaton for $7,100; "Charity," by Meissonier, which cost $20,000, was bought by Henry Hilton for $10,500; "Niagara Falls from the American side," by Church, was bought by banker J. S. Kennedy for $7,050. The total sales are regale $110,000. Mr. Kennedy will send "Niagara Falls from the American side," as a present to Edinburgh Museum.

PAYING THE PENALTY.

BERLIN, March 24.—A bill has been prepared for the Reichstag to limit the power of the Alsatian Diet and to increase the power of the Imperial Government over the Province. The post of Alsatian Secretary of State will be abolished, and the authority of the Stadthalter, the Imperial officer, will be much increased. The education laws will be altered, and teaching in French will be gradually abolished.

VISIT FROM ANOTHER ROYALTY.

COPENHAGEN, March 24.—The King of Denmark will attend Queen Victoria's Jubilee celebration in London.

NO INTERFERENCE.

VIENNA, March 24.—A letter from Berlin says it is imperative, in the interests of peace, that France should be informed in time that any interference with German measures in Alsace-Lorraine will meet with a strong protest from Germany.

THE QUEEN AT BIRMINGHAM.

LONDON, March 23.—The Queen visited Birmingham to-day and laid the foundation stone of the Assize court building. She was given an enthusiastic reception.

THE COMMUNE.

PARIS, March 24.—In the French Chamber of Deputies to-day B. Boyer blamed the Government for dissolving the Marseilles municipal council on account of its manifestations in favor of the Commune. He said the Government's objections applied to other municipal councils, especially to that of Paris. Premier Goblet replied that the glorification of the Commune deeply wounded the national sentiment, and that all other Councils that made similar manifestation would be treated as the Marseilles council had been.

OPPOSED TO HOME RULE.

LONDON, March 24.—In response to a circular asking their views on the subject, the Irish Wesleyan ministers, with six exceptions, have replied that they are opposed to Home Rule.

ATTACK ON MR. BALFOUR.

DUBLIN, March 24.—United Ireland (Mr. Parnell's organ) publishes a bitter attack on Mr. Balfour, Chief Secretary for Ireland. It calls him "The Bloody Balfour, with tiger's heart wrapped up in a woman's hood," and says:—"He has entered lightly into a struggle with the Catholic Church. In such struggles the proudest despots have been humbled into the dust. Prince Bismarck, swaying the destinies of Europe, in his whole career but once learned the bitterness of defeat, and that was when he laid his hand on the Church, which resents sacrilegious handling of the sacred privileges of the priesthood."

NEW TITLE FOR THE QUEEN.

LONDON, March 24.—Mr. Howard Vincent, M. P. for Centre Sheffield, intends proposing that in consequence of the Jubilee an addition should be made to the title of the Queen, in compliment to the colonies. He suggests that her Majesty shall be entitled Queen of Great Britain, Ireland Canada, Australia, South Africa and all the British Colonies, and Empress of India. It is probable the proposal will receive the attention of the Cabinet on Saturday.

MORE EVICTIONS.

DUBLIN, March 24.—A number of tenants on the Shirley estate at Carrick-MacRoss were evicted yesterday. The evictions were attended with stirring scenes. The police, 150 in number, were met by a crowd of peasants with bands of music and headed by priests. Little opposition was met with until the police arrived at the cottages. These they found barricaded, and while they were removing the obstructions boiling water was poured upon them from above. In several pitiful instances old people and children were dragged through the windows.

FATAL COLLIERY ACCIDENT.

SYDNEY, N.S.W., March 24.—Eighty-five men were entombed by an explosion in Bell's colliery yesterday. The accident occurred in a tunnel, a mile and a half from the mouth of the pit. Seven bodies have been recovered. The tunnel is blocked by the debris caused by the explosion.

FOUNDERED.

LONDON, March 24.—The British bark Carnarvonshire, from Goole for Santos, has foundered off the Lizard. The crew was rescued by the British ship Chas. Whitney, which left London, March 18th, for New York, and landed at Falmouth.

A FINE CHURCH DAMAGED.

BERLIN, March 24.—The Church of St. Mary Magdalen, which was damaged by fire at Breslau yesterday, was only second to the cathedral. It was built in the 16th century, and contains priceless pictures, carvings and windows which, were but little damaged. The great bell fell and broke in two. Many romantic traditions were attached to it, and its destruction causes much regret. The disaster was caused by fireworks, which had been set of in honor of the Emperor William's anniversary.

INTRIGUES.

CONSTANTINOPLE, March 24.—The Porte has been officially notified that Russian agitators in Bulgaria have been ordered to abstain from further intrigues against the Regency.

MR. GLADSTONE'S SPEECH.

LONDON, March 24.—Mr. Gladstone's denunciation of the use of cloture to curtail the debates on the urgency motion and Coercion bill, forced the Government to reconsider the subject. The ministry decided to permit a prolongation of the discussion, but will insist that the House forego its Easter vacation unless the Coercion bill be passed before the holidays. A section of the Gladstonian party is discontented with Mr. Gladstone's half-veiled approval of the Plan of Campaign. The English Home Rulers and Parnellites are delighted with the speech.

WHOLESALE EVICTIONS.

DUBLIN, March 24.—Evictions on the Marquis of Landsdowne's estate in Queen's County, Ireland, are causing great excitement. The Marquis has refused to make reductions in his rents, and his agent is forcing evictions by wholesale.

RUSSIA AND FRANCE.

PARIS, March 24.—It is semi-officially denied in Paris that Russia has made overturns for an alliance with France.

THE LAW OF LIBEL.

Mr. Balfour, who is himself a journalist and newspaper proprietor, is proposing to amend the law of libel.

One of the proposed amendments is manifestly just, viz., that the plaintiff should be obliged to give security for costs or to proceed in forma pauperis. It sometimes happens that men of no character take proceedings for pretended libel against a newspaper for the purpose of levying blackmail, and though they have no case leave the defendants to pay their costs. If a man with money had a grievance it would not hurt him to give security for costs, and in the case of a man without money the assent of the judge could be obtained to proceed in forma pauperis if there was a prima facie case, but not without. This would check the blackmailers.

We cannot, however, agree with Mr. Balfour as to another amendment he proposes, that malice should not be assumed in case of a libel. If one man slanders another without taking any trouble to ascertain if the charge is true, even should he be only repeating what he has heard or read, he acts with malice in the eye of the law, which certainly takes the just view of such conduct. We cannot see that a journalist or publisher should have any more license than other people to spread false reports to the injury of others, whether he invents the falsehood or adopts it without any enquiry into the facts. If any difference is made he should be held to a stricter account, because of his greater power to inflict injury. Should he be able to show that he acted in good faith and after taking reasonable precautions, he might then fairly ask to be absolved from the imputation of malice, but not otherwise.

We observe that some of the journals that are most eager to advocate this extension of their license are flagrant offenders in repeating false charges against those they wish to injure. To give them greater license is not advisable.

Mr. Butterworth, who is a member of the United States Congress, calmly suggests that the extension for a short term by Canada of the fishery privileges granted by the Treaty of Washington would facilitate the settlement of the fishery dispute. We acted in a neighbourly manner by doing this last season; we would be acting like fools if we did it again this year. We extended the privileges on the faith of the President's promise that he would ask Congress to take steps for a joint commission. Congress would not respect the President's undertaking, and a Congressman must have considerable effrontery to ask us to trust in the good faith of himself and his followers.

An Ottawa despatch in the Toronto World, in reference to the rumor that Col. Ouimet, M.P., will be the next Speaker, says that Col. Ouimet's regiment, the 65th of Montreal, "did garrison duty in the Northwest during the late rebellion." If pushing to the front, tramping hundreds of miles, attacking the enemy in his stronghold in the wilderness, and facing their fire, is "garrison duty," then that is what the 65th did, several of their number being shot at Frenchman's Butte. Perhaps the writer had the gallant Amyot in his mind, who believed his regiment could be relied on at all times to "guard the provisions."

The Globe has had to pay damages and costs and to publish an apology for a libel on Mr. W. B. Northrup of Belleville and Mr. D. R. Murphy of Trenton. Mr. Northrup as as lawyer received a check from the Dominion Government to hand over to Mr. Murphy as vendor of a site for public buildings, which was selected by the village and recommended by the Government Inspector. The Globe repeated the falsehood that the money had been sent to these gentlemen to use for election purposes. Here is further evidence that the law of libel should not be relaxed in favour of such slanderers.

The Globe says there "seems to be little use in spending thousands of dollars every year to bring out immigrants." When the Conservatives in the Ontario Legislature asked that the appropriation for that purpose be discontinued, the Reform members opposed it and the Reform majority carried the appropriation against the votes of the Conservatives.

Mr. Barron, M.P., suggested that Upper Canada College be removed to Haliburton. Why not confederate it with Coboconk University? Jimuel Briggs should be heard from on this question.

The London Advertiser suggests the lynching of returning officers who provoke electors by returning candidates whom the Reformers do not wish to be returned.

A "Globe" Libel.

Belleville, March 23.—The libel cases brought against the Toronto Globe by Messrs. W. B. Northrup, of this city, and D. R. Murphy, of Trenton, have been settled by the defendants agreeing to pay $10 damages and costs in each case and publish an apology. The cause of action arose during the late election contest, it being charged that the sum of $4,000, which was issued by the Government to Murphy through Northrup, was a corruption fund to be used in the election. The plaintiffs stated in evidence in their preliminary examination that the money was paid to Murphy for land in Trenton, which he had sold to the Government as the site for a public building and that Northrup was the solicitor who had acted for the Government in the matter.

NEWS OF THE DISTRICT.

KEENE.

From Our Own Correspondent.

Township Council.—The Otonabee Township Council met at Keene on March 21st, all the members being present. Mr. Noble Stewart was allowed to compute his statute labor for two years—work to be done on road from 17th con. to his place. The following accounts were ordered to be paid:—

M. Crowley, road work	$15 00
Protestant home	13 00
John Lancaster, gravel	4 80
John Cameron, damage	2 00
Robt. W. Eason, road work	1 50
Richard Hope, cedars	3 53

Mr. Crowley was allowed road allowance on north half of 11 and 12 con. in lieu of land taken for road. Mr. Jas. Hayes was allowed to use road allowance between 11 and 12 con., opposite north half of lot 22. Mrs. Weeks was allowed $2 per week for the keep of Miss Cook. Messrs. Robt Jackson, D. B. Crowley, R. A. Doyell and George Stewart were appointed Commissioners for expending the sum of $500 on the road between 13 and 14 con., opposite lots 17 to 23. Wm. Graven's offer of $100 for land on lot 27, con. 9, for a new road was accepted on condition that Jas. Girven and D. Knox will make suitable terms.

DOURO.

Council Meeting.—The council met pursuant to adjournment. All the members present; the Reeve in the chair. Minutes of previous meeting read and confirmed. By-laws passed—By-law No. 460, defining the metes and bounds of the several school sections; also by-law No. 461, appointing pound-keepers, fence-viewers and overseers of highways, received the usual number of readings and were finally passed. Orders granted—William Metcalfe, four cords of wood for John Casey (charity), $10.00; J. W. Moore, damage to sleigh on Moher's hill, owing to unprotected highway, $4.00; P. M. Leahy, levelling pitch holes on Dummer road, 50c.; Clerk, as part of salary for current year, $25.00. Moved by Mr. Foley, seconded by Mr. McCliggott.—That the arrears of taxes, amounting to $6.18, against the n. e. ¼ of lot 26, in con. 1, be remitted, as it appears said lot is not patented. Moved by Mr. Garbutt, seconded by Mr. McCliggott.—That Charles McCaull be appointed a commissioner to have all obstructions removed off the road allowance between cons. 11 and 12, from lot 3 to lot 5. Moved by Mr. Garbutt, seconded by Mr. Foley,—That the Clerk do get the abstract statement of receipts and expenditure advertised in the Weekly Review. On motion of Mr. McCliggott, seconded by Mr. Garbutt, Michael Mahoney was authorized to procure timber to be used in building culvert on allowance for road between con. 6 and 7, opposite lot 5. Mr. McCliggott was directed to have the ice cut and removed from the water course under the bridge on the Dummer road in front of lot 6, con. 7. On motion the Council adjourned till the 28th day of May next, then to meet as a Court of Revision on the assessment rolls of the municipality for the current year. NEWS NOTES.

The Manitoba Legislature has been called to meet on April 14th.

The April number of Macmillan's Magazine will contain Lord Tennyson's Jubilee ode to the Queen.

Mr. Reid, Conservative, is elected for Cariboo district, B. C., by a majority of thirty-five, with one polling division to hear from.

Should the Salisbury Government be defeated at any point of their development of their Irish policy, they will not resign, but will appeal to the country.

A call for the redemption of $10,000,000 of the three per cent. loan of 1882, to mature on May 1st, was issued by the United States Treasury yesterday.

Medals and diplomas have been granted by the Colonial Exhibition Commissioners to a number of Canadians who assisted in organizing the Canadian exhibit by loaning works of art.

Several Prime Ministers of colonies attended the Colonial Conference in London on Wednesday. They were afterwards present in the lobby of the House of Commons, and were introduced to leading statesmen of both sides.

Application has been made to the Quebec Legislature for an Act of incorporation for a company to construct a railway around the Island of Montreal, and an elevated railway from the centre of the city of Montreal to the summit of Mount Royal.

About one hundred men will be required to fill vacancies in the Northwest Mounted Police caused by the retirement of time-expired men. Recruiting will be commenced almost immediately, and a sergeant will commence operations in Toronto in about ten days.

SHE WILL SLEEP TO-NIGHT.

Ada Nurse, daughter of Mr. John Nurse, Ennismore, having died in January, friend sends from Winnipeg the following appropriate verses, which we are requested to publish:—

Smooth the braids of her silken hair
On her queenly brow with tender care;
Gather the robe in a final fold
Around the form that will not grow old;
Lay on her bosom pure as snow,
The fairest, sweetest flowers that blow.
Kiss her and leave her, your heart's delight;
In dreamless peace she will sleep to-night.

A shadowy gleam of life-light lies
Around the lids of her slumberous eyes,
And her lips are closed as in fond delay,
Of the loving words she had to say;
But her gentle heart forgot to beat,
And from dainty head to dainty feet
She is strangely quiet, cold and white,
The fever is gone; she will sleep to-night.

Put by her work and her empty chair;
Fold up the garments she used to wear;
Let down the curtains and close the door,
She will need the garnish light no more;
For the task assigned her under the sun
Is finished now, and the guerdon won.
Tenderly kiss her, put out the light,
And leave her alone—Ada'll sleep to-night.

O blessed sleep, that will not break
For tears nor prayers nor love's sweet sake!
O perfect rest that knows no pain,
No throb, no thrill of heart or brain!
O life sublime beyond all speech,
That only the pure through dying reach!
God understands, and his ways are right;
Bid his beloved a long good-night.

Weep for the days that will come no more,
For the sunbeam flown from heart and door,
For a missing step, for the nameless grace
Of tender voice and a loving face;
But not for the soul whose goal is won,
Whose infinite joy has just begun;
Not for the spirit anrobed in light,
And crowned where the angels are to-night.

SHIRLEY CARSTONE

By ELIZA ARCHARD.

Copyrighted by American Press Association.

Hastily mounting half a dozen stalwart men, pursued the girl as rapidly as they might on horseback. A wagon was hastily got in readiness and sent after.

Never again had Shirley a ride like that. She was a strong, hopeful girl, and always looked at the bright side. But now she was overwhelmed with an awful presentiment of something, she knew not what. From the first moment she expected the worst.

Four miles out from Linwood the State Line pike passed through a wide, lonely valley, wooded at the sides and fringed with a dense, damp undergrowth of bushes. It was the middle of June. The sky was overcast with blackness so that scarcely a star shone. Yet the valley was lit by ten million lamps. An innumerable swarm of fireflies danced above the undergrowth. The damp air was one glow of intermitting, phosphorescent light. Never before, or afterward, did Shirley see fireflies in such a gleam of splendor. In after years she never looked at one of these light bringing creatures that it did not recall that night.

Into the heart of this valley, into the blackness set off by millions of infinitesimal, flickering stars; into the loneliness and silence, Shirley and her dowd young brother rode. They saw two motionless, formless objects lying dark against the dim, white turnpike. A nameless terror clutched their young hearts with an icy hand. Tom gave a cry which was echoed back from the hillsides.

They dismounted. The friendly riders that galloped up a little later found Shirley sitting in the middle of the lonely road with something in her lap, unknowingly swaying back and forth, and moaning:

"O my father! My father!"

Little Tom stood close beside her, holding the horses, and weeping bitterly. It was a sight to weaken the stoutest hearts.

And still the myriad fireflies danced up and down, and gleamed through the blackness with their quivering, weird sparkles.

It was the thoughtfulness of little Mis' Simpkins that sent the doctor down the road. He examined the cold, senseless form.

"He is not dead," he told them. "He is still breathing! Lift him into the wagon. There! Careful! Get back and give him air, Shirley, get in, and hold your father's head on your lap. Jim Sweet, lead her horse and mine. I will go in the wagon, too."

So, through the darkness, the mournful train headed toward the stone house. Gentle and kindly, if rough hands, laid Col. Carstone in his own bed that night. His wife wept and moaned as one bereft of her senses. It was Shirley who directed the men where to place him; Shirley who took the doctor's directions and listened to his verdict; Shirley, who sat beside her father's couch and watched with sharpened eyesight for sign of returning consciousness.

The patient had suffered concussion of the brain, and was in a state of stupor. How severe the injury was could not be as yet ascertained. All night Shirley sat there. At daylight the rustic neighbors and people from the village poured into the house. The porch was full of them. They gathered in the broad hallways and peered over one another's shoulders through the door and windows. Here was an event, something out of the usual. They were making the most of it, like a Fourth of July or a suicide. There was nobody to keep them off.

As the sun began to climb the heavens, the injured man stirred faintly. The first row of the gaping crew reported the fact duly to the row behind, and so the report spread through the ranks. Struggling on the outskirts was towheaded Hughie Carter, little Mis' Simpkins' nephew. That worthy dame was unable to be present in the house of affliction at the first streak of dawn, owing to being "stuck at home" by the necessity of opening the grocery. But she hounded Sim Simpkins out of bed an hour earlier than usual, stationed him behind the window with the box of blacking and the two clothespins in it, and was off with celerity to join her neighbors at the stone house. Hughie, at the steps, saw her afar off, coming up the path. Straightway he sang out the news to her, at the top of his piping voice:

"Aunt Sal! Ee-a-y! Aunt Sally! Aunt Sal-l! He's a-comin to!"

The patient heard it. He opened his eyes, saw his faithful daughter, and then turned them slowly about the room. He looked about the room, and saw that he was there in his own bed. Then he perceived the gaping crew at the door and windows. He frowned. He turned his questioning eyes on Shirley. These be the first words he spake on returning to consciousness. Let them be duly recorded:

"Why is the house filled with this ungrammatical pack!"

"Sh, father," said Shirley, "they are the neighbors, don't you see?"

Shirley was extremely sensitive about hurting people's feelings. So was her father when he was in his right mind. But now he was only half in his right mind, consequently he was off his guard and honest. He scanned the throng once more.

"Very ignorant and uncultured persons habitually hold their mouths open," said he, slowly and solemnly. "Turn them out, Shirley."

There is not a tragedy in life but has its comic side. Even Hamlet had his merry gravedigger.

Col. Carstone recovered, to all appearances, and went about as usual. Shirley's own little private grief had lost its sharpness in the dread shadow of that other greater sorrow which had passed so awfully near them.

The girl's mind ran once more on her poem. Her father sympathized with her hopes and ambitions entirely. He was her counselor and confidant in all things. All things! Perhaps there was just one little corner of her heart that she kept veiled from him. Perhaps, too, this adored and adoring father knew more even about that little corner than Shirley thought for.

There was something peculiarly beautiful and touching in this love between father and daughter. They were much alike. They were of strong, intense nature, both, so that far more than the common tie between parent and child bound them together, to begin. But there was also superadded to this common tie an intellectual good comradeship lacking between most fathers and daughters. They were very near to each other and very much to each other.

"I mean to study and practice writing for two years, papa," said Shirley. When I am 18 I shall begin my poem. It is to be all about women. I won't have a man in it, except only just enough to hang the plot on. I'm tired of reading about men and fighting. Women have been slighted in history and poetry since the world began. 'Moderate honors are suitable to women,' says Tiberius. It shall be so no more. I will not have it so. The hero of my poem shall be a woman."

So the girl read and pondered, and dreamed the days away. The poem took shape. Her heroine should be a kingly woman, such as the world never saw before, but should see many a time hereafter, in the coming ages. She should be a woman, strong and shining, head and shoulders above all the rest, like Agamemnon, king of men. Hawthorne alone, of all the writers Shirley read, had felt the thrill of her heroine's coming presence. Hester, in the "Scarlet Letter," heard her advancing footsteps:

At some brighter period, when the world should be ripe for it, in Heaven's own time, a new truth will be revealed, in order to establish the whole relation between man and woman on a surer ground of mutual happiness. * * * The angel and apostle of the coming revelation must be a woman indeed, but lofty, pure and beautiful, and wise, moreover, not through dusky grief, but the ethereal medium of joy.

As Shirley read and thought, she was led on to look deeper into the currents of human existence. It came to her that her imagination would create a beautiful life that should be an eternal benediction to womankind. Women, the world over, would read the poem, and this heroine of hers should be an inspiration to them. The toilers, the troubled, the heart broken, the weak among women should gather strength and hope from her pages. Her poem—here Shirley's should sing a strain of lofty music that would ring around the world.

And then?

Youth is strong and fiery and elastic. Her thoughts suddenly dived down into the veiled corner of her heart. And they sang a song that to her ear was as sweet as that which should echo round the world. They sang this:

Perhaps the master will hear it too, and come back!

CHAPTER VIII.

A CHANGE.

Shirley became impatient to begin her work.

Col. Carstone seemed to get well, and for a time appeared quite the same. But after a month or two, it became evident he was not the same. He had been an unusually calm, self controlled man before the accident that befell him on the State Line turnpike. Especially, though by nature quickly angry, he had had his temper singularly well in hand. Shirley noticed that he had become unaccountably irritable. The slightest cause, a trifle, threw him into an uncontrollable rage.

The first time she observed this they were riding together in the little light carriage. Her father was driving. A boy started up before them in the road, then slunk to one side. He was the forlornest tatterdemalion of a child, a mass of rags and dirt. He was a picture to excite profound pity, being stunted and starved looking, with stooping shoulders and narrow, hollow chest. He had large blue eyes, that looked glassy above his thin cheeks. But they were shifting furtive eyes, as if wont to glance from side to side, looking for a blow from behind, or for something to lay hands on, and make off with. He was a wee, hungry faced creature.

"What a pitiful looking child," said Shirley.

"That! That's the little devil that lost me the sorrel colt. Get out of the way, there, you!"

Col. Carstone gave the child a cut across the poor little shoulders with his whip. The child cried with pain.

"Why, father!" said Shirley. "How could you do that?"

"Let him keep out of my sight, then."

In all his life he had never spoken so before. She said nothing; not a word till they reached home. Neither did the colonel. But Shirley straightway gathered up some of Percy's clothes, a basket of the food that is dear to the appetite of a boy, and went back to the road, and found the half starved creature, and fed and comforted him. 'Twas poor little Rip, the baby tramp. She interceded with the local authorities for him. He did not belong to Linwood parts, or indeed anywhere else.

"We can do nothing for him. He's none of ours," they said.

"But you can't turn him out to starve, can you?" she asked.

They "reckoned" they couldn't do that, hardly. So after some delay, and much hemming and hawing, Rip, Nobody's child, was sent to the county poorhouse. There he had food and shelter, such as they were. There we leave him, for the present. But he will come in again. Though he did not belong to Linwood, he belongs to this story.

The brief fit of anger which surprised Shirley so that day in her father was only the first of many like it. He who was wont to be the sweetest, merriest of men to his family became a terror to them at times. What had come over their father! He realized the change himself, at times, and begged the forgiveness and forbearance of his wife and daughter in a humble way that brought tears to their eyes.

He was not well in other respects either. He dragged his limbs with a sense of pain and heaviness, though he went about the mill and farm still, and followed the old ways. One day he sat in the porch with the children and their mother, looking out at the peaceful valley below. A sudden gust of wind blew a speck of something into his eye. The speck proved to be a poisonous gnat. It blinded him. The eye became presently so swollen and painful that it was necessary to shut out the light. Shirley bound a bandage about the wounded eye.

"Stop, Shirley," said he "don't cover up both eyes!"

"I didn't papa; I only bound up the right eye."

He passed his hand across the left eye to make sure. He opened and closed the lid several times.

Then he sat in utter silence a moment.

"God help me!" he said at length, "I am going blind in my left eye!"

THE MARKET REPORTS.

REVIEW OFFICE,
Thursday Evening.

The wheat market has been inactive during the past week, 80 cents being the ruling figure still. The dullness at Chicago, which is reflected all over this continent, is caused mainly by the uncertainty of the effect of the Inter-State Railway Bill, which comes into effect in April. One opinion is that the freights will be higher, and others, that they will be the same or lower, and the result is that there is a standstill. There was a fairly large delivery of wheat and oats this week in the local market. Pork is still held at high prices, $6.50 being paid for the few dressed hogs delivered. Eggs are very low, chiefly on account of the importation of American eggs into Montreal and Toronto. The export dealers are paying 11 cents and on the market 12 cents is paid.

While it is yet time we wish to caution farmers against sowing Russian, Imperial or Mensury barley. These grades of barley, though plump and bright looking, do not compare with the ordinary Six Rowed barley for malting purposes, and for this purpose alone is Canadian barley taken by the United States. Those who may be unwise enough to sow the objectionable grades may incur serious loss when bringing their produce on the market, for dealers do not care to hazard mixing a load of those sorts in a consignment of good barley.

Cheese.

The following advice in regard to cheese coloring and boxing, received from Messrs. Ayer & Co. in response to an enquiry from Mr. W. H. Wrighton, will be of interest to cheese makers:—

In reply to your letter, we think the Peterborough cheese this year, at least such factories as we handled, were fully up to any previous season, if not a step in advance. The color, as a rule, a trifle high, but we would rather have it this way than too little. The demand now seems to be entirely on good high color or white.

Regarding the coloring, there are two or three brands of standard quality, such as Michel's. There are other extracts on the market that we think are injurious, and cause cheese to mottle or fade earlier than they should. The Peterborough factories could also improve in boxing; their boxes are not good enough, and don't fit the cheese tight enough, and the wood seems brittle. A box should fit about as tight as a kid glove, and be cut down to the level of the cheese. If they would do this, we would not have one third the broken boxes that we now receive. If there are any special points you would like information on we would be glad to give it to you. What the market calls for is a close made, firm, meaty cheese; anything approaching porousness or holes is very objectionable.

This is the time to pay great attention to such matters as referred to by Messrs. Ayer & Co.

Live Stock.

The London Canadian Gazette says:—The chronic depression in live stock has been increased by the advent of Lent, and reports from the Metropolitan and provincial markets speak of business as exceptionally quiet, prices being as low as at any time during the import season. No Canadian cattle have been offered for some considerable time, the condition of trade here being enough to frighten the most sanguine shipper. A Boston exporter tried one or two shipments from Portland, but, in addition to the weak trade he suffered severely from mortality at sea, and speedily abandoned his effort. The only consignments now being handled at Liverpool are those from Boston and Baltimore, and these are below the average of former years in point of number. For good states bullocks the prices ruling just now are 4½d @ 4¾d for lb. We learn from a salesman who has just returned from a business visit to Canada, that there are being quite as many cattle fed throughout the Dominion as usual, and as feeding stuffs are now pretty cheap, they can be put on the markets here at a lower figure, more especially those bought in late, stores having given way considerably during the autumn and early winter. Even with these advantages it is doubtful if they can meet the present condition of trade here, a condition which is quite as likely to prevail in the summer months as it is now. The outlook is by no means encouraging, especially for those feeders and shippers who have contracted for space at 65s and 70s per head. A consignment of Canadian cattle via Boston has been landed at Birkenhead.

FRIDAY, MARCH 25, 1887.

THE CITY AND SUBURBS

Personal.

Mr. Jas. Dolan, alias Tom Barrosakane, is off on another ramble. He has gone out to California to spend a few weeks.

FINE shell cordovan shoes at Kidd's new store for $4.00 per pair. Hand made.

To-Morrow.

Don't forget the sale of horses, harness, &c., &c., to-morrow morning on the market square at 10 o'clock sharp.

To Return.

At the Opera House on Thursday evening it was announced that the McDowell Company would return to town on April 5th.

57th.

A detachment of the 57th Battalion were on the stage at the Opera House on Thursday night, representing the march of the 8th Lancers through the streets of Mudborgh.

BUTCHER'S linen for aprons now to be found at TURNBULL'S.

Booming of Guns.

The Salvation Army announces that the attack on the Town of Colborne will be led on April 1st. Adjutant Bolton will be in command, assisted by Capts. Dunkley and Dyson, and a large contingent of soldiers.

I WILL not be undersold by anyone. See if I will! R. J. KIDD.

Scott Act.

At the Police Court on Thursday the Kennedy-Campbell case was settled, the defendants pleading guilty through Mr. A. P. Poussette, Q. C. A fine of $100 was imposed. The Queen vs. Brennan case was settled in a similar manner, $50 was the fine. The Queen vs. Giroux cases were adjourned till Monday.

Matrimonial.

The following wedding announcement appears in the Chicago Times of Feb. 27th, the bride being a native of Peterborough: "Last Tuesday, at the Cathedral of the Holy Name, in the presence of a large number of friends, Mr. James Wallace Murphy, of Butte City, Montana, and Miss Fannie Beatrice Callahan, formerly of Montreal and recently of Oak Park, were united in matrimony, Rev. Father Murry, Chancellor of the Archdiocese, officiating in the ceremony, which was that of a nuptial high mass. The bride was attended by four bridesmaids, and given away at the altar by her brother-in-law, Mr. J. C. Morrissey. Judge Nichols, of Waukegan, served as best man. At the conclusion of the ceremony the party repaired to the Grand Pacific Hotel, where a private family party was entertained at dinner, covers being laid for twelve. Later in the day the newly married couple left town for Butte City, Montana, their future home."

GRASS linens, table linens, table napkins, linen handkerchiefs, etc., fresh from the loom in Belfast, Ireland, now opened out at TURNBULL'S. Grand value. See them.

"Our Regiment."

It must have been gratifying to Mr. E. A. McDowell to find on Thursday evening, though the weather was far from fine, that the Peterborough people had not forgotten him and his company. The Opera House was well filled before the curtain rose. The play presented, "Our Regiment," is a comedy so bright, volatile and droll as to win popularity wherever played. The leading characters, Enid Thurston and Guy Warrener (8th Lancers), were presented by Miss Fanny Reeves and Mr. E. A. McDowell respectively. Miss Reeves' acting was notable in this respect: she did not represent an actress, but simply a pretty girl in love, and very charmingly did she take her part. Mr. McDowell's Guy Warrener created no end of fun. The amusement at the novel "proposal" scene fell little short of uproar. Capt. Featherstone found a handsome representative in Mr. E. Bell. Mrs. Dobbinson was a complete "old general," as Dickens would say, and every time she issued the stentorian order "Samuel" the audience smiled audibly, and the irate Mr. Dobbinson vaporized his firmness in the meek response "Matilda." Louis Grisel, as jolly old Mr. Ellaby, was very popular with the girls in the play, but not more so than with the audience. His make up was fine. Olive and Maud, the other two girls, were prettily personated by Miss Thornton and Miss Malcolm. Mr. Barry, as the Rev. John Talbot, curate of Mudburg, stood out as a satire upon trying to make the square block fit the round hole. Altogether the play was well presented throughout. Several scenes were loudly applauded, especially the ball room scene and the march of the military.

A CHOICE assortment of Scotch and Canadian tweeds, worsteds and West of England pantings to choose from at TURNBULL'S. Remember there is a first-class tailor always on the premises to execute work promptly.

Appointed.

Mr. Alex. Stewart has been appointed by St. Andrew's Church to the position of representative on the Peterborough Protestant Poor Trust Board in place of Mr. J. J. Landy, resigned.

Looking it Over.

Mr. Jas. Haw, of the Orillia House, Orillia, and Mr. Wm. Ramsey, of the same town, are here to day, their object being to inspect Peterborough's Town Hall. A stock company is to be formed in Orillia to build a Town Hall, Opera House and Post Office combined, and these two gentlemen are going the rounds to gather up some ideas on the subject.

Big Stock Sale.

An extensive sale of farm stock took place at the homestead of Mr. Wm. Crough, Reeve of Ennismore, on Thursday. There was a very large attendance, there being fully three hundred people present. The sale was bona fide as Mr. Crough is retiring from farming. About 70 head of stock was sold at good prices. The people present were served with refreshments in a hospitable manner. Mr. Charles Stapleton and son conducted the sale.

ON and after Friday, 25th, we can suit any one in boots, shoes or slippers. R. J. KIDD.

Saturday Night's Meeting.

The temperance meeting to be held to-morrow evening in the Opera House will be open to all, ladies and gentlemen. At it the Rev. J. Judd White, a speaker and singer of wide reputation, and Mr. W. W. Buchanan, of Hamilton, Dominion Councillor of the Royal Templars of Temperance, will make their first appearance in Peterborough. The Rev. L. Tovell will preside, and a local choir will furnish music. Mr. Buchanan is a forcible speaker, while Mr. White is an attractive speaker and singer.

You might get calf boots from a calf; but where would you go for kidd boots but to KIDD'S?

The Temperance Meetings.

The Thursday evening meeting of the series was held in St. Andrew's Church. The inclement weather accounted for the audience not being large. The Rev. Alex. Bell presided, and Messrs. Hebdon and Dunnett delivered addresses. As usual the singing of Messrs. Stead and Dunnett was prominet feature of the programme. This evening the Helpers will hold their last meeting in St. Paul's Church. Several clergymen are expected to take part. More time than usual will be given to singing, the following being the programme:—

Duet....."The Door of God's Mercy."
Duet....."Welcome, Wanderer, Welcome."
Song...."Rocked in the Bradle of the Deep."
Song...."Father, Bring Home Your Money To-Night."
Song....."The Village Blacksmith."
Duet....."Larboard Watch."
Duet....."A Shelter in the Time of Storm."
Closing song....."God Be With You Till We Meet Again."

TURNBULL'S dress goods counter and shelves are now filled with new good in every conceiveable shade, with trimmings to match. His prices are the lowest and styles the best. Look through and be convinced.

More than a Centenarian.

WILKESBARRE, Pa., March 24.—John Kneppen, an Austrian veteran of the time of the first Napoleon, died yesterday, aged 108 years.

Fatal Capsize of a Steamer.

RICHMOND, Va., March 24.—The schooner George Richardson, lumber lader, capsized in a gale on Tuesday evening in Chesapeake Bay. It is supposed that all on board were lost.

The Algoma Election.

SAULT STE. MARIE, March 24.—The returning officer to-day declared Mr. Dawson elected for Algoma by eleven majority. There was no statement in the ballot boxes from the polling places at Campbell and White River, which, it is claimed, would increase his majority to eighteen or twenty Bermuda's Mite.

HAMILTON, Bermuda, March 24.—The Local Legislature has voted five hundred pounds towards the establishment of the Imperial Institute in London. The Legislature is also discussing a proposal to expend three thousand pounds in the erection of a permanent memorial of the jubilee on the Island.

Found Guilty of Forgery.

BELLEVILLE, March 24.—Hamilton Scott was found guilty to-day in the Assize Court of a series of forgeries committed last November. He obtained $82 from W. A. Taylor, a hotel-keeper, on the strength of checks to which the the names of "Allen, Gilmour & Co." and the "Rathbun Company" of Deseronto had been forged.

The Floods in Dakota.

BISMARCK, Dak., March 24.—All attempts to break the Sibley gorge with dynamite are unavailing. A man was seen last evening, riding down the river on a cake of ice, frantically calling for help, but it was impossible to assist him. The Fort Lincoln army officers here are of opinion that the people opposite the post on the lowlands south of the city have perished in the flood.

A Severe Two Days' Storm.

PORTLAND, March 24.—The steamer "Oregon," which arrived yesterday from Liverpool, reports that last Thursday and Friday she encountered a severe easterly gale. "If the "Dauntless" or "Cornet" were in our vicinity" said the first officer, "and all accounts place them close by, they they had a hard time of it, and must have made little or no headway. It was a dead beat to windward in one of the roughest seas ever known on the Atlantic. On Friday the lookout reported a schooner rigged craft away to port, scudding under bare poles. This may have been one of the yachts. If they can make way against a gale like that, they are better than most yachts. They will arrive on the other side much later than was expected."

Go to Kidd's new store and get a pair of boots that WILL fit your feet.

ANNEXATION UNPOPULAR.

Sir Alexander Campbell interviewed in New York.

NEW YORK, March 24.—Sir Alexander Campbell, ex Postmaster-General of Canada, who is now in this city on his way to England to attend the conference of delegates from the several colonies of Great Britain, to be held this month in London, says the newspaper paragraphs about the representatives of the colonies being called together for the purpose of considering the political federation of the Empire are incorrect. Sir Alex. believes any feeling in favor of annexation in the Dominion is confined chiefly to a small minority of residents of some parts of New Brunswick and Nova Scotia. The people of Quebec, who enjoy freedom of action in their religious affairs, he says, are perfectly safe in their institutions and language, their religion and its privileges, which they would not possess in permanency under any other Government, and he believes they have no desire for annexation. The subject is seldom mentioned, and still more seldom advocated, by anyone in Canada.

Sir Alexander thinks it probable that the exaggerated and otherwise erroneous statements of the course pursued by Canada in the matter of the fisheries have reached many United States newspapers. A studious effort has been made, he says, by the Canadian Government to avoid anything approaching arbitary measures towards any who are willing to obey the municipal laws of the province more immediately concerned. Errors may have been made, but if so accidentally. Sir Alexander is confident that a modus vivendi might be easily arrived at by a small commission that would settle the rights of both parties and recommend satisfactory arrangements about the pursuit of the fisheries.

Burning Tramps Wholesale.

SAN FRANCISCO, March 24.—The steamer Belgia, which arrived to-day from China and Japan, brought news of a dreadful tragedy at Hesiashib, China, twenty-miles north-east of Hong-Ebow. Over 300 tramps appeared in the village and the inhabitants, greatly irritated by their presence, inveigled the whole body of tramps into the temple and during the night set fire to the edifice. Only forty of the tramps escaped from the blazing building, the remainder being burned to death.

WOMEN'S rights and lefts for 65 cents a pair at R. J. KIDD'S new store.

THE ECCLESIASTICAL BILL.

BERLIN, March 24.—The Oberhaus to-day adopted the Ecclesiastical Bill in the form recommended by the committee with the addition of Bishop Koff's amendments that right of the state of veto nominations shall only be operative in the case of permanent nominations to cures; also that admission to orders shall not depend upon the resolution of the Government.

A DONATION PARTY'S MISHAP.

UTICA, March 24.—At a Methodist Episcopal donation party in the school house at Stittsville, near Utica, the floor gave way and ten or fifteen persons were severly injured, burned scalded and suffered fractures of limbs. No fatalities have occurred thus far.

Operations for breaking the ice in the St. Lawrence channel, between Montreal and Pointe aux Trembles, by means of daulin, were commenced on Wednesday, and satisfactory progress was made during the day.

Enjoy Life.

What a truly beautiful world we life in! Nature gives us grandeur of mountains, glens and oceans, and thousands of means of enjoyment. We can desire no better when in perfect health, but how often do the majority of people feel like giving it up disheartened, discouraged and worn out with disease, when there is no occasion for this feeling, as every sufferer can easily obtain satisfactory proof, that Green's August Flower, will make them free from disease, as when born. Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint are the direct causes of seventy-five per cent. of such maladies as Biliousness, Indigestion, Sick Headache, Costiveness, Nervous Prostration, Dizziness of the Head, Palpitation of the Heart, and other distressing symptoms. Three doses of August Flower will prove its wonderful effect. Sample bottles, 10 cents. Try it. d90

MARRIED.

HATHERLEY — HATHERLEY.—At the residence of the bride's father, March 23rd, 1887, by the Rev. J. C. Wilson, MR. GEORGE HATHERLEY, of Norwood, to MISS ELIZABETH ANN, daughter of John Hatherley, Esq., of Otonabee, Ont.

DIED.

To all who Buy Seeds.

"As ye sow so shall ye reap" is a truism worthy of consideration by all who are seeking for success in Garden or Farm operations. It is evident to every thoughtful mind that Choice Flowers, Fine Vegetables and Grain, cannot be produced by sowing a poor grade of Seed. With this object in view, I have been careful in selecting my Seeds for this season's operations. I make it a point to test the vitality of my Seeds before selling them to my customers, so that the disappointment of Seed not growing is greatly lessened. My stock will be found large and choice. Trusting to be favoured with an extensive patronage this season in my new establishment, Floral Drug Store, corner of George and Charlotte streets, opposite the market.

THOMAS KELLY

The Daily Review.

SATURDAY, MARCH 26, 1887.

BECAUSE Col. Ouimet is mentioned as being likely to be chosen Speaker, some of the more knavish of the Reform journals are insinuating that he is thereby to be bought over from the Opposition. This is a foul insult to a gentleman of high character. Col. Ouimet has been a Conservative and remains a Conservative, not being of the stuff of which deserters are made. Being led away by a mistaken, but amiable, sympathy for a culprit in part of the same race, he recorded his vote, last session, in favour of Riel. But thereafter he continued to support the Conservative Government and its measures because he believes in the Conservative policy and would not descend to be a renegade to obtain vengeance for the execution of a condemned criminal, even if a generous impulse led him to regard with compassion a man not the less unfortunate for being criminal. It is, perhaps, somewhat natural for Reformers to imagine that the Speaker's chair must be filled by purchase, when they remember that while in power at Ottawa and Quebec they were presided over by Speakers in their pay.

Lord Lansdowne's Tenants.

OTTAWA, March 25.—When shown the cable dispatch to-day regarding the eviction of his Irish tenants, and asked whether he had any observations to make on the subject, Lord Lansdowne said that the facts regarding the Queen's County estates were fully stated in the memorandum which appeared a few days ago in the Canadian press. The tenants on his Queen's County estate adopted the "plan of campaign" because the abatements offered to them were not upon the same scale as those recently allowed to his tenants in Kerry, the circumstances of the two estates being wholly dissimilar. His Excellency said, in connection with the dismissal of Mr. Dunne, a magistrate, and also one of his tenants, was not at his instance but because, being a justice of the peace, he attended a meeting for an object which the Irish Courts have decided to be illegal.

The Unloaded Pistol Again.

KINGSTON, March 25.—The Delta correspondent of the Whig writes:—A joke in the Italian camp resulted rather sadly the other day. It seems that one of the men pointed a revolver at another, not supposing it to be loaded, but it was loaded all the same, and a bullet went whizzing through the neck of the person at whom it was aimed, passing within an eighth of an inch of the jugular vein. Fortunately the victim of this decided foolish practical joke is getting along nicely. Two other Italians had a skirmish in the same camp on Wednesday. One of them stabbed the other three times on the arm and once on the head making a gash two inches long.

Another Railway Collision.

URBANA, Ohio, March 25.—Last evening two passenger trains on the Pan Handle road collided in a cut just near Hagenbach station. The engines of the two trains came together with a terrible crash, jamming the passenger coaches and baggage coaches together in a heap, while both engines were tangled in the mass of the ruins. Both passenger trains were filled, but no one was hurt.

Yet Another Collision.

SHENECTADY, N. Y., March 25.—A freight train of the Quaker street depot of the Delaware Hudson Railway ran into a locomotive of the West Shore train at South Shenectady last evening. Both engines were badly wrecked. The engine men escaped by jumping.

Suspicious Heavy Failure.

NEW YORK, March 25.—The Edmiston & Waddell Company, manufacturers of agricultural implements, Brooklyn, have failed. Liabilities $200,000; no assets. Both members of the firm have disappeared and the books cannot be found.

LETTER FROM FLORIDA.

To the Editor of the Review.

PALMETTO PLACE,
Micco P. O. Brevard County,
FLORIDA, March 10th, 1887.

DEAR SIR,—I can hardly believe that almost 12 months have elapsed since my last winter's letter to you, but it is even so and that inevitable "dollar" must be hunted up and sent off to its chilly destination to ensure the arrival of the home paper for another year. I am sorry for the greenback—it must be uncomfortable to go north at this season. A few words from our sunny land may be of interest to our Peterborough friends just to make them realize how cold they are, so if you will allow me space I will endeavor to tell them something of our home and surroundings. This is my second winter without a sight of the snow and it is hard for us enjoying glorious summer weather here to realize that you are still in the grasp of Jack Frost and listening to the merry gingle of the sleigh bells. This winter with us has been a perfectly ideal one, no frost, only an occasional day down to about 45 deg. to 50 deg. which once or twice caused us to shut the doors and start a fire of chips in our little "Fraklin." The sun has shone out brightly during some part of every day and perennial green has always clothed the trees. Our beautiful river—three miles wide here—ripples and shines, and always is in good order for boating. Sometimes a squall lashes it into fury, and my little 5-ton sloop, the "Osprey," strains at her moorings and rolls about in quite a lively way, but these rough moods are of short duration, and soon the water is smooth again and suited for the lightest of row boats. Our little girl, somewhat lonely here for want of juvenile companions, has taken to the water like a duck and navigates from one part of the settlement to another in a small packing case, which she has made water tight and to which she has fitted a pair of oars. This would seem dangerous at first glance, but is not, as the water for 200 feet from the shore is not 2 feet deep, and the bottom is clean, sharp sand. The water being salt, no bad effects follow an occasional ducking, and she is as healthy and full of life as youth and strength can make her. A trip to the ocean beach, which we can reach in half an hour, reminds us of old ocean's proximity, and a dip in the surf takes the cobwebs out of our eyes and refreshes us as nothing else can. Whenever there is a cloudbank in the east we hear the thunder of the surf at our home on the west shore, and sometimes from our verandah can see steamships and sailing vessels passing up and down the coast, those bound north taking advantage of the Gulf Stream which here skirts the coast for its whole length as far north as Cape Carnavaral.

There is a great charm about this river to anyone fond of the water and the fact that but very few places in it are over 6 feet deep makes accidents of a serious nature almost impossible and reassures those who are in a chronic state of terror when in a sail boat. Everyone owns a more or less pretentious boat here, from the small flat bottomed row boat to yachts costing as much as $2,000. The river is splendid sailing ground for 150 miles, and nothing is more enjoyable than to go for a weeks cruise in a good boat comfortably fitted up and visit friends up and down the river. We have a very pleasant circle of acquaintances at different points and often enjoy a little excursion of this kind, sometimes going over 100 miles. In my last letter I spoke at some length of the fishing and shooting and need not repeat here. Suffice it to say we catch a splendid list of fish from a 10 foot shark occasionally to the delicious mullet. And now for a fish story which will make some of of your Stoney Lake Izaac Waltons smile with incredulity. A few weeks ago in company with some friends we went in a small boat for several miles up the Sebastian River to a fresh water stream which is just south of us, and had some bass fishing, taking 14 in a very short time, all of large seize, the largest weighing 7½ lbs. How is that for a black bass? and there were lots of them. A few days previous a friend sent us several caught in the same stream, one of which weighed 5½ lbs when dressed ready for the pan. Ducks are plentiful, but know how far a shot gun kill s and one has to go to the Savannas on the east shore to get a good bag of them. Oysters are plentiful and very fine and abound in the rivers a short distance below. We bring them up by the boat load and plant them in front of our places to be fished up and eaten as we desire. We are not nearly so lonely here as we were a year ago, settlers of a good class are coming in rapidly. On the other side of the river we have had three or four arrivals, and our settlement here is filling up with Canucks. North of me Mr Boswell, formely of Peterborough, has a snug place and three or four hundred trees out as well as half an acre of pineapples. North of him our carpenter and general handy man Mr. Russell, an Englishman by the way, is improving, and then comes Mr. G. V. Clementi of Peterborough with a snug cottage in a grove of cabbage palms and a clearing of four acres set out in orange and lemon trees to the number of some 300, all of which are doing nicely. "Dod" has, also, 5,000 pineapples, a good percentage of which he expects to fruit this year, and is rejoicing in the fact that quite a number of his lemon trees are in bloom although only set out about January 1st, 1886. By hard work, which he is not afraid of, he has made excellent progress towards a nice home place. He has got the "cage" all in order, but the "bird" has not arrived yet, and I really think his is thinking that this batchelor business is rather uphill work. He contemplates a trip north next summer and if he comes back without someone to share his sorrows and pineapples we will never forgive him. My own venture here consists of a five-acre clearing, on which I have set out about 500 trees, principally Sicily lemons and Tangerine oranges. All the choice varieties are represented, and I am glad to say all are doing finely. I have, also, three varieties of figs, four varieties of Scuppernong grapes, the Punto and Honey peach, LeConte and Alligator pears, sugar apples, Japan plums, three varieties of mulberries, apricots, Japan persimmon, guavas, and several varieties of plums. All are doing well, and although only our second year here, we will have considerable fruit this year. My 10,000 pineapples are looking well and a large percentage will [illegible] garden is looking very [illegible] other work delayed [illegible] and we are not so far ahead as we were last year. However, we have [illegible] fruit, tomatoes, sweet potatoes, lettuce, squash, greens, raddish, &c., for some time, and in a few weeks will have everything else in the fruit line ready for the table.

We have had lots of Canadian visitors this season In November two gentlemen from Cavan favoured us with a call and looked the country over in search of some hard-up orange grover with a bearing grove who wanted to take half its value for it. They were disappointed in this, as the grove owners in this section are not in any trouble financially, and having a good thing prefer to hold on to it. These gentlemen went back, and had they stated their speculative hopes before coming, they might have saved the cost of the trip. We have with us now two gentlemen from Port Hope, who come, as I did, to make their own groves. Both are satisfied with the outlook, and both have bought to the south of us and will build and improve at once. They are near another new arrival, a New York man, who has built a fine large house this winter and next year proposes to board some of the innumerable crop of sick Yankees who come down here to spend their spare cash. Altogether our settlement is progressing nicely. Two years since there were only two families within two miles, now we have eight in that distance on this side of the river and four or five opposite. Lieutenant Henn, the gallant owner of the "Galatea," but with a very handsome light yacht the "Rambler" we ran up the old Union Jack in his honor the other morning as he passed the "Osprey." We now have two steamers making tri-weekly trips the length of the river, and are much more comfortable than formerly besides giving us such good shipping facilities. I fear I have trespassed too much on your space and will close with kind regards to our Peterborough friends from our little band of Canucks, who though far away have not forgotten the good old town which they all hope to see again.

Respectfully yours,
W. J. NESBITT.

A TERRIBLE PASSAGE.

The Steamer Scotia Twenty Days in a Storm.

NEW YORK, March 25.—The steamship Scotia, from Marseilles and Mediterranean ports, with about 1,000 passengers on board, was reported ashore at Blue Point at eleven o'clock this morning. The Fire Island lifesaving people got a line to her, but owing to the heavy surf were not able to do anything in the way of taking off her passengers. A great crowd assembled on the beach and endeavoured by every means in their power to assist the life-saving crew. It was feared that several of the passengers had been swept overboard by the waves. Later reports, however, state that her passengers are all safe, and would be taken to New York to-morrow. James E. Elwell & Co., the Scotia's agents in this city, have sent assistance to the vessel, but it is believed there is but little hope of saving her. It is conjectured the vessel had become damaged as a result of her struggle with the terrific weather, and that the captain had beached her to save the passengers.

PATCHOGUE, L. I., March 25.—For nearly twenty days the steamer met a series of storms, the waves dashing over the decks like huge mountains, and at times threatening to entirely submerge her. During most of the time it was necessary to keep the emigrants packed like sardines in the steerage, where they were subjected to indescribe suffering, being thrown from side to side of the vessel, pitched from their berths, and sustaining more or less serious bruises of their limbs. Several men and women had arms and legs broken, while many of the children were black and blue from frequent contact with the posts and beams. The machinery of the steamer had been of little use for nearly a week, and the fact of the vessel having run ashore with her head north-east, directly opposite to her proper course, would indicate that she had been tossing about with but slight control.

At 8 p. m. the Scotia was lying easy in about two fathoms of water 200 feet from shore, and was working in through the rounding of the rising tide. The vessel is leaking, and the pumps are kept continually working to clear her of water. The weather continues fine and a quiet sea prevails. There are no apprehensions entertained as to the safety of the vessel and her passengers during the night.

The Grand Trunk and the Pool.

CHICAGO, March 25.—At yesterday's meeting of the Central Traffic Association Managers, the Chicago and Grand Trunk demanded it should be granted a differential rate on freight via Montreal to all competitive points in New England. All the other roads opposed this proposition, and desired to refer it to a Joint Executive Committe of trunk lines for settlement. To this the Chicago and Grand Trunk objected, and upon the other lines insisting, the representatives of that road gave notice that it should at once withdraw from the Association. Its withdrawal was accompanied by a pledge that it should not demoralize through rates, or interfere with the policy adopted by the Association lines. The general opinion is that the Association cannot be maintained without the aid of the Grand Trunk, even as a rate bureau, and that it will soon go to pieces.

The Extradition Treaty.

NEW YORK, March 25.—The Herald publishes the text of the extradition treaty with Great Britain, as it was recently reported back to the Senate with amendments by the committee, on foreign relations. The Herald's correspondent at Washington says:—That notwithstanding the persistent assaults and determined opposition that have been made against the treaty, by means of resolutions, memorials, petitions, etc., to the Senate, and private letters to Senators from various parts of the country, the treaty comes back with a favorable recommendation and but few amendments. It was signed by Minister Phelps nearly nine months ago.

GERMANY AND THE VATICAN.

BERLIN, March 25.—Negotiations on the part of the Government with the Conservatives and Union Conservatives have resulted in an agreement that the Prussian lower House will accept the Church bill in the shape in which it passed the upper House; that there will be a lasting peace between Prussia and the Vatican, even after the acceptance of the bill.

THE THREE EMPERORS.

BERLIN, March 25.—The alliance of the three Emperors continues and so requires no renewal. Russo-German relations are better than ever. The National Gazette's contrary assertions are inventions.

ARCHBISHOP CROKE'S ACTION.

LONDON, March 25. It is learned from reliable sources that the Government has made urgent representations at the Vatican on the subject of Archbishop Croke's demonstrative action on the occasion of Father Keller's arrest. It is expected the Archbishop will be privately admonished to exhibit greater reserve in future in connection with political events in Ireland. It is certain that the Government is supported at the Vatican by the most powerful Roman Catholic influences in Great Britain.

GLADSTONIAN LIBERAL ELECTED.

LONDON, March 25.—Mr. Fester, a Gladstonian Liberal, was elected to the House of Commons to-day for the Ikeston division of Derbyshire. Mr. Foster's vote was 5,512, and Mr. Leek's 4,180.

SYSTEMATIC SLANDER.

The slander of everything Conservative by the Reform press and platform orators is reduced to a deliberate system. If one of them invents some calumny, the rest repeat and circulate it, one after the other, in the hope that people will at last imagine there must be some truth in what they see or hear so often in different quarters.

An extract from the Kingston Whig will illustrate the manner in which this conspiracy is worked. The Whig says :—

"In a recent issue that good paper, the Hamilton Spectator, has candidly remarked that Sir John would have no difficulty in buying up the nationalists."

The Hamilton Spectator did not make such a remark about Sir John Macdonald and the Nationalists. What it did was to place among its extracts from the press, without any sign of assent and stating the source of its quotation, a paragraph from the Bobcaygeon Independent, certainly not a Conservative journal, in which such an expression occurred. The Montreal Herald, always ready to strike a foul blow against a political opponent, republished the extract saying that it was the utterance of a Conservative journal in Ontario and that it took it from the Hamilton Spectator, carefully wording its sentence, so that without actually saying so it would convey to any reader the impression that the Spectator was itself guilty of charging Sir John and the Nationalists with corruption. The next step is that smaller Reform organs repeat the calumny, not contenting themselves however with choosing ambiguous words to convey the false impression but boldly uttering the calumny. Whether the Whig borrowed its slander from the Herald direct or took it at second hand from some other Reform organ engaged in the dirty work, it must have felt that it was repeating a false accusation. It knows that the writers in the Spectator are not idiots and that they are not knaves to slander the great Conservative chieftain, so whereever it found the falsehood it was too grossly improbable to be believed. Yet the Whig knowing this, gladly seized upon the chance of doing its share in circulating a slander because it could thus calumniate a Conservative journal and a Conservative leader.

It is in this manner that the Reform press systematically endeavour to corrupt public opinion.

ONTARIO CONSERVATIVE.

The return of Mr. Dawson for Algoma completes the elections for this Province, and makes the Ministerial majority from Ontario in the House of Commons 16. As in 1882 the Ministerial majority was 16, this shows that the Reformers, in spite of their boasts, could make no gain in this Province. There was a Conservative gain, which was apparently neutralized by the mere change of Mr. Labrosse, representing the same county, Prescott, from one side of the House to the other. He has chosen, though elected in 1882 as a Conservative and still believing in the Conservative policy, to array himself against the Ministry on the sole ground of the execution of Riel, and he has carried his constituents with him on the same cry. If Mr. Blake thinks this is a gain to boast about he is welcome to do so.

The same cry of revenge by causing the defeat of the Government candidates in three or four constituencies, has counteracted the real gain made by the friends of the Administration in other parts of Ontario, where this agitation had no influence. Leaving Riel out of the question, Ontario has given increased support to the Conservative policy.

In other Ontario constituencies where there was an important French Canadian vote, as in Peterborough, they were too well informed to be led away by this cry of designing demagogues, having learned the truth that Riel was no friend to their race, their creed or their country. So they voted in accordance with their old party ties, as did their brethren in the Province of Quebec, who returned all their Cabinet Ministers as their representatives.

The Province of Ontario has pronounced emphatically in favor of the statesmanlike policy of the Conservative leaders.

It was in Montmorenci that Mr. C. Langelier, the Reform Candidate was declared elected by a majority of one by the judge on a recount. In Chicontimi, Mr. Couture, Reform, was declared to have a majority of 119 by the Returning Officer without a recount, the previous report of Mr. Gagne's election having been founded on incomplete returns. Our slip in confounding the two cases makes no change in the fact of a Reform member in the Province of Quebec owing his seat to a recount. In Joliette, Mr. Guibault's election was determined by the Judge on a recount making a tie and the Returning Officer giving him the casting vote, and Mr Blake's friends claim Mr. Guilbault for the Opposition, though we are not quite sure of their correctness.

Perished in the Flames.

Canning, N. S., March 25.—At three o'clock this morning a fire broke out in the house of Albert Borden, Acting Postmaster, a near relative of Dr. Borden, M. P. The whole populace turned out, conquered the fire and found Mr. Borden burned to death in his room. It is supposed that, in rising from a lounge to retire to bed, he upset a lamp; that he endeavored to extinguish the flames and was suffocated and burned. His wife and family are on a visit to Boston.

ONTARIO LEGISLATURE

THE FIRST SESSION OF THE SIXTH PROVINCIAL PARLIAMENT.

Amendments to the Municipal Act—Qualification of Municipal Representatives—Mutual Fire Insurance Companies.

Thursday, March 24.—Several bills were introduced and two private bills were read the third time.

PROTECTION OF WOMEN.

Mr. Hardy moved the second reading of a bill to protect women who were patients in asylums.

Mr. Meredith said the bill practically trenched on the Dominion jurisdiction in regard to criminal law.

Mr. Mowat said that jurisdiction was not always clear, but he had no doubt in this case.

The bill was read a second time.

SECOND READINGS.

Mr. Wilmot's bill to amend the Assessment Act, and Mr. Ferguson's to amend the Ditches and Watercourses Act were read the second time.

PROPERTY QUALIFICATIONS.

Mr. Garson moved the second reading of his bill abolishing the property qualification for municipal representatives. He argued that it was not necessary to have property qualification, as a man was elected to represent other people's property and not his own.

The bill was read the second time and referred to the Municipal Committee, as was also Mr. Gibson's bill on the same subject.

FIRE INSURANCE COMPANIES.

Mr. McMahon moved the second reading of the bill providing that at meetings of mutual fire insurance companies members shall only have one vote and that the head office may be changed by a majority vote.

After remarks by Mr. Mowat and Mr. Meredith the order was allowed to stand.

THE MUNICIPAL ACT.

Mr. Harcourt's bill to amend the Municipal Act, Mr. Gilmour's bill providing machinery whereby municipalities can get improvements without incorporation, and Mr. Bishop's bill, reducing the township qualifications for councillors to $600 and $1,200, were referred to the Municipal Committee.

Mr. Guthrie's bill to amend the Municipal Act in regard of the qualifications of mayors and aldermen, and by providing that districts in the vicinity of a free library may vote sums towards its maintenance and making various enactments in regard to the jurisdiction of county councils over roads and bridges, was also referred after a second reading.

Mr. Biggar's bill to amend the Assessment Act was read the second time.

Several private bills were advanced a stage, and the House adjourned until Monday to give the Committees an opportunity to work on Friday.

A RUSSIAN COUP DE MAIN.

Hourly Awaited in Bulgaria—Steady Movement of Troops.

New York, March 25.—The Star's London special says: "The steady movement of Bulgarian and Roumelian troops into Varna and Bourgas commenced yesterday and continued all last night and to-day. The situation is viewed at Vienna as alarming. The hasty preparations along the Bulgarian and Roumelian coasts give color to the report that a Russian coup de main is hourly awaited. The unanimity with which the Russian press declares the resolution of the Russian Government not to interfere further in the affairs of Bulgaria is regarded purposely to mislead. Simultaneously with the despatch of heavy reinforcements to the coast garrisons there has been a gradual movement of troops toward the Turkish frontier, behind which, in Macedonia and south of the eastern Roumelian borders, the Turks are massing in two powerful armies."

LINDSAY.

Dead Fish.—Through the negligence of someone people say the fishery Inspectors, there are hundreds of dead fish now coming down the Scugog. This week one citizen brought them home in large numbers to feed his hogs. The alleged cause of death is suffocation, there being no holes cut in the ice. The fish are splendid specimens of maskinonge.

Fire in the "Warder" Office.—Last Sunday morning about five minutes to six o'clock, Mr. Primeau, living next door west of the Warder office, noticed a strong smell of smoke in his house, and at once gave the alarm. Mr. Lennon, living west, was aroused, and quickly located the fire in the back part of the Warder office. The back door was found unbolted, so an entrance was easily gained. Then it was discovered that the side of the stairway was on fire. A few pails of water, however, quickly extinguished it. Then investigation revealed the fact that a diabolical attempt to burn the entire office had "missed fire." The floor along the east side of the press room was saturated most thoroughly with coal oil. Paper had been littrally strewn over the floor, which was also saturated with coal oil; but being too solid, or compact, did not burn. The stairs were somewhat scorched, but the oil still plainly showed itself there. Arrived upstairs the firemen found everything strewn with bundles of paper, all wet with coal oil; while in and around the long lines of type cases, sheets were stuffed. Later on it was noticed that nearly every case in the office was well oiled; in some of the boxes it was fully a quarter of an inch deep in the afternoon of Sunday, hours after the fire was extinguished. All in all, considering the quantity on the floors, on the paper and in the type cases, there could not be less than six or seven pails of coal oil. Investigation revealed that the oil kept in the office, for washing rollers, about two and one-half gallons in all, had been used; but the miscreant did not notice one five gallon can and two kegs of machine oil, or lardine, a very inflammable substance, possessing more firing power than coal oil; nor was the keg of printer's ink, a still stronger burning substance, touched. Had either of the latter been used instead of the coal oil, the fire could not well have been kept under control. That the work was that of an incendiary is beyond a doubt.—Warder.

The Quebec Outrage.

Quebec, March 25.—The police have made no arrest in connection with the recent explosion at the place of meeting the salvation army. They affect to make light of the whole affair, and attribute it to some mischievious boys. The administrator of the archdiocese has notified the clergy to privately warn their flocks that any physical attacks on the army are highly displeasing to the ecclesiastical authorities.

SOMETHING NEW UNDER THE SUN!

GOUGH'S

FRESH ARRIVAL OF SPRING OVERCOATS AND SUITS

ARE THE NOBBIEST AND NEWEST UNDER THE SUN!

Those High-Price "Clothing Dealers" can't see the funny about GOUGH'S GIFT DEPARTMENT, and claim such things as beneath them. Yes, low advertising is beyond their comprehenson, because they don't understand the first principles of Low Price System. We freely admit that we are fallen clothiers, wallowing in the lowest depths of Bed Rock Prices, while our exalted brethern look down upon us from their high places, and go wild because we capture the trade.

☞Farmers, Mechanics, Merchants, Bankers and Laboring men, come in and see us, take no man's word. Investigate and believe your own eyes, and you will be convinced that GOUGH is the Cheapest Clothier on earth.

This week we will offer extraordinary inducements. All our departments have been augmented with new features and choice stock, which will justly excite the admiration of all visitors. Call! It will pay as well as please you to see.

GOUGH, the Wonderful Cheap Man, Peterborough.

N.B.—Be sure of the place, four life-size signs on front of building. Look up for them.

NEWS NOTES.

Seeding operations are progressing rapidly in Southern Manitoba.

Canon Wilberforce will leave England on the 14th prox. for New York.

The Bank of England has reduced its rate of discount from 3½ to 3 per cent.

An enquiry will be shortly made in the House of Commons as to the cost of the horses purchased in Canada for the English army, taking losses into account.

Chicago vessel owners are almost crazy over the revival of the lake carrying trade and the advance in freights. The outlook for next season was never more flattering.

The traffic receipts of the Canadian Pacific railway for the week ending March 21st were $134,000, an increase of $5,000 compared with the corresponding week last year.

The traffic receipts of the Grand Trunk for the week ending March 19th were $360,782, an increase of $49,189 compared with the corresponding week last year.

Hon. Mr. Foster, as a result of his visit to the Pacific coast last year, has perfected a scheme for considerable permanent improvements to navigation in Canadian waters in that quarter, which will be carried into effect during the coming season.

The advisability of using the Canadian Pacific railway as a link in a direct postal route to the East, by which a great saving in time would be effected, is understood to be under consideration by the Imperial authorities, with every prospect of favourable decision.

The Queen at Birmingham.

New York, March 25.—The Tribune's cable special says:—"One prolonged popular demonstration from all classes seems to be an accurate account of the Queen's visit to Birmingham. All the ceremonies were duly transacted, and Birmingham, long supposed to be the most radical, proved itself to be among the most loyal of the English cities. Mr. Chamberlain became the hero of the occasion, the Queen sending for him while on the platform of the town hall, and talking with him for some time amid the awed silence of his fellow-citizens."

The Coronet Sighted.

Boston, March 25.—The steamer Kansas, which arrived from Liverpool to-day, reports that on March 19, in lat. 43.39, N. long 43.16 W., 1380 miles off Sandy Hook, she signalled an American yacht, which as near as could be discovered, showed the letters "R. D. J. B.," bound east. The vessel signalled is, without doubt the yacht Coronet, whose letters are "K. D. G. B.," which may have been mistaken for the letters given by the Kansas. The yacht was making good speed, with a strong westerly wind

"Of earthly goods, the best is a good wife;
A bad, the bitterest curse of earthly life."

How many wives who to-day are almost distracted because of their many ailments, all tending to make home unhappy, would become the best of all earthly goods if they got rid of their troubles by using Dr. Pierce's "Favorite Prescription," which is an unfailing remedy for those diseases and weaknesses which afflict the female sex. Send ten cents in stamps for Dr. Pierce's complete treatise on these diseases, illustrated by numerous wood-cuts and colored plates. Address, World's Dispensary Medical Association, Buffalo, N. Y.

SHIRLEY CARSTONE

By ELIZA ARCHARD.

Copyrighted by American Press Association.

It was too true. The signs of the eye was all gone but the faintest glimmering of a gray like twilight. He was unable to distinguish one object from another with that eye. Other signs of failing powers followed. His memory had been clear and powerful. Now he lost recollection of important matters. Images of people and events became confused in his brain. He forgot sometimes the names of his children, and called one by the name of another. A pain in his head troubled him.

With a sinking heart the faithful daughter watched these signs. It was unutterably sad to see such symptoms of decay in this man of princely heart and brain. At last the girl observed that her father could not speak certain words distinctly any more. His articulation was thick and difficult, like that of a drunken man. But this was not the worst. Others, outside of the stone house, began to notice the change, too, and to talk of it. Pre long the everlasting Mis' Simpkins tackled black Sam in the village. Said she:

"It's beginnin' to be whimpered about among folks hyer in town that Col. Carstone is losin' of his mind."

"What in thunder you talkin' about?" replied Sam, with an indignant air. He had heard Col. Carstone say that and thought it sounded high toned.

That there might be no possibility of misunderstanding, Mis' Simpkins came out flat footed with the question:

"Boss goin' crazy, ain't he?"

Sam flared up mightily. The honor of the Carstone family hung upon him. He felt the responsibility of the occasion. He answered:

"Goramitey, Mis' Simpkins! Linwood people's a pack o' po' white trash, da'ts what dey ar'. Folks what's got plenty brains don't go crazy. It don't run in der families. It's only yer po' trash dat loses der mins, an' dey lose 'em huntin' arter other people's business. I spects to hyar dat all Linwood's moved into de loonattic asylum befo' long. Yah! yah!" With a twinkle of white teeth, and a bobbing of gray head, Sam turned his back on Linwood.

murmuring ever more to her own soul, "Such thoughts I will think too." Did she hear of great and noble deed, her heart throbbed quicker and her eyes grew dewy with sympathy, and she unconsciously said, "Such deeds I, too, will do when the time comes."

Nay, she went a step farther, pondering as she did still the old question she had asked her papa in childhood, "Has a girl as much sense as a boy? She answered it to herself as she grew older, saying with the deep, wise conclusion of unspoiled girlhood, "What strong, heroic men have done, strong, heroic women can do.

She had said she would be wise and steadfast when the time came that demanded strength and wisdom. Was the time ripe? She had dreamed of shining occasion for heroism. Was it to come now in this sorrowful, wholly unlooked for way? Above all, and after all her dreams, was it in such pour, commonplace guise that her occasion presented itself at last? That was the most disheartening of anything. All who are young, aspiring and human must have felt the same. She did not doubt her own powers. She had the faith in herself that comes of a consciousness of strength. It was not vanity. It was something very different. The two wisest men she knew had had infinite faith in her, and had infinite belief in the strength of a good woman. They were her father and her teacher. In these days of trial her mind ran continually on that beloved teacher, the things he had told her, the brave, sweet wisdom he had spoken.

Out of the beautiful past his voice said to her now:

"Reconcile yourself to the inevitable.

"A really great soul is great also in little things. If it is not to be our lot to fill grand requirements, we may at least fill small requirements in a grand way. If ever there comes a clashing of forces in your mind, Shirley, so that you cannot seem to know what is best, remember this: Do the duty that lies nearest you. That will surely lead you into the light. And never lose courage—never give up!"

The sorrowful winter crept by with leaden feet. It required all Shirley's time and faculties to get the tangled thread of the Carstone fortunes straightened out. A new trouble faced her, one that she had least of all expected. Her mother gradually sank into a confirmed invalid. It was worse than that. It was about as bad as it could be, in fact. She became a hypochondriac. Shirley's mother was not one of the Carstone sort. She was of the million and one members of the female sex who are put in to fill up, of whom we say she is a good, sweet woman, and dismiss them. She was one of the amiable creatures for whose ladylike ailments the doctors prescribe goat's whey and gentle exercise. Their ailments are always ladylike. In brief, she was one of the women who stay where they are put. They are amiable. Yes. But how very uninteresting. During her husband's lifetime, his strong character and high spirits had borne Mrs. Carstone beyond herself. Like the moon, she had shone by reflected light. Doubtless that is quite the proper thing for wives to do. But it is rather inconvenient when the light is withdrawn. Then they are merely a dark body in the way.

Her husband dead, she sank to her level. His death and the manner of it were a frightful shock to her. A strong character would have rallied. She never tried to do so, but simply hung upon Shirley in a querulous way. She weighted Shirley down and irritated her at the same time.

She was fair to see, this pretty invalid mamma.

"Land sake," said little Mis' Simpkins, "she don't look no older than Shirley, layin' around there on sofy's in her whits cashmere gowns trimmed with blue silk that has to be ripped off every time the gown is washed. Her skin is as soft and white as a baby's, that it is! and them red cheeks of hern is the picture of health. She ain't no more sick nor I am. She's as fat as a hen on a corn pile. She could get right up off'n that there sofy and go and do a churnin' this minit, or I'm a liar! But there she lays, and it's Shirley this and Shirley that and Shirley 'tother, 'till you'd think her tongue'd wear out."

Mutilation of Trade Dollars.

There will be considerable delay in the redemption and payment of these dollars, and those who thought that all they would have to do was to go and get their money will be sadly disappointed, and it may be a long time before they are waited upon. The capacity for counting the dollars is only $100,000 per day. They have to be received, counted, and, if found correct, then certified to and paid. Hence the delay. But a new and big cause for alarm among holders of the trade dollar has arisen. It is that nearly all the trade dollars coming back from China are mutilated or "clipped," and these are only bought as bullion and not redeemed for $1. The Chinese had a habit, and it has proved a bad one, of "clipping," or marking with some of their outlandish characters each dollar that came into their possession.

These marks told of the character of silver and weight in each coin. Thousands of the dollars have as many as six or eight different Chinese stamps, or "clips," on them. All thus mutilated are no good, except as bullion. Now, as the trade dollar was coined for the Chinese, it is probable that a large majority of the coin is thus mutilated, and that is what makes the count at the assay offices so slow. Another scheme of mutilation was the disfiguring of the Goddess of Liberty on the face of the dollar. On some of the coins sent to the treasury here, the poor goddess has been almost denuded of her flowing robes, and placed in awkward positions.

A large number of samples have been sent to Secretary Fairchild and Treasurer Jordan, and the artistic sketches are remarkable. Treasurer Jordan has a large number of coins mutilated by the Chinese. All coins in the least mutilated, scratched, or punctured are refused, and only accepted as bullion. This decision has alarmed some of the speculators north, who went in heavy and purchased millions of dollars' worth of the trade dollars all the way from 85 to 97 cents, and they are anxious now to close out their lots at 90½, preferring to lose the half cent now than lose more when the coin is examined and found mutilated, for advices received here are that many of the millions to be redeemed are in such a condition that they will only be purchased as bullion.—Baltimore American.

Hundreds of Buffalo Skeletons.

Between the Little Dry and Big Dry we saw what has become of the millions of buffaloes. Hundreds of carcasses lay scattered over the prairie in every direction. They lay thickly along both sides of the road, and the bad lands were full of them. After passing the Red buttes, on the way up, we were hardly ever out of sight of a bleaching skeleton, and sometimes a score were in sight at one time. Once I counted seventeen lying grouped together in a space of not over two acres in extent. It was a mournful sight. Although these buffaloes were killed only four years ago or less, the powerful effect of the dry winds and intense heat of summer have literally stripped the flesh from the bones and left the whole skeletons lying just as they fell, bleached as white as snow on the upper side and very often with nearly every bone in its place. The skinners had left the heads of the bulls unskinned and the thick hide had dried down upon the skulls as hard as horn, holding the tangled masses of the shaggy frontlet firmly in place until it bleached brown in the sunshine and finally was worn away by wind and weather. A little later we picked up eight just such skeletons as the above, absolutely complete and with not three pounds of dried meat remaining on any one of them. The bleaching power of Montana weather is perfectly marvelous.

As we traveled back to Miles City in December we gathered up fifty-one perfect skulls of old bull and cow buffaloes to store up for the museums of the world that will beg for them a little later when the buffaloes are all dead and the bone gatherers have gathered in and crushed the last bone to be found on the buffalo ranges. And I tell you it afforded me solid comfort to have it in my power to lay in such a goodly store before it was too late. For forty miles north of Miles City the buffalo bones have already been gathered up clean!—William T. Hornaday in New York Sun.

A Composite City Indeed.

New York claims 350,000 German residents and ranks the second German city of the world, Berlin being the first. What nationality is New York? One is tempted to digress and ask the question. Everybody knows it is the principal Irish city in the world. There are a good many people living in young Italy, and on Sunday night about 9 o'clock, if you stand on Twenty-fourth street, near Delmonico's, you will believe you are in Paris, because every passer by is talking French. If a picture of a representative Gothamite were called for it would have to be a "composite" picture, and one would have to awaken to the fact that although there is a true Bostonian there is no true New Yorker, or, rather, that there are eleven of them. Irishman, German, Frenchman, Pole and other foreigners, as well as half a dozen of American types, would have to sit for the picture of the true New Yorker, each individual influencing the others and being influenced by all of them, with a result as interesting as uncanny. It is possible to take a composite picture, and such a picture as the one imagined above ought to be taken to give a clear idea of the future cosmopolite.—Chicago Times.

A Nursemaid's New Attire.

Here is an accurate picture of—whom do you suppose? A Fifth avenue nursemaid. Where is her white cap? She doesn't wear any. And her apron? That is gone, too. How, then, is she to be distinguished from pretty girls who are not servile? By means of her wide white linen collars and cuffs. The fashionable matron concerns herself acutely about the costuming of the household servants. Just the same as in clothing herself, she seeks to keep different and ahead of the multitude.

White caps and aprons on children's nurses have become common. Therefore the swell mother sends her offspring out for an airing with a newly dressed servitor. This young person is clad plainly but neatly. Her bonnet is stylish, her bodice is fitted like a glove, her skirts are gracefully draped, and her feet are in French heeled gaiters; but conspicuous badges of her menial calling are a dead white collar and equally clean but glossless cuffs. These impart the desired singularity, and at the same time are new.—New York Cor. Cincinnati Enquirer.

Dying to Slow Music.

Why is it that death scenes are so artificially managed on the stage nowadays, particularly when is taken into consideration the realism that actors and scene painters endeavor to throw into their performances? A noted actress is playing Meg Merrilles at the opera house. In the last act the witch is shot and dies to slow music. A group of personages stand near her in a picturesque tableau, but no one offers to staunch the wound, no one tenders a stimulant; they simply stand in striking poses and watch her die. In real life some one would have sent for a doctor, a comfortable resting place would have been made for the sufferer, and an effort would have been made to ease the last moments of the dying one.—Philadelphia Bulletin.

To all who Buy Seeds.

"As ye sow so shall ye reap" is a truism worthy of consideration by all who are seeking for success in Garden or Farm operations. It is evident to every thoughtful mind that Choice Flowers, Fine Vegetables and Grain, cannot be produced by sowing a poor grade of Seed. With this object in view, I have been careful in selecting my Seeds for this season's operations. I make it a point to test the vitality of my Seeds before selling them to my customers, so that the disappointment of Seed not growing is greatly lessened. My stock will be found large and choice. Trusting to be favoured with an extensive patronage this season in my new establishment, Floral Drug Store, corner of George and Charlotte streets, opposite the market.

THE CITY AND SUBURBS

A Syrian's Visit.

Mr. Ghosn Al Howie, a native of Mount Lebanon, will visit Peterborough shortly in connection with the Young Men's Christian Association.

FINE shell cordovan shoes at Kidd's new store for $4.00 per pair. Hand made.

Imported Stallion.

W. M. Fair of Peterborough has purchased the far famed horse imported "Kentucky." Kentucky and his stock have taken more prizes than any other horse in Ontario in the carriage class.

BUTCHER'S linen for aprons now to be found at TURNBULL'S.

A Thorough Treat.

Next Friday evening the people of Peterborough will have the privilege of hearing one of the most eminent of the Bishops of the Methodist Episcopal Church in the United States. Bishop H. W. Warren is secured to lecture in the George Street Church on "The Forces in a Sunbeam." Any person at all acquainted with the splendid abilities of Bishop Warren, with such a theme to handle, will anticipate a brilliant effort, and will not be disappointed. The admission fee will be 25 cents.

I WILL not be undersold by anyone. See if I will! R. J. KIDD.

Mission Work Among N. W. Indians.

The Rev. J. Gough Buck of Dunvegan, Diocese of Athabasca, North West Territories, will preach a sermon in St. Luke's Church, Ashburnham, on Sunday morning next, the 27th instant, at 11 o'clock. The revernd gentleman has had a varied experience in mission work among the Indians and an interesting discourse may be expected. Mr. Buck will also speak on Northwest missions in St. Luke's School Room on Monday, the 28th instant, at 8. p. m.

GRASS linens, table linens, table napkins, linen handkerchiefs, etc., fresh from the loom in Belfast, Ireland, now opened out at TURNBULL'S. Grand value. See them.

The Second Week.

The Rev. J. Judd White and Mr. W. W. Buchanan, Dominion Councillor Royal Templars of Templars, begin the second week of the temperance revival in the Opera House this evening. The meeting will be open to all, ladies and gentlemen. The Rev. Mr. Tovell will occupy the chair and a local choir will assist Mr. White in the singing. An interesting meeting is expected and all are invited to be present. The meetings during the remainder of the week will be held as follows (paste this in your hat)—Sunday (to-morrow) afternoon at 4 o'clock in the Opera House; Monday evening in St. Andrew's Church; Tuesday evening in Charlotte Street Church; Wednesday evening in Auburn Church; Thursday evening in St. Paul's Church, and Friday evening in the George Street Methodist Church.

Go to Kidd's new store and get a pair of boots that WILL fit your feet.

The Hamilton Helpers.

The Hamilton Helpers held their last meeting in St. Paul's Church on Friday evening. The school room, which is capable of seating five or six hundred people, had been prepared, but at half-past seven it was so filled that the church was opened. At eight o'clock there were about eight hundred people present. The Rev. Mr. Torrance, the chairman, in opening the meeting, said that they were suffering from the effects of unbelief. They did not believe that so many would be present. The church was cold and would be for a time, and he would recommend the people to follow his example in keeping their overcoats on until the steam was up. A number of hymns, and duets by Messrs. Stead and Dunnett, followed. Mr. Hebdon spoke for some time of the temperance work, giving a history of temperance societies. He said that the first society formed about one hundred years ago, was a kind of half and half affair. The pledge taken was something like this "I promise not to touch, taste or handle intoxicating drink except on the 4th of July and Thanksgiving day." He went on to describe the incoming of teetotal societies, Sons of Temperance, Good Templars, Royal Templars, and the W. C. T. U. A solo by Mr. Stead "Rocked in the cradle of the deep" was given in an impressive manner. Mr. Stead has a magnificent bass voice which he knows well how to use. Other duets and solos followed and the meeting closed in the usual way. The Rev. J. Judd White and Mr. W. W. Buchanan will conduct the meeting in the Opera House this evening.

A CHOICE assortment of Scotch and Canadian tweeds, worsteds and West of England pantings to choose from at TURNBULL'S. Remember there is a first-class tailor always on the premises to execute work promptly.

His Jubilee.

Lieut.-Col. Boulton, of the Prince of Wales Canadian Dragoons, Cobourg, has seen fifty years service in the militia. He joined the Canadian militia in 1837 and went to the front as captain of a company of infantry. Afterwards he was transferred to the cavalry, taking command of the old Cobourg troop. In 1857 he was made Lieut.-Colonel and later had the troop gazetted as now named. Though he is over 70 years of age he rides a horse as well as any of his troopers. Lieut.-Col. Boulton is the father of Major Boulton, formerly of Lakefield.

You might get calf boots from a calf; but where would you go for kidd boots but to KIDD'S?

Excitement.

The curlers, usually so calm and reflective, are growing wilder with excitement as the days get fewer on which they can ply the besom and stane. On Friday afternoon, "oysters," the usual material held up to induce the men to do their level best, was not enough so a barrel of flour was chosen, the loser to hand it over to the Protestant Home. The rinks were both strong and each point was very closely contested. The result was as follows:—

J D Baptie	E Brown
R Walker	W G Ferguson
T Rutherford	C McGill
Adam Hall, skip ...17	A McNeil, skip,...18

McNeil wins by one.

The C. M. B. A.

Mr. J. O'Meara, President of St. Peter's Branch, No. 30, Peterborough, of the Catholic Mutual Benefit Association, has received a communication from His Lordship Bishop Dowling, that he approves of the objects of the Association and authorizing the use of his name to promote its advancement. The C. M. B. A. has now received the approval of the Archbishops and all the Bishops of Canada, as well as those of the United States, and doubtless its increase in Canada will be commensurate with its spread in the United States, where it numbers upwards of 15,000 members. The present membership in Canada is 2,500. The Society is thoroughly Catholic, submissive to the decree and regulations, and under the guidance and control of the Church. Widows and orphans of deceased members are paid $2,000 out of the Society's funds within three months after the death of the husband or father. Full particulars regarding the establishment of new branches, or applications for membership can be obtained from Mr. O Meara or Dr. Brennan, Peterborough.

ON and after Friday, 25th, we can suit any one in boots, shoes or slippers. R. J. KIDD.

Celebrations.

This summer will be a lively one in Peterborough so far as "big days" are concerned. On the second Wednesday in June the Bay of Quinte Conference commences session in the George Street Methodist Church. The session will last for a week and it will be attended by two hundred and fifty delegates. The Queen's jubilee will be another, though no arrangements have been completed for the celebration as yet. On July 12th there will be a great Orange demonstration in which the Orangemen from Peterborough, Northumberland, Durham, Hastings and Victoria will take part. Towards the end of July or the beginning of August the A. C. A. meet takes place at Stoney Lake. On August 8th the first delegates to the Oddfellows Grand Lodge annual greeting will arrive, on Tuesday the various detachments of the Canton Militant will get in. On Wednesday, civic holiday, one the most brilliant street pageants ever seen in this country will take place when the grand parade takes place. The Peterborough Central Exhibition will be held on October 4th, 5th, 6th and 7th.

POLICE COURT.

DRUNK.

SATURDAY, March 26.—Lewis Moutroy, who was arrested on Friday afternoon on Hunter street by P. C's. Pidgeon and McGinity, was charged by P. C. Pidgeon this morning with being drunk. He pleaded guilty and was fined $2 and costs.

DAKOTA FLOODS.

A Family Living in the Tree Tops—Three Persons Drowned.

BISMARCK, Dak., March 25.—It was learned last night that D. M. Kennedy, his wife and three children are held on Sable Line by the flood, and for six days have been living on such food as they saved from the water. There is no hope of rescuing them until the floods subsides, and their friends are distracted. They can be seen through field glasses, occupying a nest built in limbs of trees over three miles from shore.

ST. PAUL, March 25.—A Bowdle, D. T., special says:—Jacob McCarty, Mr. Kirkland, and three others were drowned in the bottoms south of LeGrace. If the was rises two feet higher, both LeGrace and Scranton will be submerged.

A Fatal Fire Caused by Drunkenness.

BESSEMER, Mich., March 25.—The charred bodies of the twelve men who perished by the burning of the Colby mine boarding house were interred ye-terday. At the inquest it was developed that two drunken boarders came in after midnight and occupied the first part of the building where the fire evidently started.

TURNBULL'S dress goods counter and shelves are now filled with new good in every conceiveable shade, with trimmings to match. His prices are the lowest and styless the best. Look through and be convinced.

McDowall's Majority.

WINNIPEG, March 25.—All polling places in Saskatchewan have been heard from and McDowall's majority is 161.

LATEST WIRE FLASHES

ENGLAND AND ITALY.

LONDON, March 25.—Lord Rosebery has had a long interview with Count de Robilant Italian minister for foreign affairs, at Rome. It is believed the principal topic discussed was the relations between England and Italy.

STANLEY REACHES THE CONGO.

LAREN, March 25.—Henry M. Stanley arrived at the mouth of the Congo River on March 18. The expedition was expected to to reach Matude by March 21.

FATHER KELLER DEFIATN.

DUBLIN, March 25.—Father Keller writes that he does not regret the loss of liberty in view of the reason for which his imprisonment was ordered. He says:—"If kept in jaol until I die, I will never do the infamous thing the judge asked me to do—betray the confidence of the defenceless and loving people who trust me."

THE NEW UNDER SECRETARY.

LONDON, March 25.—The new Under Secretary for Ireland, General Sankey, is, if not a dragoon officer, which Mr. Balfour was supposed to prefer, a distinguished engineer, who comman ied an engineer corps during the Afghan war. He is discribed by Anglo-Irish organs as a typical Anglo-Indian with strong notions about governing subject races.

ANOTHER AMENDMENT.

LONDON, March 25.—The resolution to grant urgency for the Crimes bill was agreed to, and the first reading of the Bill was fixed for Monday. Mr. Parnell gave notice that he would oppose the motion for leave to introduce the bill by offering an amendment that the House resolve itself immediately into a committee to consider the state of Ireland.

ARRESTS IN RUSSIA.

ST PETERSBURG, March 25.—Forty officers have been arrested at Odessa for being connected with revolutionary societies.

TO BE IN READINESS.

ODESSA, March 25.—The fifteenth army division of 18,000 men has been ordered to hold itself in instant readiness either for marching or embarking.

ASSAILING GERMANY.

ST. PETERSBURG, March 25.—M. Katkoff, in the Moscow Gazette, despite the protest of the Official Gazette, resumes his attack upon the German Government. He declares that the German representatives in Bulgaria are responsible for the failure to prevent the military executions, and assail the German press for approving of the executions.

FEARS OF WAR REVIVED.

BERLIN, March 25.—The tone of the North German Gazette, combined with Prince Bismarck's allusion in his speech in the Landtag on Wednesday to the dangers that are still menacing Germany's national existence, revives the fear of war. A feeling of uneasiness was visible on the bourse yesterday, there being a general reaction in international securities. Prince Bismarck's exact words, in referring to a policy to satisfy the Catholics, were:—"We must aim to consolidate the unity of the entire German nation in view of the dangers to which it will be exposed at no distant time." This remark has been variously interpreted as a general reference to contingencies of the future or as a special warning. The situation is still grave.

IN QUEST OF A LOVER.

Why Two Young Girls Went West in Male Attire.

ST. PAUL, Minn., March 25.—The two young girls from Rochester, N. Y., recently discovered in male attire at Windom, Minn., have been brought here and taken in charge by the Relief Society. The younger one makes the following statement:—

"My name is Lilly Davey, and hers is Katie, my sister, and our home is in Rochester, N.Y. We left there some time ago to go to Calgary, Northwest Territory. Before we left we cut our hair and dressed in male attire, in order, as we thought, to insure safety to our persons while travelling. We did not have much money so we concluded we must endure more or less hardship. The reason that we left home is that I am engaged to be married to William Albert Arthur Byers of Calgary. He came to my home for me about one year ago, and as the train was pulling out I dropped my kid glove, and while I was obtaining it I missed the train. Mr. Byers was in the smoking car and did not miss me until he had gone some distance. I got on board the next train, but I was on the wrong road, and I was further away than ever. I returned to my home from Hamilton, where I landed on my first trip, and remained there. Shortly afterwards I was forwarded $30 by Mr. Byers for my transportation, but mother would not let me go alone. She took the money from me. My father is worthless, and I thought if I married Mr. Byers I could provide a home for mother and the family."

The officers of the Relief Society think the girl's story is true. They have telegraphed to Byers, who is proprietor of a restaurant at Calgary, that if he is desirous of marrying the girl, he must have the nuptial knot tied in St. Paul.

ENNISMORE.

COLD.—At sunrise this (Saturday) morning the theromometer registered two deg. above zero.

LOOKS LIKE IT.

Mr. Mercier now proposes to treat us to a first-class exhibition of provincial Toryism. Which is also, let us add, an outrageous attack on public and popular and national rights. Quebec has a debt of some twentyone million dollars, and Mr. Mercier wants to make the Dominion pay it, or the most of it. Our Liberal Premier of Ontario, Mr. Mowat, may be all right in this matter: but it looks as if he were going to aid Mr Mercier in his scheme of plunder.—Toronto World (Indep.)

Enjoy Life.

What a truly beautiful world we life in! Nature gives us grandeur of mountains, glens and oceans, and thousands of means of enjoyment. We can desire no better when in perfect health, but how often do the majority of people feel like giving it up disheartened, discouraged and worn out with disease, when there is no occasion for this feeling, as every sufferer can easily obtain satisfactory proof, that Green's August Flower, will make them free from disease, as when born. Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint are the direct causes of seventy-five per cent. of such maladies as Biliousness, Indigestion, Sick Headache, Costiveness, Nervous Prostration, Dizziness of the Head, Palpitation of the Heart, and other distressing symptoms. Three doses of August Flower will prove its wonderful effect. Sample bottles, 10 cents. Try it. d90

TRENT VALLEY CANAL.

To the Editor of the Review.

DEAR SIR—The following article clipped from the New York Herald may well be quoted by those in favour of having the Trent Valley Canal built. For the past six years I have used what little influence I have with members of Parliament representing constituences along the route of this Canal to urge upon the Government the advisability of assuming this work and guaranteeing its early completion. Many influential persons in this section have either been lukewarm, or refused their influence, arguing that Canals are out of date, and that railroads have destroyed their usefulness. The comparisons given by the New York Herald as to the quantity of wheat carried by the Erie canal and by the railways to New York during the past four years ought, I think, convince the most sceptical.

Yours truly,
R. C. STRICKLAND.

A bill is pending in the New York Legislature for an appropriation to continue the improvement of the canals. That bill last Tuesday passed the Senate. The Assembly Committee, to which it was referred, reported the bill on Thursday with a strong recommendation for its passage, and it was thereafter by a large majority made a special order for to-morrow. It is not needful to point out the vast service that has long been performed by these artificial conduits in the development of the state. This is well known to all. The practical business of the presen is what concerns us, and this may rightly be measured without reference to any other considerations.

During the seven months of navigation included in the year 1886 the canals brought to New York city 43,619,355 bushels of grain against 14,986,766 brought by rail.

During three years past the canals have brought 110,550,458 bushels against 92,440,154 bushels brought by rail. In the year 1886 the canals brought 14,068,976 bushels more to New York than they did in 1885, and the railroads brought 6,362,788 bushels less than they did in 1885.

Again, during 1886 the receipts of grain at New York by Canal far exceeded the aggregate receipts of Philadelphia and Boston for the whole year. These figures speak for themselves. They show the enormous value of the canals to our city as well as to our state, and consequently the importance of keeping them by all feasible means in a condition of efficiency.

It should be always kept in view that the increase of the railroads, whether in mileage, speed or rolling stock, has by no means made the canals obsolete or superfluous. The foregoing statistics, the very latest in hand, make this plain enough. With anything like commensurate improvement the canals, we may be sure, will keep up their ratio of increase.

The Legislature should help the canals, for the canals have always helped the state, and always will as long as they have fair play.—N. Y. Herald.

NEWS NOTES.

Mayor Harrison, of Chicago, has positively declined a re-nomination.

The Czar proposes to visit Don Cossack country, which is suffering from famine.

Mr. R. Truax, of Walkerton, was nominated on Friday as the Reform candidate to contest East Bruce against Mr. Cargill.

It is reported that the snow has entirely disappeared throughout the North-West Territories and the rivers are commencing to move.

Mr. Jacob Kahn, of New York, died on Friday from injuries received at the Richmond hotel fire in Buffalo, making the fourteenth known victim.

The Government of Holland has introduced a bill to prolong, by one year, the term of the military and naval militia, in view of extensive European armaments.

Bradstreet's reports a total of 304 failures through the country during the past week, against 231 for the week previous. Twenty-three of the number were in Canada, eight less than the preceding week.

A special cablegram to The Mail says the annual meeting of the Manitoba Mortgage Investment Company was held in London on Friday. The report was satisfactory, and a dividend of eight per cent. was declared. To increase the sphere of operations of the Company, it was proposed to increase the capital by 25,000 preference shares of £10 each.

A CRITICAL SITUATION.

Russia Endeavoring to Raise a Rebellion in Afghanistan.

NEW YORK, March 26.—The Star's London special says: The Ghilzais, acting as reported, by the advice of native officers in the Russian army, are raising a rebellion in Musjid. General Roberts has gone to Musjid, the advanced British position on the north-west frontier, to organize British forces and defences. News is received from India, not yet confirmed, that the Ameer of Afghanistan has suddenly been stricken down with illness, supposed to be fever, the result of incessant exertions, exposure and worry. The situation in Afghanistan is said to be growing critical. Partizans have for some time been quarreling over the successorship. At British headquarters it is considered all-important that the question of a successor should soon be decided in favor of a Prince pledged to an English alliance and hostile to Russia. The triumph of the Russian party at Cabul would probably lead to almost immediate hostilities between England and Afghanistan, the latter supported by Russia with men and arms. Unofficial advices received at the Indian office to-day state that the Government have undoubted evidence of native chiefs that the Russian Governor of Turkestan is bribing the head men of the tribes throughout the north of Afghanistan. The work is done through native officers of Turkestan, who have entered the Russian service. The chief report is that the Governor has secured a number of notables and that these are organizing an extensive plot for a simultaneous rising in Afghanistan and the Punjaub.

HEAVY FAILURE.

Suspension of a Large Lumbering Firm in St. John.

ST. JOHN, N.B., March 26.—The commercial community received another severe shock yesterday by the assignment of Geo. McLeod, ex-M P. for Restigouche, and one of New Brunswick's largest lumber operators. Mr. McLeod's failure was not unexpected. No statement of liabilities or assets can be obtained, and no one appears to know who are the heavy creditors. The official reason for the failure is the suspension of T. C. Jones & Co., of Liverpool, which firm held all Mr. McLeod's freight moneys, and large sums of his, also to accruing liabilities. The suspension of Mr. McLeod will be a heavy blow to St. John, where he employed a large number of laborers on his vessels. His lumber operations were chiefly on the North Shore, which will suffer heavily.

Messrs. Weldon, McLean & Devlin, solicitors for the People's Bank of New Brunswick, have obtained an injunction from Judge Palmer, prohibiting the New Brunswick Trading Company of London from conveying to any person the real estate lands and premises described in certain deeds from one John Stewart to them executed upon the 8th inst., and recorded on the 9th in the county of Glouchester; also prohibiting the same company from disposing or removing any of the property described in a certain bill of sale dated Aug. 7, 1884, from Bobert and John Steward to the People's Bank, and registered March 10, 1887.

A RAILWAY WRECK.

Two Canadian Pacific Freight Trains Meet Near Smith's Falls.

OTTAWA, March 26.—A disastrous collision occurred this morning on the Canadian Pacific railway between Carleton Place and Smith's Falls. Two heavy freight trains collided with tremendous force, making a terrible wreck. The freight train going west left Carleton Place with orders to cross an east-bound train at Smith's Falls, but when near Franktown the engineer of the west-bound train saw the other approaching at tremendous speed and was barely able to jump for his life. Both locomotives and sixteen cars got off the track an were badly wrecked. All the freight cars were heavily laden, several containing cattle. Engineer Muidoon was badly, but not, it is believed, fatally hurt. A passenger on the Toronto train, who arrived in the city this afternoon, says:—We passed Smith's Falls station without any warning this morning about daylight, and when about two miles and a half east of the station our engine driver saw the light of burning cars about half a mile ahead. He immediately shut off steam and stopped the train. In company with several others I started to walk down the line to the scene of the accident. Here a terrible wreck met our view. The two freight trains, one with twelve and the other with ten cars, lay in one tremendous heap of ruins. The freight, including grain and other small stuff, lay scattered about two and three feet deep, the bags having burst. The two engines were locked in one another's grasp and the tenders were heaped on top of them. Many of the cars were telescoped and several were thrown from the track and burned." The wreck was certainly one of the worst and most extensive that has occurred on the C. P. R. this season. The two engines came together with tremendous force, and both trains were heaped upon one another in the space of a second. The flying freight smashed the telegraph wires, thus preventing communication being received at Ottawa from Smith's Falls. Passengers on the Toronto train were taken across the place where the wrecked train lay and were then brought to Ottawa on another train. The wrecking hands cannot possibly clear the line before to-morrow at noon.

A WOULD-BE ASSASSIN.

Daring Attempt to Rob a Bank Agency in Halifax—The Manager Shot.

HALIFAX, March 26.—A daring but unsuccessful attempt was made here to-day to rob the agency of the Merchant's Bank. During the forenoon a young man entered the bank and asked for some information about transferring money by telegraph to the United States. He then went out, and returning about half-past twelve asked Mr. W. S. Currie, who was in charge of the bank at the time, if he could speak to him privately. He was admitted to the private office, and, closing the door behind him, he pulled out a small pistol and fired at Currie, the bullet entering his forehead pretty high up. Currie then grappled with his opponent, and, during the scuffle, received a shot from a revolver in the side. The messenger boy, hearing a call from Currie, opened the door, and seeing a pistol pointed at him he ran into Kirk's store for assistance. Four men readily responded to the call, and entering the bank found Currie in a death-struggle with his would-be murderer, in whose hand was a cocked revolver, which he was trying to use. When arrested he said he was hard up for money and was bound to have it. He said his name was Adams, and that he came from the States. He wore a belt with fifty cartridges in it, and seemed to be prepared for any work, no matter how diabolical. Sufficient information has been received this afternoon from other parts to prove that Adams' correct name is Stanley Steele, and that he belongs to Manchester, Guysboro. Medical aid was summoned for Mr. Currie and the bullet was removed from the skull. The wounds are not serious. A preliminary examination will be held on Monday.

MYSTERIOUS TRAGEDY.

An Unknown Woman Found Murdered in Rahway, N. J.

RAHWAY, N. J., March 27.—An unknown young woman was found murdered yesterday morning in one of the side avenues of this city. Her throat was cut from ear to ear. The ground in the vicinity gave evidence of a hard struggle. A man, who may prove to be the murderer, has been arrested at New Brunswick, N. J., on suspicion. He is a burly tramp, who gave what is probably a fictitious name. Twelve tramps applied for lodging on Friday night at the New Brunswick police headquarters. This man, when he started to leave yesterday morning, appeared nervous, and it was discovered he had a blackened eye, that his face and clothes were muddy and that his coat was torn on the side as if some one had grasped it in their hands and pulled it. The man was detained on suspicion. He applied for lodgings shortly after 11 o'clock on Friday night.

The excitement over the murder is greater now than yesterday. Incoming trains to-day were loaded with persons who came to see the body. Large crowds gathered about the building where the body lay, and the mutilated remains were viewed by at least two thousand persons. This afternoon an unknown man visited the morgue and made statements tending to show he knew the murdered girl. He was afterward closeted with the chief of police and the mayor, both of whom refused to give any information. A well dressed woman in deep mourning, accompanied by a 14-year-old girl, viewed the body to-night and identified the clothing, but refused positively to give her name or residence.

FEARFUL SCENES.

Arrival of the Scotia's Passengers at Castle Garden.

PATCH OGUE, L.I., March 26.—All the Scotia's passengers were safely on shore by 2 o'clock p. m. The wind and sea have gone down, and the steamer is high and dry.

NEW YORK, March 27.—This afternoon 519 of the Italian passengers of the wrecked steamer Scotia arrived at Castle Garden. The scene that followed beggared description. They rushed into the rotunda pell mell, shrieking and howling for food like ravenous wolves. They crowded around the lunch tables, climbing over each other and trampling on the helpless women and children. Pandemonium reigned supreme for fully an hour. It is customary to register one by one all immigrants before they enter the rotunda, but the red trap was broken on this occasion by Superintendent Jackson. The force of the mass of people was so great that the officers who were stationed to keep order were swept aside like straws. Then the distribution of food began. The strong men crowded to the front with uplifted arms and eyes starting from their sockets, crying in Italian, "Bread, bread!" The surging mob was utterly uncontrollable. Women and children were trampled on, crowded and pushed away. The officers of the garden aided the distribution by throwing the loaves over the heads of the nearest to the outskirts of the crowd. Every time a loaf was thrown into the crowd 20 or more scrambled, and, in some cases, fought to get it. That dry bread was a luxury was evident from the way the starving people gorged themselves. In a short time all the food was gone, except some Bologna sausages. The women and children were cared for and milk and beer added to their portions. Outside the railing were 642 passengers from the Etruria, 852 from the Waesland and 660 from La Bretaque. Nearly 3,000 people in all were in the rotunda. The babel of tongues was frightful, as the immigrants were of all nationalities. The officials handled them well, keeping the Italians separate. The gates outside the Gardens were besieged with friends and relatives of the Scotia's passengers, and some affecting scenes were witnessed. The total number of passengers on the Scotia was 832, all of whom are now in the city.

The complaints of the unfortunate immigrants were most unfavorable to the company, and particularly to the captain of the Scotia. Two of them assert that the captain was drunk most of the time after the vessel left Italian shores. Others say they did not see him until the stormy weather came, and that they were half starved all through the voyage.

THE OPPOSITION LEADERSHIP.

THERE has been considerable discussion, in which we have not cared to take part, as to the leadership of the Dominion Opposition. It is a matter that more especially concerns the members of the Reform party, who no doubt feel themselves competent to choose their leader without advice from outside. To Conservatives, as a party, the choice is not of much consequence, for we have no reason to be afraid of Mr. Blake, and none of the minor lights among his followers would be more formidable. It is a change of policy, not a change of leaders, that the Reform party needs to give it a chance of success with the people of Canada.

As a matter of news we may briefly sum up the situation. Mr. Blake sent to his supporters not a mere formal resignation, but a positive refusal to serve again as leader, and a notification to choose another for the vacant position. This circular called forth a very general protest from the recipients and an urgent request that he would reconsider his determination. Mr. Blake appears at least to have promised reconsideration if not a reversal of his decision. It is, therefore, almost certain that Mr. Blake will again, at the opening of the session, be urged by his party to continue in the post of leader and will accept the position even if reluctantly.

We have said that the result of the choice is not of much consequence to the Conservatives as a party, nor is it under existing circumstances to the country at large. Under our system of government the Opposition, and therefore its leader more particularly, have very important duties. One of the foremost of these is to watch the legislation and administration of the Ministry, to protest against and check as far as possible any abuses or imperfections, while assisting in perfecting and passing necessary measures introduced by the Ministers. It is not to await the action of the Government on any point and then to take the opposite side—to seize every opportunity of thwarting and impeding the transaction of the business of the country so long as it gives its confidence to opponents. The other main function of the Opposition is, if it considers a wrong policy is being adopted on any important question, to formulate, clearly, though not necessarily in detail, the policy it considers preferable, and to lay it before the House and the people. The Reformers under Mr. Blake's leadership have had no such policy since they have seen defeated their old policy of employing foreign railways to give us access to our great North-west, and since their leader has grudgingly and partially acquiesced in the verdict of the people against their policy of employing foreign manufacturers to supply Canadian requirements. With Mr. Blake as leader the Reformers have no policy on the great questions of the day, and instead of aiding in the transaction of public business their only desire is to hamper it, opposing whatever the Government propose and proposing whatever the Government oppose, as in the notable case of their clamouring for Riel's death till he was executed and their clamouring for vengeance because of his execution. Bad as these tactics are for the country it seems, however, as if there would be little likelihood of improvement through superceding Mr. Blake as leader. Mr. Mackenzie is out of the question on account of the state of his health ever since the cruel blow of his deposition by his ungrateful party. Sir Richard Cartwright as a confirmed free trader and a "hangman" is also ineligible. Among the other Reform lieutenants it would be hard to find one who would form a less pettifoging idea of the duties of the leader of the Opposition, and several might be worse even than Mr. Blake.

The prospect is that Mr. Blake will continue to lead the Reform party, which under his guidance will continue as before to thwart without being able to prevent the measures designed to further the Conservative policy under which Canada is making such strides in advance.

We are informed on good authority, though at this distance we cannot personally verify the statement, that Dr. Montague had a majority in Haldimand either by the count of all the good ballots, or by restricting the count to those that were technically perfect and regular. The contention of Mr. Colter's friends appears to be that any irregularity should vitiate a vote for Dr. Montague and that similar irregularities should not operate against Mr. Colter.

AT the by-election at Haldimand last year, a Reformer adopted a favorite device of his party and falsely charged two Conservatives with bribery. When, as a matter of course, they were acquitted, he found hat he was called upon to pay their costs to the amount of about $400, besides his own costs. The Reformers of Haldimand will not easily find a victim the next time they are looking for an instrument to practice this favorite trick.

MR. MERCIER seems to be posing as a little Jeff Davis and Mr. Mowat as a small copperhead.

Sir Lestre Kaye is said to have succeeded in forming a company of English capitalists to carry out his scheme for erecting model farms and conducting extensive ranching operations in Manitoba and the North-West Territories.

BUTTERINE IN ENGLAND.

Legislation in Great Britain of Interest also to Canadian Farmers.

The following letter, addressed to the Observer, of Lancaster, England, deals with a subject that effects our farmers as well as those of the Old Country. The price of butter in Liverpool has fallen since Jan. 1 about thirty shillings for 112 lbs., equal to about 7 cents a lb., owing to the fraudulent butterine:—

SIR,—If allowed space in your valuable paper I should be obliged, as I am anxious to make some comments with respect to the deputation of butterine men who waited upon Baron Henry de Worms at the Board of Trade, Whitehall, on Thursday last. They seem to have gone most unblushingly to ask the Government's assistance in resisting the proposed legislation against butterine. First of all, we do not suppose that any of the parties then present sell it for anything else than butterine; but after it leaves their hands it becomes a tool in the hands of the unscrupulous, who sell it by hundreds of tons as butter. The reports come from all quarters of the country, London, Liverpool, Manchester, Leicester, and last week there was an account in the Evening World from Edinburgh. The writer says even in proud or sweet Edinburgh town "the public may not be aware of the fact that at present thousands of tons of butterine are sold in this town annually. I do not complain of the sale of such an article, but what I do complain of, and what must be evident to the most casual observer, is that this article is not sold as butterine, but as butter, pure butter; and in order to increase the deception, it is offered to the public in all conceivable shapes, i. e., Danish packages, Irish style of firkins and lumps, country butter rolls, and fresh prints."

I heard a young fellow bragging the other day that on the previous Saturday he had sold 17 packages, each containing 36 lbs., at 1s. per lb., which cost him 6d. This savours of the Jew's profit, cent. per cent. Another case was by a young practised hand, who said that with £100 to £150 capital and a fortnight's credit he could make £40 per week out of the "sham." These things are very useful in their way, as they will help to unearth the fraud. The Edinburgh correspondent further says:—"Here is a huge fraud daily committed with unblushing effrontery, and yet no steps are taken to check the same; while clandestine offences of a much less serious nature are eagerly hunted after and severely punished."

I will now make some observations upon the statements of the speakers of the deputation. It seems a Mr. Campbell introduced the deputation. He says they understood one the provisions of the Bill was that the name "Butterine" was to be changed to "Margerine" or "Oleomargerine," to which they had a strong objection (I quite believe him that their objection is VERY strong). May I ask why should they be allowed to tack on the good old honest name of BUTTER to ine, a name that has honestly represented a honest article ever since the days of our Saxon ancestors, or go back to Adam if you like. I mean to state, and every honest man will agree with me, that it could not have been possible to develop such a business except by such a fraudulent name. Lately we have heard a deal about peperette. Suppose you had called it butterette, that probably would have been too distinctive, and would not by such a term have been so easy to have thrown dust in the people's eyes.

Postively I would rather have been put in the pillory, and had my ears clipped, than have been an advocate in such a cause when I was perfectly aware that in every hole and corner of the United Kingdom, this gigantic swindle is being perpetrated daily by thousands. I hope it will take more than twelve years to educate the people to a new name for this vile deceptive trash. Why not have it sold for what it is, say hog's lard, chopped very fine before rendering, so that it will not taste, or if beef gripping, horse, or sewer grass, distilled and bleached, and then recloured up with butter clouring. Do you suppose that the British farmer is going to stand this any longer? Does the butterine maker in Holland pay the farmers taxes?

Let us look at the figures for a moment. It is stated that 103,957 cwt. was imported during the month of January, valued at £336,452. Multiply this by six for six months, you have £2,018,712. Do not ask anybody where your money is going, nor why you are poorer. Suppose you think again what it is actually sold for by retailers to consumers, I mean the bulk, not the exceptions. Suppose a cow at this season of the year is giving 5 pounds of butter per week, one with another, or 20 pounds per month, it would take 582,159 cows to produce the weight in butter; and again divide these cows into small farms of twelve cows each, and say two persons to carry on the small farms, a man and his wife, it would find employment for ninety-seven thousand and 36 people. Then come to consider their little ones dependent upon them (farmers' families are rather prolific), and I ask how many people's source of livelihood is to be taken away through no fault of theirs, that these chosen few butterine men may wallow in their wealth, whilst the Irishman's, Englishman's, Welshman's, and Scotchman's dairying interest must be ruined to serve their selfish purposes and ends. Some of these fellows would be as consistent in the pig-stye if the measure of their hearts were taken. Fancy the little farmers here and there and everywhere all over the country, who have been able to eke out a living by keeping a few cows, and there is no prospect because the Government allows this to go on unblushingly. County squires, what are you doing, warming your shins? Why are you not up and doing, and put your shoulder to the wheel? and not let your tenants' source of livelihood be taken from them in this un-English-like manner. It is your interest as well as theirs.

We shall certainly test this question some way with regard to the country representatives. We will take any rural district (a section) and see how many dissentient voice their are. It is the interest of Radical, Tory, and Liberal alike, and we will let Mr. Dixon see that we have no objection to its being used when sold in its own natural colour and cloths. We will not allow butter colouring to be used as a tool to enable the unprincipled to carry out his enormous swindle. What do you mean? Have you got no eye? If you ruin your country, your city will soon follow in the wake. In all new developing countries, the country is made first, then follow your towns and cities. They do not drop from the skies, but they are a steay growth concurrent with the development of the country. We read of ancient Carthage being overthrown. It is described as a city of merchants who paid men to fight for them, and whose army was dissolved as soon as the exchequer was exhausted, she could only fight to her last sovereign. Their strength dribbled out with their gold, and they were not able to negotiate a loan. Will the butterine men be able to negotiate a loan in the hour of our trial? Who will be able and willing to fight the battle? Why, the yeoman and farmers of the kingdom, men who have fought in the past and will in the future, provided the Government will give them fair play.

I should imagine the butterine men are about as soft as the article they sell, and I take this opportunity to warn them that there will be, by and bye, another deputation, and much stronger and a much more influential one, to see the head of the Board of Trade; but it may be essential, first of all, to see how the fray goes. If the town means ruining the dairy interests of the country, "we shall know the reason why." Will a few butterine men sustain or back up this great country? Who fought your battles in the past? Who built up this great country? Did our forefathers send for Mr. Henry Van den Bergh, a Dutchman, to help you to face the music? The farmers and yeomen of England in days gone by had no occasion for a foreigner to come and state his opinions to the President of the Board of Trade, nor do we farmers see any necessity in the present. Mr. Dixon is reported to have said that the new legislation was sought by the agriculture and Irish butter interests. I will define it more clearly for him, and tell him that every English, Scotch, Irish and Welsh farmer demands it, as justice, and I will tell him most certainly we shall have it. A more actro-ious fraud was never practised to the detriment of our honest calling. Had some of the deputation taken to the cellar instead of to Whitehall it would have been more becoming. When I was a lad, I have seen dairy farmers' wives give their children some good bacon fat in place of butter, which was accepted and relished with thankfulness because it was honest (they knew it was honest and clean). Why not have it honest now as then? Why are we to support and sustain a lot of Dutchmen in concocting this article for a class of men who are running through the country and palming it off as butter? Every civilised country has promptly taken a stand except us in this business. They saw to what fraudulent ends it was being put, and, like men, put their foot on it promptly. My letter is drawn out rather long, but it is the most important subject before the country.

Yours, etc.,
THE OLD SAXON FARMER.

Enjoy Life.

What a truly beautiful world we life in! Nature gives us grandeur of mountains, glens and oceans, and thousands of means of enjoyment. We can desire no better when in perfect health, but how often do the majority of people feel like giving it up disheartened, discouraged and worn out with disease, when there is no occasion for this feeling, as every sufferer can easily obtain satisfactory proof, that Green's August Flower, will make them free from disease, as when born. Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint are the direct causes of seventy-five per cent. of such maladies as Biliousness, Indigestion, Sick Headache, Costiveness, Nervous Prostration, Dizziness of the Head, Palpitation of the Heart, and other distressing symptoms. Three doses of August Flower will prove its wonderful effect. Sample bottles, 10 cents. Try it. d90

SOMETHING NEW UNDER THE SUN!

GOUGH'S

FRESH ARRIVAL OF SPRING OVERCOATS AND SUITS
ARE THE NOBBIEST AND NEWEST UNDER THE SUN!

Those High-Price "Clothing Dealers" can't see the funny about GOUGH'S GIFT DEPARTMENT, and claim such things as beneath them. Yes, low advertising is beyond their comprehenson, because they don't understand the first principles of Low Price System. We freely admit that we are fallen clothiers, wallowing in the lowest depths of Bed Rock Prices, while our exalted brethern look down upon us from their high places, and go wild because we capture the trade.

☞ Farmers, Mechanics, Merchants, Bankers and Laboring men, come in and see us, take no man's word. Investigate and believe your own eyes, and you will be convinced that GOUGH is the Cheapest Clothier on earth.

This week we will offer extraordinary inducements. All our departments have been augmented with new features and choice stock, which will justly excite the admiration of all visitors. Call! It will pay as well as please you to see.

GOUGH, the Wonderful Cheap Man, Peterborough.

N.B.—Be sure of the place, four life-size signs on front of building. Look up for them.

GREAT
CLEARING OUT SALE.

GENUINE .·. BARGAINS
In Each Department.

I have decided to let the whole of my present Stock go at Wholesale Cost Price. In these days people expect Bargains, and feel justified in obtaining all they can for their money.

I will give the inhabitants of Peterboro' and surrounding country a chance for once of getting Reliable Goods at prices that will, in truth, be Bargains, of which they are invited to come and judge for themselves.

The Stock consists of the usual Staple Goods besides a large variety of FANCY GOODS not to be had elsewhere in town, viz.:—

Dress Goods, Velveteens, Gloves, Hosiery and Underwear.

Blankets, Quilts, Table Linen, &c.

Small Wares in great variety.

Fancy Goods, such as Desks, Work Boxes, etc.

Fancy Work in Slippers, Cushions, Brackets, Silk and Filoselle Wools, etc.

Mens Underwear in Merino and Wool, and Mens Furnishings generally,

After 23 years' business in Peterborough, I wish to give my old customers and the public generally something unusual in Real Bargains, and will be pleased to see them as quickly as possible avail themselves of them, for, of course, those coming early will have the largest choice.

SHIRLEY CARSTONE

By ELIZA ARCHARD.

Copyrighted by American Press Association.

It was too true. The sight of the eye was all gone but the faintest glimmering of a gray like twilight. He was unable to distinguish one object from another with that eye. Other signs of failing powers followed. His memory had been clear and powerful. Now he lost recollection of important matters. Images of people and events became confused in his brain. He forgot sometimes the names of his children, and called one by the name of another. A pain in his head troubled him.

With a sinking heart the faithful daughter watched these signs. It was unutterably sad to see such symptoms of decay in this man of princely heart and brain. At last the girl observed that her father could not speak certain words distinctly any more. His articulation was thick and difficult, like that of a drunken man. But this was not the worst. Others, outside of the stone house, began to notice the change, too, and to talk of it. Ere long the everlasting Mis' Simpkins tackled black Sam in the village. Said she:

"It's beginnin' to be whimpered about among folks hyer in town that Col. Carstone is losin' of his mind."

"What in thunder you talkin' about?" replied Sam, with an indignant air. He had heard Col. Carstone say that and thought it sounded high toned.

That there might be no possibility of misunderstanding, Mis' Simpkins came out flat footed with the question:

"Boss goin' crazy, ain't he?"

Sam flared up mightily. The honor of the Carstone family hung upon him. He felt the responsibility of the occasion. He answered:

"Goramitey, Mis' Simpkins! Linwood people's a pack o' po' white trash, da'ts what dey ar'. Folks what's got plenty brains don't go crazy. It don't run in der families. It's only yer po' trash dat loses der mins, an' dey lose 'em huntin' arter other people's business. I spects to hyar dat all Linwood's moved into de loonattic asylum befo' long. Yah! yah!" With a twinkle of white teeth, and a bobbing of gray head, Sam turned his back on Linwood.

But he looked very grave when next day Col. Carstone said he meant to start that afternoon to the city. A look of intelligence passed between Shirley and the old servitor.

"Papa," said Shirley, "don't you think Sam had better go with you?" It irritated him.

"I think," he answered, "that I am still capable of taking care of myself."

"Oh, well, no offense, Col. Carstone," said Shirley, lightly. She thought to soothe his wounded pride. "It will be a relief to you to get away from taking care of the trouble some pack of us here."

Her father's brief anger was over. He turned his eye upon the group that gathered to see him off, the handsome, merry children, the beautiful, elder daughter, and the tender, pretty mother of them all. He glanced from one to another with a look of love and pride. Then he kissed them, one after another, which was a work of time, there were so many of them. A new baby had taken the place of the old one. There were always babies in the stone house. The father kissed the tiny newcomer last of all. Then he placed it in Shirley's arms, not his wife's. And he said:

"Take care of your mother, Shirley. Take care of them all."

Those were his last words to them.

He descended the hill with his slightly dragging gait, and they saw him no more.

In many a day the colonel had not felt so well as he did next morning. A sense of exhilaration and a feeling of youth and lightness lifted him quite beyond the gloom that had oppressed him for weeks. He was passionately fond of music. In earlier days he himself had been an amateur singer of no common ability. A famous prima donna was singing in opera in Chesterton this very week. On the evening of that day "Norma" was to be given. It was one of his old favorites. Tender memories were joined with it for him. It was at a performance of "Norma" he first met his wife. Through twenty-five years of happy life that night smiled back on him.

What a lily of a girl his Alice was then, in her white dress and white gloves, with flowers in her hair. Not at all like Shirley. Their daughter was of a stronger mold—and he was glad of it, perhaps, but if ever there was a flower maiden on earth, his sweet Alice had been one. If ever wife was faithful, tender, and lovely, the flower maiden had been so to him. How happy, thrice happy, she had made him. His lot had been blessed above that of common men. He smiled as he thought of all this.

The airs in the fine old composition were Col. Carstone's especial favorites, and they were enchantingly sung. He listened like a bird to catch each golden note, and smiled with exquisite happiness, as the sweet, well remembered strains floated to his ear.

It was the opening of the season. The audience was a brilliant one. Hundreds of refined and cultured musical people had gathered to give warm greeting to their prized singers. The ladies were in light, flower-like dresses, fairly rivaling the loveliness of nature's own blossoms, likewise scattered there in profusion. The lights shone like stars. The air was sweet with perfume and melody. The scene was like a fairy garden. Not one who was there ever forgot it.

In one of the pauses of the noble music a hush like the breath of night fell on the great audience. They were stilled till almost a heart beat could be heard.

Into the midst of this exquisite silence, after this strain of celestial melody, a blood-curdling cry broke. A man was seen to fall forward. It was Col. Carstone. He had been stricken dead in one moment.

Examination revealed that he had received a fatal brain injury from the fall in the State Line road months before. The wonder was he had lived so long.

They took his body home to the stone house. Death had conquered. Never again would the busy brain work and the strong arm be lifted to protect his own. Never, though they die of hunger, or be driven out homeless. Though their innocent blood cry to heaven, that which lies there in the coffin will not hear.

Yet Death, the victor, laid his hand lightly upon the dead man. The marble like countenance took on a beauty, a nobleness, yea, a majesty, that glorified it beyond any comeliness the face of the living man ever wore. It was so grand a beauty that even the rustic neighbors noted it, and spoke of it years afterward. Whatever was good in his nature lay revealed, undisturbed longer by passion or weakness. Death the Destroyer was Death the Beautifier.

So Thomas Carstone slept with his fathers.

"Well," said Mis' Simpkins, "he had an insurance of $10,000 on his life, and everything comfortable about him. He was prepared to die."

Was it from the clouds the voice seemed to come that said to Shirley:

"Take care of your mother, Shirley. Take care of them all.

CHAPTER IX.

FALLEN FORTUNES.

It was a rainy day. Smoke was sullenly making its way out of the stone house chimney, like a boy sent to school against his will.

A year has passed since the close of the last chapter. Not much had happened to our people in that year. Yet it had been enough to change the destiny of some of them for life. It had brought poverty to the stone house. The death of Col. Carstone revealed the fact that the friend who had invested his fortune for him had been false to the trust. Not enough remained to give bread to the children.

Shirley was the head of the family. From her mother down to the 3-year-old Harry all leaned upon her, and looked to her to tell them what to do next.

What then? Shirley's soul had been full to overflowing of her own thoughts and hopes. Now she put her own thoughts and hopes in a corner and began to think and hope for other people.

The false friend's investments had swallowed nearly all. Even the mill and the farm had to go. Interest had been paid regularly during the Colonel's lifetime, so that he had no knowledge of the state his affairs were in. There were debts in many directions too. The old family lawyer was able to keep only the stone house for the Carstones. A heavy debt hung over even that. This was the condition of things.

Somebody had to go to work.

"Well," said Katy Tringle, the old maid, who always carried a black basket with a flapping lid on each side, "them Carstone young ones ain't no better than other folks' children! I reckon they'll find out workin' folks' victuals ain't all white bread now. They'll have to break up. Them biggest ones is old enough to do chores for their board."

Must the family in the stone house be scattered? It was enough to make the generations of Carstones that had been born and lived and died there turn over in their graves.

Shirley was a dreamer, and intensely imaginative. This is to be remembered in tracing the change her life took on at this time, and the history of it afterward. The story of lofty ideas and heroic action made always an impression on her mind that held like iron. Beyond a doubt the poetry, the history and drama that George Morrison read to her had much to do with shaping her life. Following sages and martyrs gone before, she climbed the heights of generous and daring thought, murmuring ever more to her own soul, "Such thoughts I will think too." Did she hear of great and noble deed, her heart throbbed quicker and her eyes grew dewy with sympathy, and she unconsciously said, "Such deeds I, too, will do when the time comes."

Nay, she went a step farther, pondering as she did still the old question she had asked her papa in childhood, "Has a girl as much sense as a boy? She answered it to herself as she grew older, saying with the deep, wise conclusion of unspoiled girlhood, "What strong, heroic men have done, strong, heroic women can do.

She had said she would be wise and steadfast when the time came that demanded strength and wisdom. Was the time ripe? She had dreamed of shining occasion for heroism. Was it to come now in this sorrowful, wholly unlooked for way? Above all, and after all her dreams, was it in such poor, commonplace guise that her occasion presented itself at last? That was the most disheartening of anything. All who are young, aspiring and human must have felt the same. She did not doubt her own powers. She had the faith in herself that comes of a consciousness of strength. It was not vanity. It was something very different. The two wisest men she knew had had infinite faith in her, and had infinite belief in the strength of a good woman. They were her father and her teacher. In these days of trial her mind ran continually on that beloved teacher, the things he had told her, the brave, sweet wisdom he had spoken.

Out of the beautiful past his voice said to her now:

"Reconcile yourself to the inevitable.

"A really great soul is great also in little things. If it is not to be our lot to fill grand requirements, we may at least fill small requirements in a grand way. If ever there comes a clashing of forces in your mind, Shirley, so that you cannot seem to know what is best, remember this: Do the duty that lies nearest you. That will surely lead you into the light. And never lose courage—never give up!"

The sorrowful winter crept by with leaden feet. It required all Shirley's time and faculties to get the tangled thread of the Carstone fortunes straightened out. A new trouble faced her, one that she had least of all expected. Her mother gradually sank into a confirmed invalid. It was worse than that. It was about as bad as it could be, in fact. She became a hypochondriac. Shirley's mother was not one of the Carstone sort. She was of the million and one members of the female sex who are put in to fill up, of whom we say she is a good, sweet woman, and dismiss them. She was one of the amiable creatures for whose ladylike ailments the doctors prescribe goat's whey and gentle exercise. Their ailments are always ladylike. In brief, she was one of the women who stay where they are put. They are amiable. Yes. But how very uninteresting. During her husband's lifetime, his strong character and high spirits had borne Mrs. Carstone beyond herself. Like the moon, she had shone by reflected light. Doubtless that is quite the proper thing for wives to do. But it is rather inconvenient when the light is withdrawn. Then they are merely a dark body in the way.

Her husband dead, she sank to her level. His death and the manner of it were a frightful shock to her. A strong character would have rallied. She never tried to do so, but simply hung upon Shirley in a querulous way. She weighted Shirley down and irritated her at the same time.

She was fair to see, this pretty invalid mamma.

"Land sake," said little Mis' Simpkins, "she don't look no older than Shirley, layin' around there on sofys in her white cashmere gowns trimmed with blue silk that has to be ripped off every time the gown is washed. Her skin is as soft and white as a baby's, that it is! and them red cheeks of hern is the picture of health. She ain't no more sick nor I am. She's as fat as a hen on a corn pile. She could get right up off'n that there sofy and go and do a churnin' this minit, or I'm a liar! But there she lays, and it's Shirley this and Shirley that and Shirley 'tother, till you'd think her tongue'd wear out."

PERSONAL.

To all who Buy Seeds.

"As ye sow so shall ye reap" is a truism worthy of consideration by all who are seeking for success in Garden, or Farm operations. It is evident to every thoughtful mind that Choice Flowers, Fine Vegetables and Grain, cannot be produced by sowing a poor grade of Seed. With this object in view, I have been careful in selecting my Seeds for this season's operations. I make it a point to test the vitality of my Seeds before selling them to my customers, so that the disappointment of Seed not growing is greatly lessened. My stock will be found large and choice. Trusting to be favoured with an extensive patronage this season in my new establishment, Floral Drug Store, corner of George and Charlotte streets, opposite the market.

BUTCHER'S linen for aprons now to be found at TURNBULL'S.

North-West Missions.

The Rev. J. Gough Brick will deliver an interesting address on mission work among the Indians of the Diocese of Athabaska in St. Luke's school room this evening at 7.30 o'clock. The public are cordially invited.

A Thorough Treat.

Next Friday evening the people of Peterorough will have the privilege of hearing one of the most eminent of the Bishops of the Methodist Episcopal Church in the United States. Bishop H. W. Warren is secured to lecture in the George Street Church on "The Forces in a Sunbeam." Any person at all acquainted with the splendid abilities of Bishop Warren, with such a theme to handle, will anticipate a brilliant effort, and will not be disappointed. The admission fee will be 25 cents.

I WILL not be undersold by anyone. See if I will! R. J. KIDD.

Cheese Box Factory.

Mr. Bickle, a cheese box manufacturer of long experience, addressed the cheesemakers' meeting on Saturday, stating that if they would give him their support he would establish his cheese box factory in Peterborough. He received more support than he asked to start with. He will commence the manufacture of boxes here as soon as he can get his factory ready. This will be a convenience for the cheesemakers of the county, for if the boxes are not what they are represented to be, they will not have far to go to look for redress. Mr. Bickle guarantees his wares.

Shipped To-day.

Mr. Geo. Bolton shipped to-day one of his celebrated hot water boilers and nine of his improved coil radiators to Messers. N. & T. Whitelaw, plumbers, etc., Toronto, for Mr. F. R Hamilton's new residence in that city. Also a boiler and coil radiator to Mr. E. Woods, Lindsay. The following letter has been received from Mr. E. B. Stocking, Patent Solicitor, 615 Seventh Street, Washington, D. C.:—

"March, 12th, 1887.

"Geo. Boulton, Peterborough, Canada:

"DEAR SIR,—I have the pleasure of informing you that I have this day received the official notice of the allowance of your application for a patent for boilers. Very good claims having been secured."

Go to Kidd's new store and get a pair of boots that WILL fit your feet.

From the Far West.

On Sunday evening the Rev. J. Gough Brick, of Dunvegan, Diocese of Athabaska, (what to us is known as the Peace River country) North West Territories, preached a sermon in St. John's Church to a large congregation. The reverend gentleman has been a missionary among the Indians in the far west for a number of years, and has had a varied experience in mission work. He is visiting the different parishes in Ontario for the purpose of raising funds to erect a school house and grist mill for his Indians. They are 450 miles distant from any post office, and almost as many miles away from a grist mill and have to pay $16.00 per hundred for flour, which, although a very high figure, is a considerable reduction on what it cost when the reverend gentleman first went there, as at that time he had to pay no less a sum than $21 per hundred. Now that he has got his Indians partially schooled in agriculture, so that they are raising their own grain, he must have a grist mill to grind the wheat into flour. He announced that the amount required would not be less than $2,000, and spoke confidently of being able to raise that amount. The Rev. Mr. Brick will hold a meeting in St. John's Church school house on Tuesday evening, when a collection will be taken up to assist this project. He will give a full description of the work he is engaged in and the beautiful country in which he lives.

A CHOICE assortment of Scotch and Canadian tweeds, worsteds and West of England pantings to choose from at TURNBULL'S. Remember there is a first-class tailor always on the premises to execute work promptly.

CHEESE.

A Meeting of the Cheesemakers—The Materials to be Used.

A meeting of the Peterborough Cheese Makers' Association was held in the old Music Hall on Saturday afternoon. Mr. Crebbin, President of the Association, occupied the chair. There were about twenty-five cheese makers present, and also a few salesmen.

Before going into the business of the afternoon a motion was put and carried inviting Mr. Wm. Cluxton to address the meeting.

MR. CLUXTON said that the object he had in view was to give the cheese makers some information and offer suggestions, which, if they approved of and adopted, might tend to improve the manufacture of cheese in this district. The interests of the makers and buyers were identical. If a good article was made and put up in good boxes it would sell readily when placed on the Peterborough Board for sale and the exporter would get ready sale in England. He then read letters to show how the sales of Peterborough cheese had been retarded in England and pointed out why they were not ealsly disposed of. The letters were from Blackburn & Parkinson, a Liverpool firm, dated Sepaember 13th and 27th, 1886. The day of writing they got some Peterborough cheese paying 43 shillings, while best Canadian was bringing 45 shillings. They add in italics, but, mark you, they were a good bright colored cheese not a sickly yellow ochre cast like this Peterborough cheese. They advised the Government instructor to learn from Brockville and Belleville and then to instruct Peterborough. They were sure this thing could be remedied. The second letter, after congratulating Mr. Cluxton on his safe return from England, went on to say, in reference to cheese, that they would rather have white cheese than the peculiar color of the Peterborough cheese. They stated the difficulty of selling it. Mr. Cluxton also read a letter published in the REVIEW received by Mr. W. H. Wrighton for Messers. Ayer & Co., dealing with boxes, showing the necessity of having them close fitting. He also urged the makers to get at uniformity in their manufacture. The various grading of color had a tendency to bring out bids for "selected" factories when the cheese was boarded. He illustrated this by giving some of his experience on the board last season. While in England he had examined the boxing of cheese both in Liverpool and London and he would strongly recommend them to look after this important point.

The PRESIDENT asked Mr. Cluxton what he meant by the "murky" color.

MR. CLUXTON returned that it was a heavy red color, as distinguished from a bright straw color.

MR. WHITING, the Government Inspector, who was present, said that he fully agreed with Mr. Cluxton's remarks. It was against his instructions that the Peterborough cheese was so highly colored. The buyers clamoured for it and took him to task for advising lower coloring, but it was now apparent that he was right. Belleville and Brockville cheese were of the right color.

MR. YOUNG asked how much coloring he would recommend them to use.

MR. WHITING said that 2 ounces was enough to start with, and when the cows were put on grass they should gradually taper off to 1½ ounces.

MR. TAYLOR called the attention of the meeting to the importance of the remark. The makers would do well to keep it in mind.

MR. CLUXTON reminded the makers that the only fault with the cheese was the coloring. It was of a "bricky" shade, that clear bright kind so much in favor.

A vote of thanks was passed for the address Mr. Cluxton had given them.

After a long discussion it was decided that the makers would use the coloring recommended by the Inspector, the Hanson rennet extract and the Bickle boxes—as good material as can be procured in the market.

You might get calf boots from a calf; but where would you go for kidd boots but to KIDD'S?

ANOTHER FIELD DAY.

The Crusaders Again on the War Path.

At the Police Court this morning His Worship had ten charges of infractions of the Scott Act laid before him.

There was a crowd in court which eagerly waited the result.

The charges were read one after another and pleas of guilty all being but in, the following fines were made: John Wilson, $100 and costs; John Cameron, $50 and costs; Wm. Ross, $50 and costs; R. Whalen, $50 and costs; T. O. Rush, $50 and costs; Tierney & Elliott, $50 and costs; A. P. Morgan, $100 and costs; M. Giroux, $50 and costs.

E. B. Edwards and R. E. Wood, County Attorney, were on hand for the prosecution. J. O'Meara appeared for Mr. Giroux.

Three county cases Queen vs. Kearney, Queen vs. Costello and Queen vs. Dion, were held over till to-morrow.

Never too Late.

Every season it has been the custom to have a Grit vs. Tory curling match. Up to date the curlers have been so busy playing Lindsay that they havn't had time to play the match yet. However, its never to late to do a good thing.

TURNBULL'S dress goods counter and shelves are now filled with new good in every conceiveable shade, with trimmings to match. His prices are the lowest and styless the best. Look through and be convinced.

THE REV. JUDD WHITE.

Continuation of the Temperance Revival—Large Meetings.

The second week of the temperance revival meetings was commenced in the Opera House on Saturday night. There was a fair sized audience. The Rev. I. Tovell presidad and the Rev. J. Judd White, one of the "Royal Revival" bands, was present. Mr. W. W. Buchanan was not present, he having been called home to Hamilton by the serious illness of his wife. The meeting was opened by devotional exercises and several hymns were sung, Mr. White leading and the audience joining in. "Sing," is Mr. White s motto; "sing, and if you can't get the tune at first, sing anyway, and sing from the heart." Short addresses were given, and Mr. White sang solos to the accompaniment of a guitar. One solo especially was loudly applauded, and when he responded to an encore the audience showed a strong inclination to force him to sing again.

On Sunday morning Mr. White occupied the pulpit in the Baptist Church. He read the twenty-first chapter of John and took his text from the same chapter. His sermon was practical, and at times truths were enforced with humor instead of strength of expression, the preacher and congregation all smiling. At other times the preacher waxed earnest and pathetic, but all through he held the attention of the congregation. A few of his pithy remarks were as follows:—

"If a man thinks he ought to be a deacon, and is put out because he isn't, he is not fit to be a deacon."

"When we get mad and resent a snub, we make ourselves as mean as the one who gives the snub."

"There is a great difference between a minister trying to carry a church, and a church carrying the minister."

"Some people have an idea that there are two Bibles, one for members of churches and another for those who are not members. There is only one Bible, and its commands are for all."

"It is the duty and privilege of the earth to revolve around the sun, and it is the duty and the privilege of all created intelligence to revolve around Christ."

"I believe in a character formation, and not sentimentalism, though religion will produce sentiment."

"To be a follower of Christ is to have the Christ character formed within you. After the character is formed, live it out."

"There are sometimes cats in a church, always scratching; sometimes dogs, always snarling; but there are two animals wanted, bear and forbear."

"We sometimes consecrate our lives to God, but forget that life is made up of days and hours."

He urged Christ-likeness in reverence for the Word of God, in love for souls, in a forbearing and forgiving spirit, and in consecration to Christ.

In the afternoon (Sunday) the Opera House was packed to the doors, the occasion being a children's meeting. Mr. White spoke on "Habits, Good and Bad," enforcing his ideas with object lessons. The singing was heartily engaged in by the audience, especially the children.

In the evening Mr. White preached in the George Street Methodish Church. The large church was crowded with an interested audience. Mr. White made use of, in the singing, his guitar and a brass instrument. His theme was "Mercy."

Mr. White's singing is pleasing and he shows great tact in leading an audience and in keeping up the interest. His stories, used as illustrations, are usually humorous and apt, and withal he shows earnestness and ability to clearly and forcibly express his opinions.

The management, acting on Mr. White's advice, have withdrawn the plan of meetings announced and have decided to centre them as much as possible in the centre of the town. The meeting this evening will be held in the George Street Methodist Church.

POLICE COURT.

D. & D.

MONDAY, March 28.—Dennis McCarthy was charged by Capt. Cooper with having been drunk and disorderly in a public place. He pleaded guilty and was fined $2 and costs.

PROFANE LANGUAGE.

T. Gainsey was charged by P. C. Pidgeon with having used profane language on the street.

The DEFENDANT pleaded guilty.

The MAGISTRATE said that he was determined to put down this sort of thing and emphasized his determination by calling upon the defendant to contribute $5 to the town coffers.

Runaway.

On Sunday morning as Mr. J. J. Howden's horse was being driven out of St. Luke's Church yard the cutter slewed around and the horse started off. Mrs. C. Robinson and Miss Howden, who were in it, were thrown out and the overturned cutter was smashed considerably. Fortunately neither of the ladies were seriously injured.

Church Notes.

—The Rev. I. Tovell preached a sermon on "Faith" in the Baptist Church, Murray street, on Sunday evening.

—The Rev. Judd White preached in the Baptist Church, Murray street, on Sunday morning.

—The Rev. J. Gough Brick, of Duncegan, N. W. T., preached in St. Luke's Church, Ashburnham, on Sunday morning, and in St. John's Church on Sunday evening.

—The Rev. F. H. Wallace, B. D., preached a sermon on "Temperance" on Sunday evening.

NOR IN PETERBOROUGH.

John W. Garrett, of railroad fame, kept men at work at such wages that their families suffered for the necessaries of life, but when subscriptions were wanted for public charity he would give by thousands. —Detroit Free Press.

Garrett is not peculiar in this respect. Canada could furnish instances of that kind of people, but of course they do not live in London.—London Advertiser.

HAVE MR. MOWAT.

Probably not the least important factor of his (Mr. Mercier's) success is his unscrupulousness. He has no idea of consistency, and drops like a hot potato any measure which he perceives to be unpopular. In order to retain the power which he gained by a very narrow majority he is reported to be arranging a neat little gerrymander, which will give him several more supporters at the next election.—Toronto News (Indep.)

WHY THEY HATE DEWDNEY.

Lately in Calgary as high as $40 was paid for a gallon of whiskey, and $60 was offered for two gallons. One party who had two gallons of dark Hudson's Bay brandy was offered $120 for the lot, but refused to take it holding out for $150.—Winnipeg Sun.

TOO DANGEROUS.

The Kingston Whig thinks "another revolt under Tory rule, is not an improbability." We think the Whig is wrong. There is, of course, no doubt that certain Grits are quite as ready as they always have been to get up a rebellion. But the last fellow who tried that favorite Grit dodge was hanged, and we are of opinion that hanging will have a tendency to discourage "another revolt under Tory rule." The Grit revolters of to-day don't want to die for their party.—Hamilton Spectator.

A COINCIDENCE.

As has been often shown, the expenditure on Colonization Roads by the Mowat Government is always much greater in election years than in others. When this fact was pointed out to Mr. Pardee, he said it was "a mere coincidence!" Of course; that's where the point is, the extra expenditure coincides with the elections; the lesser outlay coincides with the absence of elections —London Free Press.

GRITS WOULD RULE OR RUIN.

Let us have repeal, annexation to Mexico, the Soudan or perdition, any form of tyranny, anarchy or despotism will be Arcadian felicity compared with Canada under Toryism.—Cape Breton Reporter (Reform.)

MR. BLAKE'S "MAJORITY."

There does not appear to be much of the boiter left about Mr. Desjardins, M. P. Asked in Montreal whether there was any truth in the statement that Sir John Macdonald was to be elevated to the peerage, he said he did not know, but "Sir John was certainly well entitled to such an honor, as he was as highly esteemed in England as in Canada."—Ottawa Journal (Indep.)

THE TRUTH FOR ONCE.

The walls of our local contemporary over the defeat of the immaculate Ananias of Huron, by corruption and bribery, are amusing. M. C. Cameron has often falsified the political record, but when he swore to spending $20,000 in the election contest of 1874, he was probably not far out.—London Free Press.

GRIT LOVE FOR THE PEOPLE.

What a pitiable sight is a troop of farmers and fishermen marching to the polls to mortgage their farms, their little homes, and their children's birthright, to the manufacturers and wide-mouthed demagogues of the Upper Provinces. Go on, boys! growl away about hard times and scarcity of money, but be sure when election day comes around to act like a parcel of demented asses led around by the nose by men who turn their backs and smile, and wonder at the easy gullibilty of the public. Is it possible that we are to suffer five years more of national slaughter, public debauchery and hopeless bankruptcy?—Cape Breton Reporter (Reform).

SHOULD WOMEN VOTE?

MR. STRATTON GIVES HIS VIEWS THROUGH HIS PAPER.

True Women Don't Want Votes, but if the Others are in a Majority they can Have Votes—"A Merciful Providence Fashioned Him Holier that he Might the Better his Principles Sweller."

The Examiner published on Saturday the following amusing interview with the member of the Legislature for West Peterborough:—

The bill of Mr. Waters introduced into the Ontario Legislature for giving the municipal franchise to women, on Wednesday evening last, was rejected, by a decisive majority of thirty-six.

The gallant reporter of the Examiner, who was desirous of understanding more of matter, this morning sought an interview with the representative of West Peterborough, who returned to town last night, to ascertain on what grounds he founded his opposition to the measure.

REPORTER—I notice that the bill of Mr. Waters to give the municipal franchise to married women was rather slaughtered. Would you mind stating what reasons led you to take what might be constructed as an ungallant position against the sex?

MR. STRATTON—The action of the majority of the legislature had, it seems to me, nothing ungallant in it. In my personal opinion there was nothing really hurtful nor disparaging to woman in rejecting the bill which was apparently drawn up in her favour. You must remember that the spheres of the sexes are quite distinct. Man's power sphere is public life; woman's domain is the home. In every instance that can be cited, it will be found that the true woman, who possesses the ornament of her sex, a gentle, refined nature, will shrink from all public and political excitement, other than a moral interest.

REP.—Then you do not consider that the adoption of this bill would be beneficial?

Mr. S.—Now as a matter of fact, supposing such a measure became law, we should not have the influence of true women in politics, any more than we now have. It may be asked, is it good for the human race that women should be trained and admitted to compete in the ways of life from which heretofore they have been excluded, partly indeed, by feeling and usage, and partly by actual legislation? Will it be well that we should have female lawyers, professors, and ministers of state? Remember, the aim of those who now desire female suffrage is not to stop there. Suppose this granted, then why not grant women entrance to Parliament and public office? The first concession involves the second.

REP.—The results you indicate do not indeed tally with the generally accepted ideal of woman.

Mr. S.—No; the old chivalrous idea was far different. It was that the sweat of the brow and the sweat of the brain should be masculine—that man should go forth to adventure and achievement—that masculine government is the best for women as well as men—and that woman should be man's ministering angel, always being ready to reward him with her sympathy and appreciation.

REP.—But why have not women as a class the same rights to the franchise as men?

Mr. S.—It is incorrect to say women are unenfranchised as a class. They are not a class, but a sex, and their true interests are guarded by affection and closely bound up with those of their male relations. Woman should be sheltered and shielded from the rude battle of life and her interests should be guarded by man.

REP.—You think the enfranchisement of women would produce a different state of affairs.

Mr. S.—Yes, if we are to drag women into politics and disturb the relations of the sexes. Those who enter the political arena must expect to be cuffed and to cuff back again and then the age of chivalry and chivalrous courtesy shall have passed. Upon this point, I noticed a few days ago that the president of the British Medical Association in effect says that it is not good for the humah race that woman should be freed from the restraints which law and custom have imposed upon them. Such legislation would have the effect of incapacitating them for their proper function—for performing the part nature has assigned to them in the maintenance and progressive improvement of the human race.

REP.—You do not seem to think women are adapted for politicians?

Mr. S.—No: My opinion is that women are made and meant to be not men but mothers of men. A noble mother and a noble wife, are the titles in which we find the highest ideals of noble womanhood. Woman was formed to be man's helpmate, not his rival, one who should sustain and comfort, not lead or guide him. Even we who are ruled by Her Most Gracious Majesty Queen Victoria, who has filled her place nobly, find our admiration tinged with compassion and speak of her position as one of "lonely splendor."

REP.—Your sentiments seem to have been shared largely by the House?

Mr. S.—Yes; in a House of 74 members only 19 voted for the measure. These are my personal opinions upon the subject, and I have yet to find that they are in any general way opposed to those of my constituents. If I am assured that there is a general feeling that an extension of the franchise to women is a desirable thing, I shall feel bound to give expression to that feeling as representative of West Peterborough.

REP.—Haven't there been several petitions presented?

Mr. S.—There have been, but the strange thing about them is that they have been principally signed by males, though there can be no doubt that a large number of ladies have applied for the privilege.

Rep.—That doesn't look as though the ladies were pining for the ballot?

Mr. S.—It does not certainly. The experience of most men is, I believe, that a woman wants anything she can generally manage to ask for it. They have not demanded the franchise, and it seems to me to be time enough to give it to them when they make a positive demand for it. For this reason, and on the grounds I have mentioned, I opposed the bill, acting according to my personal convictions of what I thought was right and proper, but if I find that the people of West Peterborough are in favor of extending the franchise to the ladies, I shall have the greatest pleasure in giving effect, as far as my vote will avail, to their wishes. In the absence of a knowledge of their wishes on any given subject, I shall act according to my best judgment and with a desire to do what is just and right.

REP.—Then there were only 19 out of the House that voted for Mr. Waters' bill?

Mr. S.—Only 19, and petitions in favor of the measure came principally from those constituencies. Mr. Waters' bill was before the House since the opening of the session, and if the ladies of Peterborough had wanted the ballot they had an opportunity of acquainting me with their wishes and desires in the matter. My impression is that the ladies do not desire the ballot, but if they do, the whole question will have to be considered, so as to allow them to vote not only for trustees and councillors, but upon all other questions. If property qualification is to constitute the basis of a right to vote, there can be no reason why a women should not have a vote, other than that founded upon the broad question whether it is in the best interests of the sex to place them in the turmoil of political agitation and strife. However, my views on this subject are not cast iron and I am ready to listen and give consideration to the views of others.

THE 'VARSITY BOAT RACE.

Oxford Loses A Magnificent Race by Bad Steering and the Breaking of an Oar.

LONDON, March 28.—The annual boat race between teams of eight from the universities of Oxford and Cambridge took place on Saturday over the Thames championship course—from Putney to Mortlake. There was a tremendous crowd of spectators to witness the race, which was won by Cambridge by about four boat lengths. The wind was fresh and the water was very lumpy. The betting just before the start was fifteen pounds to eight in favor of the Cambridge crew.

At the time the crews launched their boats, just prior to the start, the weather threatened rain. When the signal for the race was given, the light blues at once took the lead rowing with a slightly more rapid stroke than that used by the Oxfords. At the end of the first mile, Cambridge was half a length ahead, the race having been stubbornly contested all the way. The dark blues spurted—to this the Cambridge men responded instantly and effectively, so that at Hammersmith bridge, about 2 miles from the start, they had increased their lead to a whole boat length. Here the Oxford crew again put a fresh burst to the speed, and drew up towards their opponents, but managed to cut down only a part of the lead against them. At Chiswick, the Oxfords had improved their rowing so much that the Cambridge men, in their efforts to retain their lead, rowed a little wildly, and finally splashed; but they recovered themselves quickly, and, by a supreme effort, made up their loss and regained their lead of a length, which had been somewhat curtailed, although their boat rolled a good deal under under the inequality of the efforts of the crew. At Barnes' bridge, three miles and five furlongs from the start, the Cambridge boat was leading by a length and a half. After passing the bridge the dark blues broke an oar. That, of course, secured the race for the Cambridge men, and they won easily by three lengths. The race was a fine contest as far as Barnes' bridge, being strongly contested every inch up to this point. The Oxford crew pulled better together than their opponents did, and it is agreed on all hands that the distance they lost was lost by bad steering.

DISSOLVED.

The Lawrence Townley Heirs' Claim Sifted to the Bottom.

The Canadian descendants of the Lawrence-Townley families have at last sifted their claim to the English estates to the bottom, and found there is nothing there for them. The first meeting was called on Sept. 8th, 1885. Since then the Association has collected and spent $925 for fees, printing, travelling, postage and stationary. The largest item of expense was $500, this Association's share of the fee of $3,000 to Hon. S. H. Blake for his services in England.

Mr. James N. Davis, Treasurer for the Belleville branch, took up the matter where Mr. Blake left off and ascertained exactly what had been the dealings with this property during the past years.

He reports as follows: "The present title to the Townley estates in England, has its foundation in one Peregrine Edward Townley as sole male heir, and those estates are established by the high courts and by special act of Parliament in the hands of his descendants, I should say his grand daughters and their families, all of the direct male line having died out."

The Association met in the City Hall on Saturday afternoon, when Mr. Davis submitted a detailed statement of his work in England, of which the above report is a summary. The Association consequently paid its debts and dissolved. Secretary Phelps made a like report in 1886 but it was discredited at the time.—Belleville Intelligencer.

A Fusilade in Court.

CHARLESTON, S. C., March 28.—At Newberry, on Saturday, while a case was progressing in court, George Johnstone and John B. Jones, attorneys representing the parties to the suit, pulled their pistols and opened fire on each other. Nine shots were fired. Johnstone was shot through the ear, in the left arm and in the thigh, but was not seriously hurt. Jones was shot through the body, and, perhaps, fatally wounded. In trying to stop the firing, Lawyer Cromer had three holes shot through his clothing. The court room was crowded at the time of the affray. Johnstone is an ex-member of the legislature was recently a candidate for congress. Jones is a young member of the bar.

ANOTHER CANDIDATE.

LONDON, March 28.—Prince Ferdinand, of Saxe-Cobourg, has written to members of the Sobranje expressing his desire to be nominated as a candidate for the Bulgarian throne.

A "COMBINE" IN EGYPT.

CAIRO, March 28.—An inquiry into the survey department has revealed the complicity of Egyptian officials in the fraudulent sale of state lands and the existence of a ring in the finance ministry, whereby the Egyptian Government has been defrauded of $450,000. An American, Mason Bey, is at the head of the department. He declares he is in no way responsible for the fraudulent practices.

UNIONISTS SUPPORT THE BILL.

LONDON, March 28.—A conference of Liberal Unionists will be held at Devonshire house on Thursday to consider the Coercion bill. An exchange of views in the lobbies on the bill disclosed the fact that several of the Unionists disapprove the measure, but the mass of the party consider its provisions not too stringent. Lord Hartington and Mr. Chamberlain will give a thorough support to the whole proposals. The threatened defection of Unionists will probably not extend to ten votes, leaving the Government still with a potent majority.

SURRENDERS HIMSELF.

DUBLIN, March 28.—Yesterday officers were sent to arrest Father Ryan, of the Herbertstown branch of the National League, for declining to give evidence regarding his connection with the Plan of Campaign. The priest eluded the officers, however, and proceeded to Dublin voluntarily. He will confront Justice Boyd tomorrow. Although he travelled in disguise, Father Ryan was recognized by many persons along the route, and was entusiastically greeted. A Roman Catholic constable, whose assistance had been demanded, threw down his arms and refused to aid in arresting the priest.

CANADA'S CONTROL OF CRUISERS.

LONDON, March 28.—Sir Henry Holland, Colonial Secretary, stated in the Commons to-night that it was true that the Dominion of Canada possessed authority to direct the operations of armed cruisers without the consent of the Imperial Parliament. She possessed the right under the Act of 1867, which gave the Dominion power to legislate in all matters relative to the militia and military and naval defence.

BRUSSELS, March 28.—The Nord, a Russian organ, says all attempts to form a Franco-Russian alliance will be absolutely hopeless.

COERCION.

LONDON, March 28.—Mr. Balfour moved the first reading of the Irish Crimes bill tonight. It proposes that capital cases, in some instances, shall be tried in England. Mr. Gladstone expressed surprise at the announcement that the bill would be permanent. The lobby is satisfied with the general scope of the measure, and it meets with the entire approval of the Unionists. The Irish members are bewildered at the Government proposals. The Unionists will meet Lord Hartington on Thursday to consider the bill.

DUBLIN, March 28.—At a League meeting in Youghal yesterday it was resolved that no rent should be paid while Father Keller was in prison.

AUDIENCE WITH THE EMPRESS.

BERLIN, March 28.—The Emperor being indisposed, the Empress yesterday accorded a farewell audience to Mgr. Galimberti, special envoy of the Pope. In receiving him she said: "it seems to me as if I had known you a long time, Monsignor. In the name of the Emperor, I beg you to thank the Holy Father. Tell him how great an interest we take in his person, and that we entertain the warmest wishes for his welfare." Monsignor Galimberti will take with him to Rome an autograph letter from Emperor William to the Pope. It is rumored that he will return to Berlin after Easter, when a better opportunity will be afforded him for the settlement of political questions.

MR. PARNELL'S OPINION.

LONDON, March 28.—Mr. Parnell considers the Irish Criminal Law Amendment bill one of the strongest coercive measures ever proposed in Parliament. The bill, he says, even creates new offences. He thinks Mr. Balfour's reference to the press mean that the Government will suppress prominent Nationalist newspapers as soon as the bill has been passed.

DENOUNCED BY THE PARNELLITES.

LONDON, March 28.—The Parnellites held an informal meeting and united in denouncing what they termed the atrocious character of the Coercion bill. The measure, they said, concealed under its provisions powers for the extinction of the liberty of the press, public meetings, free speech and all individual rights. The Parnellites disregard the threats of Mr. Smith to continue the debate until the second reading of the bill. They say if the protraction of the sitting results in a test of physical endurance, they will be ready for the struggle. Mr. Parnell has postponed the introduction of his amendment until he consults with his colleagues.

THE CZAR AND THE STUDENTS.

ST. PETERSBURG, March 28.—The Czar has replied to an address sent to him by the students of the university congratulating him on his escape from the recent plot to assassinate him. He says:—"I thank the university, and hope it will prove its devotion to me by deeds, not merely on paper, and endeavor to efface the grave impression which the part a number of students took in the criminal design on my life has created in every one. May God bless and guide the university aright."

The Daily Review.

TUESDAY, MARCH 29, 1887.

FRAUDULENT CORRUPTION.

A STRANGE and discreditable scene has taken place in the Legislative Council of Quebec. Mr. Savage, an old and infirm gentleman who till very recently has been Councillor for the Gaspe division, entered the Chamber and insisted upon taking his seat. In vain he was called upon to withdraw, as he had resigned and was no longer a member of the Council. He continued to claim his seat on the ground that he was still Councillor, his resignation having been only conditional on the fulfillment of the promise that he should be made Sheriff of Gaspe. He would not yield and leave the Chamber till the sergeant-at-arms and the usher of the black rod intervened to compel him.

This disgraceful exposure displays most vividly the corruption and dishonesty of Mr. Mercier and his Administration. On the testimony of his accomplice Mr. Mercier is shown to have been guilty of buying a political opponent in the Legislature. It is true he did not pay the promised consideration, but that he should thus swindle his victim and accomplice does not extenuate his corruption, adding rather a deeper dye to it. The fact that he purchased an opponent in the Provincial Legislature remains, whether he paid the price or obtained his end by a fallacious promise. Our law regards such a corrupt promise as being equally criminal with a corrupt payment.

But this is not the only misdeed on the part of Mr. Mercier that is brought to light by this scene. It is shown that because Mr. Joncas was nominated as a Conservative candidate Mr. Mercier saw fit to punish him by determining to dismiss him from office, and employ his position as one which he was free to use as a means of corruption. This is a glaring instance out of many of his importing into Canada from the United States the maxim that "to the victors belong the spoils."

But even yet we have not fathomed the depths of Mr. Mercier's iniquities. Having resolved to dismiss Mr. Joncas from office for being a Conservative, and to use his place as a means of corrupting the Opposition in the Legislature, he did not carry out his intention in spite of his promise. Why? His organs give the answer. Mr. Joncas having accepted the candidature on behalf of the Conservatives of Gaspe for the House of Commons sent in his resignation as Sheriff of that county. Mr. Mercier, though he had resolved to dismiss him, and had actually sold his office for the place of an Opposition Councillor, now withheld his acceptance of Mr. Joncas' resignation. His organs tell us that he resolved on this change in order to disqualify Mr. Joncas by the quibble that he was still Sheriff and not eligible as a candidate for the House of Commons. So Mr. Mercier, not content to use his patronage as Premier of Quebec to manipulate the Provincial Legislature, actually utilizes it to thwart the Dominion electors in their choice of a representative in the Parliament of Canada. Such conduct would be almost incredible were it not in keeping with the character of Mr. Mercier as described by the judiciary and by his own political friends.

It is hardly worth while to dwell upon the fact that this Mr. Joncas, who is treated so villainously by Mr. Mercier, is one of the members claimed by the Reformers as a Nationalist, or at least as an Independent.

And this Mr. Mercier and his friends are the pets of Mr. Mowat. No wonder there are some strange tricks performed in regard to public patronage in this Province also.

PUBLIC PATRONAGE.

THERE seems to be a commotion among the Reformers of Ottawa over Mr. Mowat's appointment to the Registrarship. He has deliberately passed over the choice of the party and of the local members, Mr. Waller, who has for more than a year as deputy of his deceased father carried on the work of the office so efficiently that according to Mr. Mowat himself the interests of the public did not suffer in the least from his being in charge. Over his head he has placed Mr. Coffey, a young man also, whose sole claim seems to be that he has friends who can influence votes for Mr. Mowat in return for the appointment. In vain, however, the local Reform members and other leaders of the party in Ottawa protested against this choice, for Mr. Mowat was resolved to have his own way. There is wrath in consequence, but probably the recalcitrants will come to heel again under the party lash.

As regards not only this appointment, but others, Mr. Mowat made a pitiable exhibition of himself while explaining his conduct in the House. He had to reluctantly confess that while pretending that these offices were still open, he had in reality secretly bestowed them long ago, having had the commissions made out just before the general elections for the Provincial Legislature.

It is evident that Mr. Mowat was by no means sure of being sustained by the constituencies, even gerrymandered as they are, so, while continuing to dangle the bait before the eyes of a crowd of expectants to ensure their zealous support, he secretly made his friends safe by appointments to be used if necessary, should it be shown, as he expected, that he had no longer the confidence of the electors.

To carry out his plans he did not hesitate to have recourse to astonishing duplicity! In Ottawa he acquiesced in the brazen denials by his organ and his lieutenants that the office had been given away, though he had actually had the commission made out. In regard to the Lennox vacancy he went even further, assuring the House personally that he had not made the appointment, thus keeping up till the last moment his dishonest pretence that he still had the vacancy with which to reward one of the faithful, though in this case also he had the commission made out last December.

Mr. Mowat is a very tricky politician, and he seems to have very little regard for truth or honesty.

A GREAT TUNNEL.

The Port Huron Scheme Taking Practical Shape.

A Detroit despatch to the New York Times says:—Some time ago brief mention was made of a projected railroad tunnel under the river at Port Huron. The construction of this tunnel would cause a great reduction in the cost and time of transferring trains over the St. Clair River at this point, which is now done by two railroad ferries running from Point Edward on the Canadian side to Port Huron on the American side. The completion of this work will have an important effect upon tranportation between the Western and Eastern States, and also between Canada and the growing West, as the route by way of Port Huron to and between Detroit and Buffalo or Toronto will be only 8 miles longer than the direct route across the river at Detroit and Windsor, while the extra distance will be more than made up by the saving of time in running through the tunnel.

During the winter the work of sinking large shafts on both the American and Canadian sides of the river has been prosecuted, until now a depth has been reached from which the work of driving a horizontal excavation under the river from each side can be commenced. The machinery and timber necessary in making the excavation for the trial heading, or cylindrical tunnel, 6 feet in diameter, which will be cut under the river, are on the ground. This small tunnel will be constructed for the purpose of testing the earth through which the main tunnel will be constructed. It will take six months to build the heading, and if the result is satisfactory work on the large tunnel will be begun at once. In that case it is expected that the tunnel will be completed and open for traffic by the latter end of 1888 or early in 1889.

The tunnel will be over one mile in length 2,310 feet being under the river, 1,810 feet under dry ground south of the city limits of Port Huron and 1,160 feet on the Canadian side. Fifteen hundred feet of the portion under the river will be almost level, falling eastward only enough to cause any water that gets into the tunnel to run to the Canadian side. The total length of the ascent on the American side will be 4,909 feet, and on the Canadian side 4,970. The length of the open cutting or approach at the Port Huron end of the tunnel will be 2,220 feet and at the Canadian end 3,270 feet. The depth of the lowest part of the tunnel below the surface of the water will be 81 feet, which is 15 feet higher than it was expected it would be on account of anticipated quicksands and water pockets, but the borings made in the river last winter showed that the material was good and that the tunnel could be built so much higher. The minimum depth of the top of it below the bed of the river will be 15 feet.

It will have a clear internal diameter of 20 feet, and will have a single track. It was at first proposed to construct a two-track tunnel, but careful estimates of the cost were given, showing that two single-track tunnels could be built cheaper than one double-track tunnel. If this tunnel is a success, and the traffic becomes profitable, the company intends to build a second one. The tunnel is being built by a private company and will cost about $1,500,000. It is probable, however, that the leading roads will form a pool and obtain control of it after its completion. The progress of the work is being watched with keen interest, as great changes are likely to be occasioned by its successful operation, possibly the duplicating of the tunnel at Detroit at whatever cost. There the condition of the ground beneath the river bed is not so favourable as at Port Huron.

English as She is Taught.

Mark Twain contributes to the April Century under the above title some examples of the curious answers made by pupils in our public schools. We quote a few as follows;—

Aborigines, a system of mountains.
Alias, a good man in the Bible.
Amenable, anything that is mean.
Assiduity, state of being an acid.
Auriferous, pertaining to an orifice.
Ammonia, the food of the gods.
Capillary, a little caterpillar.
Corniferous, rocks on which fossil corn is found.
Emolument, a headstone to a grave.
Equestrian, one who asks questions.
Eucharist, one who plays euchre.
Franchise, anything belonging to the French.
Idolater, a very idle person.
Ipecac, a man who likes a good dinner.
Irrigate, to make fun of.
Mendacious, what can be mended.
Mercenary, one who feels for another.
Parasite, a kind of umbrella.
Parasite, the murder of an infant.
Publican, one who does his prayers in public.
Tenacious, ten acres of land.

Here is one where the phrase "publicans and sinners" has got mixed up in the child's mind with politics, and the result is a definition which takes one in a sudden and unexpected way:

"Republican, a sinner mentioned in the Bible."

Also in Democratic newspapers now and then.

Here are two where the mistake has resulted from sound assisted by remote fact:

"Plagiarist, a writer of plays.

"Demagogue a vessel containing beer and other liquids."

Here is one which—well, now, how often do we slam right into the truth without ever suspecting it,

"The men employed by the gas company go around and speculate the meter."

And here—with "zoological" and "geological" in his mind, but not ready to his tongue—the small scholar has innocently gone and let out a couple of secrets which ought never to have been divulged in any circumstances:

"There are a good many donkeys in theological gardens.

Some of the best fossils are found in theological cabinets."

SOMETHING NEW UNDER THE SUN!

GOUGH'S

FRESH ARRIVAL OF SPRING OVERCOATS AND SUITS

ARE THE NOBBIEST AND NEWEST UNDER THE SUN!

Those High-Price "Clothing Dealers" can't see the funny about GOUGH'S GIFT DEPARTMENT, and claim such things as beneath them. Yes, low advertising is beyond their comprehenson, because they don't understand the first principles of Low Price System. We freely admit that we are fallen clothiers, wallowing in the lowest depths of Bed Rock Prices, while our exalted brethern look down upon us from their high places, and go wild because we capture the trade.

Farmers, Mechanics, Merchants, Bankers and Laboring men, come in and see us, take no man's word. Investigate and believe your own eyes, and you will be convinced that GOUGH is the Cheapest Clothier on earth.

This week we will offer extraordinary inducements. All our departments have been augmented with new features and choice stock, which will justly excite the admiration of all visitors. Call! It will pay as well as please you to see.

GOUGH, the Wonderful Cheap Man, Peterborough.

N.B.—Be sure of the place, four life-size signs on front of building. Look up for them.

MINDEN.

ACCIDENT.—Mr. Samuel Herron, of Mt. Irwin, met with an accident on Monday last that will likely confine him to the house for some time. While engaged hewing ties for Mr. Robert Grigor, of this place, the implement used glanced from the stick and struck his knee, leaving an ugly gash. Dr. Curry was called and dressed the wound.

DIPHTHERIA.—We are sorry to learn that this disease has broke out in two other families on the Scotch line, Anson. We were informed last week that the unwelcome visitor had entered the house of Mr. Charles Dudman, and shortly after a report reached the village that several members of Mr. Robert Hughes' family were down with the disease. The result of Mr. Dudman's family has not yet proved fatal, but Mr. Hughes buried a fine boy of ten years on Saturday last. We are glad to be able to state that the remaining members of Mr. Walter Smith's family are likely to recover, and that no other serious cases are reported. Mr. Hughes has the sympathy of the entire community.—Echo.

COUNCIL MEETING.—The Council met in Warsaw on March 19th. Present, A. R. Kidd, Esq., Reeve, and Messrs. Moore, Kirk and Webster. Absent, Mr. Crowe. The minutes of the last meeting were read and signed. On motion the report of Councillor Moore, respecting the work done by H. Hughes on the 12th line, was received and adopted, and a tax of $3.70 was allowed Mr. Hughes in full of contract for cutting out 12th line across lot 28, and said amount was abated to the Collector. It was moved by Mr. Kirk, seconded by Mr. Webster,—That a statute labor tax of $2 on roll of 1886 be abated to John McMaster on e. ½ 14, con. 7, as work is done.—Carried. The following orders were granted:—

To Alexander Small, for keep of A. Slavin	$52 00
John Hunter, sr., salary as Collector, 1886	70 00

The following by-law was passed:—To appoint Pathmasters, Poundkeepers and Fenceviewers. Council adjourned to meet on the 28th May next, as a Court of Revision.

No Difficulty With Russia.

NEW YORK, March 26.—The World's Washington correspondent says:—The extradition treaty between the United States and Russia was signed yesterday. It provides that persons convicted of, or charged with, any of the following crimes, as well as attempt to commit or participation in the same, shall be delivered up by virtue of provisions of this Convention:—1. Murder and manslaughter. 2. Rape or abortion. 3. Arson. 4. Burglary. 5. Forgery. 6. Fabrication or circulation of counterfeit money. 7. Embezzlement of public moneys by public officers or depositors. 8. Embezzlement by any person or persons hired or salaried, to the detriment of their employers, when the value of property so taken shall exceed $200. 9. Piracy or mutiny on shipboard. 10. Malicious destruction of or attempt to destroy railways, trains, vessels, bridges and dwellings.

Enjoy Life.

What a truly beautiful world we life in! Nature gives us grandeur of mountains, glens and oceans, and thousands of means of enjoyment. We can desire no better when in perfect health, but how often do the majority of people feel like giving it up disheartened, discouraged and worn out with disease, when there is no occasion for this feeling, as every sufferer can easily obtain satisfactory proof, that Green's August Flower, will make them free from disease, as when born. Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint are the direct causes of seventy-five per cent. of such maladies as Biliousness, Indigestion, Sick Headache, Costiveness, Nervous Prostration, Dizziness of the Head, Palpitation of the Heart, and other distressing symptoms. Three doses of August Flower will prove its wonderful effect. Sample bottles, 10 cents. Try it. d90

GREAT

CLEARING OUT SALE.

GENUINE .·. BARGAINS

In Each Department.

I have decided to let the whole of my present Stock go at Wholesale Cost Price. In these days people expect Bargains, and feel justified in obtaining all they can for their money.

I will give the inhabitants of Peterboro' and surrounding country a chance for once of getting Reliable Goods at prices that will, in truth, be Bargains, of which they are invited to come and judge for themselves.

The Stock consists of the usual Staple Goods besides a large variety of FANCY GOODS not to be had elsewhere in town, viz.:—

Dress Goods, Velveteens. Gloves, Hosiery and Underwear.

Blankets, Quilts, Table Linen, &c.

Small Wares in great variety.

Fancy Goods, such as Desks, Work Boxes, etc.

Fancy Work in Slippers, Cushions, Brackets, Silk and Filoselle Wools, etc.

Mens Underwear in Merino and Wool, and Mens Furnishings generally,

After 23 years' business in Peterborough, I wish to give my old customers and the public generally something unusual in Real Bargains, and will be pleased to see them as quickly as possible avail themselves of them, for, of course, those coming early will have the largest choice.

SHIRLEY CARSTONE

By ELIZA ARCHARD.

Copyrighted by American Press Association.

"What's she say's the matter with her?" asked Katy Tringle, Mis' Simpkins' gossip. Katy stretched out her long neck to hear.

"Hush! Sometimes she conceits she's got a needle in her foot and it's runnin' all over over her. Then she howls with shootin' pains up the spine of her back. Sometimes she conceits she senses a man under her bed. Then she raises the house in the middle of the night."

"They say she's got four kinds of sickness to wunst," remarked Katy.

"Yes, everybody that sets foot in the house has got to go and hear about her lungs. It's going to carry her off with the gallopin' consumption before spring, she tells folks. Then she coughs a cough like she was holler from her heels up. But old Madame Frenchy who tends her says she never coughs none at night. Her hands is as plump as a baby's and she weighs more than Shirley."

"I've heerd she can't walk, or feed herself without help," continued Katy.

"That's another of her notions," scornfully retorted Mis' Simpkins. "She senses she can't turn herself over. Every time she wants to be moved, she screeches for some of 'em to come and lift her. But she can turn herself over fast enough if she thinks nobody's lookin'. It takes her half a minnit to put every bite o' victuals into her mouth. She pretends to think she's got chalk in her jints, and they've got brittle and'll break if they're moved onexpected. She crooks her fingers that slow when anybody's lookin', till you'd think it 'twas a funeral waitin' for the corpse's cousins to take their leave. But when Madame Frenchy tells her what a purty white hand she's got, and what slim knuckles—she does it o' purpose to try her, old Mis' Frenchy does (she's smart enough, I war'nt ye)—then she forgets herself tee-totel, she does, and lifts her hand and limbers her fingers out an' out like pianna playin'. You can say what you please, but them kind o' rheumatiz I've got my opinions of."

Mis' Simpkins shut her jaws with a snap like a steel trap and ceased. Katy Tringle took up the narrative.

"The neighbors says she got nigh onto a bar'l o' doctor books, and she reads 'em all day, studyin' out what she calls her symptins. She'd better be readin' her Bible and makin' her peace with her God and her neighbors, if she's goin' to die so fast."

Katy Tringle stretched out her neck and gave a hiss not unlike a defiant goose. Indeed, both in appearance and mental qualifications, Miss Tringle resembled somewhat that invaluable domestic bird. The hiss set Mis' Simpkins going again.

"Yes, she says the doctors don't understand her case at all," says she. "Dr. Plumpkins they've rowsted out a dozen times in the night to go out there 'cause Mis' Carstone wouldn't live till morning'. Last night they sent fur him he jist naturally up and wouldn't go. I heerd every word they said myself, right next door to the doctor's shop. He told 'em he was too tired to go anywhere, and he wouldn't go to see his own mother-in-law that night."

Again this little Mis' Simpkins shut her mouth with a snap like a steel trap.

Again the old maid prompted her, and again set her going.

"Mis' Carstone ain't no more the same woman she was when he wus a livin' than if she'd turned into a porkypine. She's as cross as pizen. If they go agin her the least mossel she threatens the children she's agoin' to die, and tells 'em they'll be sorry after she's dead. But she'll be alivin' after you and me's laid out on our coolin' boards, you mark."

Which was quite true. Mis' Simpkins summed up in a final gush of emphatic opinion:

"She goes a nag, nag, naggin' from mornin' till night, and nobody's got a minit's peace in the house. Lord! Lord! if I had her, I'd take the kinks out of her!"

Then she shut her jaws with a snap which was plainly to close out.

The village gossips' diagnosis was only too correct. To this hopeless state pretty, gentle Mrs. Carstone had brought herself, simply by giving way to her emotions, and coddling her little ailments. The process is not a difficult one for anybody.

Shirley's way was not a path of roses, turn which way she would. The question of money bringing work had beset her sorely, but a beginning had been made toward settling that. The ever present Mis' Simpkins opened her mouth and decided the matter. She said to the squire:

"What's the use of makin' sich a to-do about a schoolmaster, when there's one right under your noses? Give the school to Shirley Carstone. She can write and indite and cipher as good as the Presbyterian minister hisself, if she is a female. She ain't no great shakes in years, but she'll come o' that, if she's let alone. Most of us does."

So it came about that Shirley found herself in the place the master had filled. She had taken the work that lay nearest. A dreary, distressed life she led at first. In her disappointment and inexperience, death would have been easier—far easier, indeed.

On this sullen, rainy autumn evening she had gone home from her school and summoned up all her courage, all her philosophy, to meet the situation. Harry, the youngest little boy, was dangerously ill. That afternoon was a question of his life or death. Her mother was so overcome that she went from one fainting fit into another. Between her calls for hot water and cold water and raspberry vinegar and smelling salts, and her being constantly moved, she had kept the household on the trot for hours. The sound of her peevish groanings was still in Shirley's ears as she passed into the room where baby Harry lay. A look of joy lighted his white little face as he saw the strong, tall sister. He lifted his wasted arms feebly about her neck and moaned:

"Help Harry, Shirley."

She lifted the mite of a body in her arms, and walked back and forth, soothing the child.

"You better let him die, Mademoiselle," said old Madam Frenchy. "He vill be better off. If he die now he vill go to de heaven. If he live you know not vare he vill go."

But Harry did not die. After he came to be a man he remembered that illness. He always said Shirley saved him. She was so strong and cheery and gentle that he said from the minute he saw her face that day it put new life into him.

All night she held the child in her arms. All that night, while she rocked him and soothed him and gave him his drink, she looked her future steadily in the face.

She saw that her hands were to be full for years to come. The work that lay before her was the most distasteful, dispiriting task to which her hands could have been set. She must put the poem aside. Perhaps now it would be three years before she could begin it. What then? Her range of knowledge and feeling would be all the wider, the richer and deeper, for this melancholy experience that was to be hers. So the brave spirit reasoned. But she never thought of giving up the poem. Not once.

Down the vista of years Shirley saw poverty, disappointment, toil that was hateful to her, and bitter self denial.

She saw all this and she did not shrink.

CHAPTER X.

QUIET ANNALS.

In the history of Shirley's life it is necessary to note various minor influences that shaped her destiny. In these minor influences there will be much that is uneventful. Events enough will come, however.

Shirley had been taught to think. She learned that from her father and her teacher. She was of this nature too: If she saw a wrong or a mistake, she thought first of all, Cannot this wrong and this mistake be righted?

If she set about any work she considered within herself, How could it be done in the best way? Having thus considered, she spared no labor or trouble to accomplish it in that way. She had learned this also from the two wise friends who walked with her no more.

A genius is one who can do all things well. Whatever Shirley undertook, though it were no more than the planting out of a rose tree, she did it better than the common run.

So it was with her school. From parents on one side to pupils on the other she found fronting her a jungle of self complacent ignorance. To turn the jungle into a garden of civilization—this was the task that lay before her.

Her work in the school was so remarkable that its solid results remain to this day, long after—well, long after what was to happen did happen. To this day her old pupils tell, with tears gathering in their eyes, how much they owe to Shirley Carstone.

Her school was like her life, light and shadow. At first she roused ill will sometimes. But by degrees the little mudheads were warmed and thrilled by her overpowering enthusiasm. The great mudheads at home felt the glow, till the whole mass was melted and molded under her hand.

She recognized that book conning was a small part of education. To train and equip the child at every point where his after life will touch that of his fellow man, this was to educate him. The pure, sweet home life of the stone house in the days that were vanished was like a guiding star to the girl in her work. She sought to teach the rude boys in her charge to be gentle and knightly as her father had taught her brothers.

The singing of the Carstone children had been the marvel of Linwood in the old happy days. Their mother had taught them singing, and had taken the greatest pains with them. It had been her delight to assemble them in the evening for what she called a family concert. Faults she pounced upon with a would-be iron like severity that made the children laugh at their gentle mother, while they obeyed her. Did they sound a harsh or false note? She rapped them to stop, with an awful frown.

"There, now!" she said. "Whine through your noses, do! It's so musical."

Mrs. Carstone had been an enthusiast about her children's singing. Under her watchful, loving training, their music became grateful to the ear and melodious as bird songs.

She taught them to read aloud, too. "A good reader is rarer in America than a good president," Col. Carstone had been accustomed to tell his children. There might be some presidents among the lot, perhaps, but at any rate he meant there should be several good readers. So the pretty mother, with her sweet, clear voice and correct intonations started reading school among the young ones. Here, too, she was quite critical, as with their singing. With Tom she had the most trouble. She mimicked him unmercifully.

"Your voice sounds like the rattling of beans in a pod. Here you go! Listen!"

All this came indelibly back to Shirley, when she became a teacher on her own account. She smiled to herself sadly as she found herself repeating the very expressions she had heard from her mother's lips. Shirley Carstone never gave up anything she undertook. In time her pupils learned. Their young voices took on clear cut, refined tones, which distinguished them from the ordinary country side children as though they had been of a different race. Strangers after a while came from far and near to hear the singing and reading in Shirley's school. It was nature's own melody.

To be Continued.

The Halfbreed Vote.

WINNIPEG, March 25.—Mr. Hughes, member of the Northwest council for Saskatchewan district, reports the vote in the rebel parishes at the recent election as follows:—For Laird, Batoche 43, Duck Lake 14, Fish Creek 5; for McDowall, Carleton 6, St. Louis Langevin 10; Green Lake 26, North Carleton 20; total, Laird 62, McDowall 62. All the polling places have been heard from, and the returning officers has declared Mr. McDowall elected by 161 majority.

Brain Work

Requires for its successful and pleasurable pursuit a full, uniform and continuous supply of pure, rich blood to the brain. If, through the torpidity of the liver, the blood becomes foul with bile, the brain is poisoned and overstimulated with the excess of blood which the irritated heart sends to it with frantic impulses. Dizziness, heaviness, loss of memory, impossibility of application to any kind of work, reveal the truth. To relieve this, and preserve not only the brain but the whole system in the best working order, Dr. Pierce's "Golden Medical Discovery" will be found invaluable.

Advice to Mothers.

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup should always be used when children are cutting teeth. It relieves the little sufferer at once; it produces natural, quiet sleep by relieving the child from pain, and the little cherub awakes "as bright as a button." It is very pleasant to taste. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain, relieves wind, regulates the bowels, and is the best known remedy for diarrhœa, whether arising from teething or other causes. 25 cents a bottle. Be sure and ask for "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup," and take no other kind.

To all who Buy Seeds.

"As ye sow so shall ye reap" is a truism worthy of consideration by all who are seeking for success in Garden, or Farm operations. It is evident to every thoughtful mind that Choice Flowers Fine Vegetables and Grain, cannot be produced by sowing a poor grade of Seed. With this object in view, I have been careful in selecting my Seeds for this season's operations. I make it a point to test the vitality of my Seeds before selling them to my customers, so that the disappointment of Seed not growing is greatly lessened. My stock will be found large and choice. Trusting to be favoured with an extensive patronage this season in my new establishment, Floral Drug Store, corner of George and Charlotte streets, opposite the market.

THE REV. J. WHITE.

A Big Meeting Held Last Night—How He Talks.

The Rev. J. Judd White conducted the second of his Peterborough temperance meetings in the George Street Methodist Church on Monday night.

There were over a thousand people out to hear him. The Rev. I. Tovell occupied a seat on the platform.

In opening the meeting several hymns were sung one after another, and then the Rev. Mr. White spoke a minute or two. Then there was more singing and more speaking followed.

Mr. WHITE in the course of his address said that the time would come when there would not be Women's Christian Temperance Unions, Royal Templars, or other societies, but a Christian Temperance Union in which would be men and women. Men could be members of the W.C.T.U., but they were honorary members and could not vote. He did not blame the ladies for that, because men would not allow them to vote on other matters. The time would come, however, when women would be given the franchise, as the sentiment was increasing in that direction. Some say, "Why don't the churches do this temperance work?" They do. As a rule the temperance workers are members of the churches, and the temperance organizations were an arm of the church. Women could not drive out liquor or enact prohibition, but they could keep up a racket until it was done. (A story about the wife of a man who was "born tired" illustrated this.)

"Onward, Christian Soldiers," was sung, and Mr. White, continuing, said that they had discouragements in this work. They had discouragements here—real discouragements and fancied ones. Sometimes they were owing to mistakes and sometimes not. It was a poor plan to criticise what some one else was doing until they were ready to propose something better. The temperance people earnestly and honestly desired to know the best way of get-rid of intemperance. One of the worst discouragements was that the Christian Church was not thoroughly awakened on this question. They prayed and talked all right in their religious meetings, but when they came to vote they were not altogether decided whether the saloon should go or not. In nine cases out of ten they could answer their own prayers. For them to pray that intemperance be abolished and then fold their arms and do nothing was an abomination in the sight of God, and their prayers would go no higher than their heads. They all prayed "Thy kingdom come." That prayer, if it meant anything, meant "Take me, Lord, and use me; give me physical power, mental power and soul purity, and set me all on fire to do what I can to bring Thy kingdom." They had encouragements. The temperance sentiment was growing. He believed that the Spirit of God was working on the minds of the people, and that a temperance wave would spread over the land that would lead to a religious revival. Another encouragement was the bitter opposition they had aroused. The Scott Act was doing good. Some objected that it caused perjury. He answered that objection by a story. When he was a young man he used to be out late nights, and it troubled his mother. One morning she said to him, "My son, I fear you were in bad company last night." He could evade that, and did. Finally she came near him and said, "My son, weren't you playing cards and drinking last night?" That was a direct question that he could not evade, and he told a lie. He felt very mean about it afterwards, and never forgot it. Did his mother do wrong to force him to that point? She caused him to tell a lie. But did she do wrong? Eh? No, she did not. Neither did the Scott Act do wrong if it forced an hotel-keeper into a corner. If there was perjury, there must be something wrong with the law against perjury if it was not punished. Hurrah for the Scott Act! (Applause). The Scott Act was not what they asked for, but they had it and should use it, and get a better law as soon as they could. Some men said they would not vote for the Scott Act, but they would for prohibition. Once an Englishman and an Irishman had a piece of beef just large enough for one. Each one took hold of it with his teeth, and the one that pulled it from the other was to have it. "Are ye ready?" asked the Irishman. "Yaw," answered the Englishman, and as he opened his mouth to answer away went the beef. They should not be fooled into giving up the Scott Act to get prohibition, but should hold on to it and at the same time work for prohibition. The bitter opposition they were meeting showed that they were making themselves felt.

Mr. TOVELL gave a brief and very effective address.

The Rev. temperance apostle has a peculiar style of doing his work. He is not of the stereotyped stamp of temperance orators. He is remarkably cool in his speech and also remarkably cutting in his sarcasm in a quiet way. A good idea of what he talks like may be had from the following story he told on Monday night:—My pet theme is "the boys." I want to save the boys. I don't want them to know what I have known (though I haven't gone far on the opposite line) and I don't want them to see what I have seen. In the good old times of the Roman Republic a certain Campanian lady put on her silks and satins and went to make a visit. She went to visit Mrs. Gracchus, mother of the Gracchi and daughter of Scipio Africanus. She loaded herself with jewelry, put rings in her ears and in her nose and on fingers till she could get no more on. What she could not get on she carried in a little bag. It was a custom among the heathens, you know, to load themselves with jewelry. The women in Christian lands don't do such a thing. (A movement in the audience.) Well, the Campanian lady dressed herself the very best and went to Mrs. Gracchus' house to show off. That was another absurd custom among the heathens. Of course Christian women never dress themselves up to show off. Well, she showed herself off, and after she had exhibited her fine dress and her jewelry she was surprised that Mrs. Gracchus didn't show off in return. "Why," said she, "where are your jewels?" Mrs. Gracchus made no reply at the time, but in a few minutes in came her two robust, ruddy sons. They must have been robust from the vigor they showed in after life in moulding Roman history. They ran up to her, and, putting one arm around one and the other around the other, she said: "These, madam, are my jewels." The speaker then went on with an urgent appeal for mothers to save their boys.

Mr. White sang, "It was Rum that Spoiled my Boy," and was loudly applauded. After an invitation had been given to the ladies to remain and join the W. C. T. U. the meeting closed with singing and the benediction.

This evening's meeting will be held in the George Street Church, commencing at 8 o'clock.

Children's Button Boots for 80 cents at Kidd's are really good.

Missionary Meeting.

There was a large number of people at St. Luke's Church School room on Monday night to hear the Rev. J. Gough Brick. The Rev. Mr. Bradshaw spoke for a short time encouraging the people to greater missionary effort. Mr. John Burnham, ex-M. P., addressed the meeting for a time dealing with missionary subjects generally. The Rev. Mr. Brick followed, giving a graphic description of the country, climate and his work among the Indians. His address was exceedingly interesting. A handsome amount was raised to assist the reverend missionary in his work. The Rev. Mr, Brick will address a meeting in St. John's Church School House this evening.

A TERRIBLE FALL.

FUR BEARING ANIMALS.

To the Editor of the Review.

DEAR SIR,—I had no intention of giving you any further trouble respecting the above subject until asked to give the opinion of several parties competent to arrive at a just and unbiased conclusion. We maintain the proper season to trap is from the 15th of October to the 1st day of May in each year, notwithstanding any thing that may be said to the contra by an over-anxious, interested or mistaken individual. A petition amounts to very little beyond a few hours spent in obtaining signatures. It would not take long to secure a thousand petitions to leave the law as it was in 1886. To shorten the season would be to introduce an act that none but the Indian community would observe, nor could a thousand inspectors enforce this law in the Province of Ontario, therefore, to further shorten the close season would practically amount to taking the bread out of the aborigine's mouth with no benefit to any other party. This is now becoming an agricultural country and the only hunting grounds left us are the marshes, creeks, lakes, etc., which are ours by inheritance, and all we ask is our just rights. We want no sympathy, no offensive interference, nor no sickly smiles from people who lately came to our country. When we want our laws changed we shall not ask the assistance of the meddlers who were not born on our soil.

Yours truly,
WOOMPOON.

FOUL PLAY FEARED.

Mysterious Disappearance of a Bradford Man Near Montreal.

MONTREAL, March 28.—A medical student of McGill Universary named Albert Hamer belonging to Brantford, Ont., who passed his examination with destinction last Thursday and was to receive his degree at convocation to-morrow, has mysteriously disappeared under strange circumstances, and without leaving any clue as to what he intended to do. On Thursday afternoon, in company with three of his fellow-students, he went for a sleigh drive to Black River, about seven miles from the city. Before leaving he cashed a cheque at a bank here for $100, and took the money with him. On their return the party stopped at an hotel about half way, kept by a man named Frignon. While the party were inside Young Hamer, who is 22, went outside and did not return, when his companions, thinking he had gone on before, drove home, but did not see him. They then returned to the hotel, but nothing had been seen or heard of him. After a search they returned to the city and engaged a detective to go out and if possible find what had become of him. After visiting the farmers' houses in the neighbourhood the officers met a habitant who, on being questioned, said a young man corresponding to the description given of Hamer had called at his house and enquired the way to the railway station. The habitant having a boy in his employ who spoke English accompanied Hamer, he said, to Frignon's hotel and left him there, after his companions had taken their departure. Frignon, on being asked by the detective if Hamer had returned, absolutely denied that he came to the house after his first disappearance. Both the farmer and his boy maintained that he did, and that they left him there when they started for home. The landlord admitted that Hamer had produced his money while paying something at the bar and that it was dangerous to come out there with so much in his pocket. Further search has taken place, but with no result as to finding any tidings to Hamer's whereabouts, and fears are entertained that he has met with foul play.

MANITOBA POLICE FORCE.

R. Latouche Tupper Formerly of Peterborough Appointed Chief—His Previous Career.

Many of our readers will remember Mr. R. L. Tupper and will be glad to learn that he has received the appointment of chief of the provincial police force of Manitoba, a position of which he is well qualified. We take from the Winnipeg Manitoban the following particulars of his very active life:—

The appointment to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Chief Constantine, of the provincial police force, has at last been made, the successful applicant being Mr. R. L. Tupper, chief license inspector for the province of Manitoba. It is understood that Mr. Tupper will combine the offices, and that the police headquarters will be removed from the old place to the Government buildings. Mr. Tupper, the new chief, is a son of Captain Tupper, who came to Canada with Sir Francis Hincks and served through the rebellion of 1836-7, and had charge of the department at Bowmanville, Ont. Capt. Tupper afterwards with the late Judge Smith, of Lindsay, Ont., commenced trading at Peterborough, putting up the fist frame building there, known as the old red store. Mr. Tupper was born in Cavan, county of Durham. He served for two and a half years in the American army and went through the military school at Toronto upon his return. He was a member of the Lindsay company of Rifles under Col. Deacon during the Fenian raid and afterwards joined the Queen's Own of Toronto. He was six years engaged on the C. P. R. and Government telegraph surveys and was subsequently appointed license inspector for the province. He went to the front in the rebellion with the Winnipeg Light infantry as captain and quartermaster. On the passing of the license act of 1886, he was made chief inspector of Manitoba. He has held that position since, and as stated he will combine it with his new office as chief of provincial police.

"Most Secret."

The Ottawa correspondent of the Toronto World sent the following on March 27:—I was informed by a member of the Cabinet this evening that the Government have been in possession of Mr. Blake's letter of resignation for two and a half weeks. The Minister stated that the reason the Government did not mention the matter in any way outside the council room until after it appeared in the World was because of its being marked "most secret and confidential." "It afforded the Ministers not a little amusement," said the hon. gentleman, "to see the Globe stoutly denying that such a letter had been written, while we were in possession of a bona fide copy of the same."

WEDNESDAY, MARCH 30, 1887.

PORT HOPE.

SMASH ON THE G. T. R.—A bad smash-up occurred on the Grand Trunk Railway, near Oshawa, on Saturday. A freight train coming east was derailed three miles this side of that station, about four o'clock in the afternoon, by a broken axle under the tender. It was in a cutting, and the tender slewed round and piled the cars one on top of the other across the track. No lives were lost, fortunately. The night express train had to trans-ship passengers, mails and baggage, and track was not clear till 12 o'clock noon on Sunday. Traffic was suspended for twenty hours.

OFF THE TRACK.—A run-off occurred on the Midland Railway at Garden Hill station on Saturday morning about ten o'clock to a freight train going north. The train was about shunting from the main line into a siding, but an accumulation of ice on the switch threw the train from the track, and before it could be stopped ten cars were off the rails. The auxiliary was sent for and a gang of men were sent out out from the shops here to replace the cars. The men did not return until half past four on Saturday afternoon. But little more can be learned. No one was hurt and the damage seems not to have been very considerable. The morning express going north did not get out until between three and four in the afternoon.—Times.

INTO RICE LAKE.—An amusing episode occurred on Rice Lake on Friday afternoon in which two well-known Port Hopers figured prominently. Mr. Ed. Truscott was on a cattle-buying expedition and was accompanied by Mr. James Reynolds. They were at the head of the lake and took a short cut across the ice to reach a farm house. Everything ran merrily until—smash—splash and the horse, cutter and occupants were through an air crack. The horse sturggled until exhausted when it stood: its hind legs in the water and its front legs on the ice. "Jimmy" had read somewhere about choking a horse to prevent its drowning. The horse in this case was not drowning but "an ounce of prevention," etc. He tied a strap around its throat and choked and pulled until the animal was safely above the ice. Aside from a wetting no harm was done.—Times.

SMITH.

To the Editor of the Review.

SIR,—A social entertainment was held in the Wesley church, 16th con. Smith, March the 16th, in aid of the S School. A sufficient amount was raised to put the school in working order. Praise in due to the superintendent for the able manner in which he has conducted the school in the past. The entertainment was enjoyed immensely by all and especially by uncle Joe. The programme consisted of songs, readings, recitations, duets, solos and trios, it was amusing the applause given in favour of the latter, for the clapping of hands and the shower of coburgs that met the floor would convince you that no person in the audience wore corns on their toes. The new organ purchased from Mr. Graham of Lakefield, which arrived just in time for the occasion, is a little beauty it is thought the instrument will be the means of improving the singing in that church. However, one of the members kicked a little, and if that member would sit down and think the matter over and unless a drone he will see that these parties that made such an effort raised the money and put it in the organ should get his sympathy and co-operation. The autograph quilt which was so extensively canvassed and completed was presented by the congregation to their pastor, Mr. Adam.

THE OCEAN YACHT RACE.

Details of the Voyage in Which the Yacht Coronet was Victorious.

When the excursion boat, which accompanied the racing yachts as far as Sandy Hook light ship, turned back on the day of the start, Saturday, March 12th, the relative positions of the schooners were nearly the same as when they passed through the narrows. The first Sunday was marked by a gale which came from the north east soon after midnight. Though moderate it was accompanied by a strong head sea, which made the yacht labor. The waves frequently broke over the bows, but she rode it out well. Thus early were the sea-going qualities of the Coronet tried. The only damage sustained was the parting of the iron twin buckle of the starboard bobstay. This was quickly replaced with double block tackle. In the afternoon the gale abated, and was succeeded by a light breeze from the northwest and intermittent rains. The sea prevented the spread of canvas.

The most terrific storm occurred on St. Patrick's day. It developed soon after midnight. At 10 a. m it began blowing with great velocity; by noon it had become a hurricane; two hours later the wind's speed was estimated at 80 miles an hour. It was a grand battle of the elements. The waves were mountain-high. Their surface was lashed into snow white foam, and as the head of one rose higher than another the wind carried it off in dense spray, which, when driven into one's face, felt like stabs from scores of fine-pointed needles. The roaring of the wind was like a prolonged peal of thunder, and the resemblance was completed by an occasional vivid flash of lightning. This was a severe test for the Coronet. As she sank into the trough of sea it seemed as if the waves, which were half mast high, would engulph her. Under reefed foretop-sail she was plunged along by the wind at the rate of nine knots, and, despite great volumes of water breaking over her deck, weathered the storm wonderfully well. When at 5.20 p. m. the fury of the hurricane seemed to be increasing rather than diminishing, Captain Crosby, fearful that the yacht would not hold together much longer if driven through such a sea, and not being willing to jeopardise his own life and the lives of those on board by running at night, where it was reasonable to suppose there were icebergs, decided to lay to until the storm had ceased. The yacht on Thursday noon had travelled 211.2 miles since the previous noon. The weather on Friday and Saturday, the 18th and 19th, began with light breezes, and in the afternoon there were gales, though moderate compared with Thursday's big blow. Saturday was a red letter day for vessels being sighted. The run as computed Friday noon was 135 miles. Saturday noon the day's run was 251.1 miles.

The theory that storms swing around in a circle was thoroughly proven by the Coronet's experience on the second Sunday, when she ran through a revolving gale which was nearly as terrific as that of the 17th. Monday, March 21st., began with a propituous breeze, but it was as inconsistent as had been all the winds hitherto during the trip. Soon after noon it veered around bringing the diurnal gale from the north-east. As the yacht had already been driven farther south than the navigator had intended, it was decided to keep her head up to the wind and wait for more favorable breezes. The head wind continued blowing until Wednesday noon. During that forty-eight hours the yacht was almost at a standstill, avaraging under two knots. The distant covered form Sunday noon to Monday noon was 202 miles, to Tuesday noon 388 miles, and to Wednesday noon 508 miles. Thursday afternoon a good sailing breeze arose from the south-west, continuing with more or less regularity throughout Friday, Saturday and Sunday, giving an opportunity for rapid progress. During that period the Coronet logged as high as 14 knots. At noon Thursday she had sailed 218.6 miles in 24 hours, Friday 225.5 miles, and Saturday 291.5 miles.

Mizzed Head, on the south-west coast of Ireland, was sighted at 6.37 in the morning and 7.40 Fastnet light bore north north-west nine miles away. The yacht was then bowling along under all light sails at the rate of twelve knots an hour. The weather was clear and warm and the gradual unfolding of the beautiful scenery along the Irish coast was hailed with delight by those on board. At 6:57 Galley Head was abeam, and the Cork pilot boat Columbine was in sight. At 20:3, when the yacht was abreast of Seven Heads, Pilot Robert Welsh came on board with news that that the Cononet was the first to arrive. Along the coast and in the harbor scores of vessels of all sorts were passed. All dipped their ensigns to the winner, and the crew of all cheered. At 1.30, the Cornet's anchor was dropped off the Cork yacht club house Capatian Anderson says the weather was the worst he ever experienced in all his 17t Atlantic passages.

The Dauntless passed the imaginary line at the finish by actual time precisely 23 hours and 40 minutes behind the Coronet. The experience of those on board set at naught those of the crew and guests on the Coronet. They say the Dauntless being a smaller vessel was pitched about in a most bewildering manner, and to prevent her from foundering she was hove to several times. Her sails were split and lost, and the rigging was parted several times by the heavy strain put upon it. Capt. Samuels and crew are badly used up by the shaking they received.

A comparison of the logs of the two racers indicate that they followed about the same course. Mr. Caldwell Colt, owner of the Dauntless, says he encountered more wind than he bargained for. For sixteen hours his boat was obliged to lay to. Once she scudded before the gale under bare poles.

THE CRIMES BILL.

The Discussion Continued by Mr. Gladstone and Mr. Goschen.

LONDON, March 29.—In the House of Commons to-day Mr. Gladstone resumed the debate on the Irish Criminal Law Amendment Bill. He was loudly cheered when he arose. He said that in an issue so grave, proposals so extreme as these now put forth by the Government required ample time for consideration. He found himself bound to support Mr. Parnell's amendment because the ground upon which Mr. Balfour based the Government's case was absolutely insufficient and unsatisfactory. The Government's bill, instead of being a cure for Irish ills, or even a palliative, was a measure that would aggravate the deepest seated and worse disorders. "With this Coercion Bill," exclaimed Mr. Gladstone, "the prospect of conciliation has vanished into thin air. The Government intend to exclude the Land Bill, which was the main recommendation of the commission which has just completed an exhausitve investigation of the Irish troubles. Nothing remains but the figure of coercion, bare, bald and gaunt, alas! too familiar." The Chief Secretary for Ireland had attempted to excuse the proposals on the ground that crime in Ireland during the last three years has increased, but he has followed an unusual course in refraining from giving the House official information proving his allegations. The statistics of crime in Ireland were against the Government.

It was the first time he (Gladstone) knew of anonymous assertions being imposed on Parliament in support of a demand for legislation. (Cheers). A demand was made upon the House to commit the most formidable breach of trust that a popular assembly could perpetrate, to relax the conditions upon which alone Parliament should sanction a change in the criminal laws, in order that the law might fall with increased stringency upon a particular portion of the Queen's subjects. The Opposition would insist upon having the fullest opportunity to examine the provisions of the bill. Every Irish and English member should have the fullest scope for presenting his views and for sifting and scrutinizing the extreme proposals of the Government. Among its most insulting and exasperating proposals, the worst ever submitted to Parliament—was the provision that Irish trials be held in London. He had never known such a blow at the national feeling of Ireland. The Government could have devised nothing more likely to aggravate every existing evil. As to the permanent duration of the bill, the proposals made one's blood boil. To establish what was formerly only a temporary remedy as a permanent rule of existence for society in Ireland would put a brand of inferiority upon Ireland forever, recognizing as a fixed principle that force was a remedy. The lesson of many years was that force was no remedy. Since the bulk of the Liberals had judged that it was both right and safe to grant Home Rule, Ireland had been free from crime and outrage—a condition long unknown. Why was this? It was because the Irish people knew that a large—though insufficiently large—body of Liberals had adopted their interests, and would abide by them to the last. [Cheers]. If the Liberals acceded to the appeals of the Government the result would be a retrogression. The Irish people would return to ask some things which Liberal efforts had already partly remedied So long as Ireland continued in her present course of moderation, so long would the Liberals be bound to persevere in endeavors to assist her. The time would soon come when to the many now supporting the cause of Ireland would be added many more, when deplorable proposals such as those of the Government would be no more associated with the name of Ireland, and when it would be seen that in doing what they could now to serve the Irish cause they were also serving the cause of the wide Empire of Great Britain.

Mr. Gochen taunted Mr. Gladstone with his alliance with the National League. Everybody but the allies of the league, he said, considered the state of Ireland to be intolerable. The Government would be disgraced if it refrained from frustrating the efforts of the enemies of the existing laws and the opponents of whatever remedial measures the Government might propose.

ANOTHER MINISTERIAL CRISIS.

PARIS, March 28.—The Budget Committee, by a vote of 14 to 4, has rejected the supplementary credits asked by the Government. A ministerial crisis is believed to be inevitable.

THE DUCHESS OF CUMBERLAND.

VIENNA, March 28.—The Duke and Duchess of Cumberland dined at the British Embassy here on the 10th inst. The Duchess was then in her usual spirits, except that she confessed herself homesick. It is now stated that her malady is severe melancholia. The Duke has daily visited the asylum in which the Duchess is confined, but he is not allowed to see her.

RIOT IN PARIS.

PARIS, March 29.—Yesterday a mob attacked and broke the windows in the employment registries in the Quartier Des Hollies. Louisa Michel participated in the riotous demonstration, but she was menaced by the market women and compelled to take refuge in the police station.

THE CHURCH AND LABOR.

ROME, March 29.—In Cardinal Gibbons' report on the Knights of Labor, the Cardinal refers to the fundimental principle of American existance, that of popular power, regulated by love of order, respect for religion and obedience to laws. He recognizes that the great question of the future is not a question of war, commerce or finance, but a social question touching the amelioration of the condition of the popular masses, especially workingmen. Therefore, it is of sovereign importance that the Church be found always ranged on the side of humanity and justice toward the multitude composing the body of the human family. The condition of the lower classes at present connot and should not continue.

FATHER RYAN'S ARREST.

DUBLIN, March 29.—Ten thousand persons assembled at Thurles to greet Father Ryan. Father Duyer addressed him on behalf of Archbishop Croke, who fully approved of Father Ryan's action. Similar ovations were tendered to Father Ryan along the route. On his arrival at Dublin two thousand Nationalists escorted him in the Mayor's carriage to the Imperial Hotel. At Thurles yesterday Father Ryan, in a short speech, said that his prison would be a palace, and that had justice but power to erect a gallows it would not intimidate him. The Herbertstown tenants have vowed that they will not pay rent until Father Ryan and farmer Marony are released.

CHAMBERLAIN'S LETTER.

LONDON, March 29.—Mr. Chamberlain has written a letter in which he closely follows the argument of Lord Hartington's manifesto. He concludes as follows:—"The indiscreet zeal of these recent converts has shelved the entire Liberal programme, in order to clear the way for the propagation of a new dogma, formerly accounted poisonous heresy, but now suddenly elevated to the position of a cardinal article of the Liberal creed."

ANTI-COERCION CAVE.

LONDON, March 29.—It is rumored that an Anti-Coercion Conservative cave is being formed, under the leadership of Lord Carnarvon.

LORD LANSDOWNE'S TENANTS.

LONDON, March 29.—Lord Lansdowne has offered to stop the eviction of tenants who will pay any portion of their rent, without costs, and will allow those who accept these terms ample time to pay the balance.

FREE FROM ALARM.

BERLIN, March 29.—In spite of threatening reports from St. Petersburg and Bulgaria diplomatic circles here consider the general situation to be free from alarm.

BRITISH CONSUL SAFE.

LONDON, March 29.—The Government is advised of the safety of Mr. Johnston, consul at the Camerons, who it was reported, had been seized by the natives.

A PLOT AND ARRESTS.

VIENNA, March 29.—The Tagblatt says a new plot has been discovered at Philippopolis, and that two hundred arrests have been made.

FRESH REVOLT IN BULGARIA.

VIENNA, March 29.—At Fort Calaroschi, opposite Silistria, sharp firing has been heard from the Bulgarian fortress, and it is supposed that a fresh revolt has occurred. The commander at Calaraschi has doubled the outposts on the Danube.

LEFT LONDON.

LONDON, March 29.—The Queen left London this morning for Cannes.

THANKS TENDERED.

BERLIN, March 29.—Emperor William has thanked the French Government for the congratulations tendered him on the occasion of his 90th anniversary.

ATTEMPTED ASSASSINATION.

ST. PETERSBURG, March 29.—General Gresser, while riding in a street, was fired at with a revolver, but was not hurt. His would-be-murderer was immediately arrested, but committed suicide as sood as taken into custody.

REFUSALS TO PAY RENT.

DUBLIN, March 29.—Herbertstown tenants have vowed that they will not pay rent until Father Ryan and Farmer Moroney are released.

RUSSIAN RIVALS.

LONDON, March 29.—Advices from Moscow report that a regular campaign has commenced for supremacy in the councils of the Empire between Mm. Kalkoff and De Giers.

POISON ON THEIR PERSONS.

ST. PETERSBURG, March 29.—It is stated that all the Nihilists arrested for complicity in the recent unsuccessful attempt on the Czar's life, when taken into custody, wore small bottles of poison on their bosoms, and that secret agents had been deputed to smash these bottles in the event of the assassin retracting from his task at the last moment.

A CURIOUS SUIT.

ST. PETERSBURG, March 29.—When Prince Alexander of Battenberg was deposed from the Bulgarian throne and escorted out of the country by conspirators, he accepted from them 4,900*l.*, to pay his way to Darmstadt. The money was handed to him at Remi, in Bessarabi, where the Prince's kidnappers parted with him. A suit to recover the sum has been inaugurated by the rebels who made the loan.

A GROWING EVIL.

As in ninety-nine out of every hundred disputes the cause of dispute may be traced to a question of fact, it is to be deeply regretted that the "statements of fact" made by our public men, with reference to public matters, are, as a rule, becoming less and less to be relied upon—even when their statements are made in the face of Parliament, and after they have had ample opportunity to refresh their memories before making such statements.

Take as an illustration the most recent occurrence of this kind which has come under our notice. During the earlier days of the present session of the Ontario Legislature Mr. Mowat was asked, after two days' notice of the question to be put had been given and printed in the proceedings of the House, why the vacant Registrarship of Lennox had not been filled. And to this he replied that it was because there were so many well qualified applicants that the Government had been unable to decide between them. So far, so good; but on the 24th inst. another question is put to Mr. Mowat, as leader of the Government, after the same notice, which again brings up this Lennox appointment, when, lo and behold, this same Mr. Mowat informs the House, and through it the country, that the position of Registrar of Lennox had been disposed of in December last just previous to the general election, and that when he had given his previous answer "it had passed from his mind that they had dealt with this office in December last."

Now, without being chargable with a desire to fix upon Mr. Mowat a charge of deliberate falsehood, and without refusing to accept Mr. Mowat's own explanation of how he came to give a reply so contrary to the actual facts, we think we are justified in pointing out that the statements of facts made by even so high minded and honorable a politician as Mr. Mowat cannot be relied upon. Let us look at the facts connected with this case for a moment. Owing to the mental condition of the late Registrar of Lennox the office has been practically at the disposal of the Mowat Government for a considerable period. Just before the last general election for this Province was announced the late Registrar was removed, and all those that aspired thereto were put on the qui vive. This state of affairs, so far as the public were aware, was allowed to continue until Mr. Mowat made his last announcement. As a matter of fact, however, just before polling day Mr. Mowat and his colleagues came to a decision with reference to this and several other little vacancies, and the lucky men to receive them were decided upon, but their appointments were not published. Early in March a notice is put on the notice paper of the Legislature, that after two days the Government will be asked whether the vacant Registrarship of Lennox had been filled? And to this question, under such circumstances, Mr. Mowat replies that the position has not been filled owing to there being so many meritorious applicants for it, notwithstanding that Mr. Gibson had been selected better than a month before for the position, and had as good as the appointment in his pocket.

We must confess that it is rather hard for us to believe that all this escaped Mr. Mowat's memory, not for a moment, but for the days the question was pending, unless it be that his memory has so failed that he is unfit for the position that he holds. But if it did it proves conclusively first, that Mr. Mowat's statements of fact, no more than those of any one else, can be relied upon, and secondly, that Mr. Mowat and his friends should be exceedingly careful how they charge their opponents with not speaking the whole truth and nothing but the truth. A man from whose mind things pass so easily as this Lennox Registrarship appears to have passed from that of Mr. Mowat, should certainly be very slow to charge others with a wilful suppression of facts.

CANADA'S LAND ASSETS.

THE Toronto News says of the Northwest lands that "if they are to be granted to railway corporations, syndicates, speculators, or absentee capitalists, then they are not assets that have any value to the public." Business men will be apt to think that if portions of the lands are granted to capitalists, railway corporations, &c., in exchange for railways to open up and render valuable other portions of the land, the real estate assets of the public, that is of the people of Canada, are thereby increased in value. This is exactly the principal on which a private land-owner acts when he devotes a portion of his land to roads in order to give access to his building lots and render them saleable. His neighbours are not so foolish as to accuse him of wasting his assets, even though he should pay his road maker by giving him one of the building lots. This private landowner is not so foolish as to expect some one to come along who will buy the right of way and gratuitously make roads for him, nor to hope that people will buy his building lots without access to them. The present Dominion Administration transacts the business of the people of Canada on sensible, practical business principles, and, therefore, puzzles cranky theorists, who forget that ministers are merely agents chosen by the people to do their business, and seem to think that ministries have some mysterious power of making something out of nothing and freely helping those who will not help themselves.

ONTARIO LEGISLATURE

THE FIRST SESSION OF THE SIXTH PROVINCIAL PARLIAMENT.

Stock Disposed of at the Agricultural Farm—The Care of Lunatics—Another Instance of Patronage Exposed—Bills Advanced.

MONDAY, March 28.—Several petitions were presented and a number of bills were introduced. Two private bills were read the third time and others advanced a stage.

AGRICULTURAL FARM SALES.

Mr. A. M. Ross, in reply to Mr. Preston, said that nothing had been done in regard to retaining in the Province the surplus stock of the Agricultural farm further than the regulation providing that the expenses of the transport of animals purchased in Ontario should be paid to any part of the Province.

LUNATICS IN GAOLS.

Mr. PRESTON moved for a return regarding the number of lunatics confined in gaols and the asylum provision being made for them. He called attention to the number of lunatics in the gaols, and urged that the Government should provide a remedy.

Mr. HARDY said that the subject was an important one. The difficulty was that there were in the asylums a number of harmless patients who ought to be provided for in their own localities. He did not know whether the Government should not erect a large central asylum for the chronic harmless cases, of which there were about one thousand; or the Government could convert one of the present institutions into a retreat of the kind. Until this was done the asylums would be crowded. There were only 23 patients out at present on probation supposed to be cured, a very small number. There were 1,879 lunatics at present in the asylums, and 90 in the common gaols, exclusive of idiots. The gaols offered the only places at present for accommodating persons suddenly struck with violent insanity, and they were generally well looked after. There were cottages either erected or in process of erection which would accommodate 500 more within a year or a year and a half. There was no doubt that insanity had increased in the province, but not to the extent supposed. The fact was that as accommodation increased there was a tendency to increase in the number of applicants. Admission was often sought to give relief to the finances of the family or locality, and persons were often sent to the asylums who who should not be sent. In 1881 the proportion of lunatics was in Great Britain 1 in every 395; in British America, 1 in 852; in the Northern United States 1 in 527; in Southern States, 1 in 663. There was no doubt the ratio increased in proportion to the accommodation. Ontario was estimated by Dr. Burk, of London, to be 1 in 600, or about 2,500. Dr. Clark's estimate was 1 in 700, or 2,200. With a large central building such as he had indicated, the Government would probably have room for the next ten years.

Mr. MEREDITH thought the Government ought to deal with this question in a broad, comprehensive way. If the harmless patients could be provided for in place something like the poorhouses, the country would save a great expenditure. Then in a large number of cases the families were well able to support them, and care ought to be taken that their responsibility was not evaded.

After further discussion the motion passed.

VACANT OFFICES.

Mr. MEREDITH moved for a return regarding the vacancy in office of the Clerk for the Division Court at Picton.

Mr. HARDY said that Mr. Boyle was appointed in August, 1885, and had since filled the office. It was stipulated that the appointment should be temporary, and there were several applications for the position in consequence. The Government were considering the point.

The motion passed.

A number of bills were given their second reading, and the House adjourned at six o'clock.

THE Brockville Recorder invites us to join with it in slandering the judiciary. We decline to do so. We believe that the Canadian judges honestly administer the law as they find it, but this by no means invalidates our contention that the Reformers eagerly advance mere technical objection against the election of Conservatives, while clamouring against Reform candidates being subject either to the letter or the spirit of the law.

IT is hardly worth the trouble to expose the inconsistencies of the Reform leaders, for they have not a rag of consistency left. We will, therefore, only briefly call attention to the fact that Mr. Mowat's appointment of Mr. Badgerow as County Attorney of York is in direct defiance of the old Grit howlings against the appointment of members to public offices and especially in their own constituencies.

The Globe says that the Conservative members of the Legislature are generally in their places in the House and attentive to their duties, and that the same cannot be said for certain supporters of the Government.

THE Hon. Mr. Macdougall, to judge by his recent utterances on the fishery question, is still "looking to Washington." We believe Mr. Macdougall is not eligible for the Presidency.

The Exasperating Majority.

Many elections have been carried by the fatal but exasperating majority of one, and yet no allegation of untrustworthiness has been alleged or committed. A case of that kind occurred some years ago in South Oxford, when the late Mr. Skeffington Connor was elected. And it was said at the time that it arose in this way: Just as the polls were about to close a voter was rushed up to the polling clerk (it was open voting then), and the question asked, "For whom do you vote?" Some one called out, "Vote for Connor," when the voter turned round and called in a stuttering way, "Connor"—intending to add, "be d——d," but he was too late. The scrutineer for Mr. Connor said, "Thank you; for Mr. Connor," and the vote was so recorded, and thus that excellent Reformer was duly returned, the vote of the stuttering elector turning the scale in his favor by one vote. Upon such trivial things do elections sometimes hang.—London Free Press.

In Case of War.

A good story is told on the new Governor of California. J. W. B. Montgomery had been tendered the position of Brigadier-General of the Fifth Brigade, and went to Sacramento to consult with the Governor about the matter. He walked into the latter's office and remarked: "Well, Governor, I have come to tell you that I will accept that office as long as there's peace, but I want it understood that in case of war you are to accept my resignation." "Oh," replied Commander-in-Chief Bartlett, "that's all right. If there's ever a war I propose to resign myself."—Chico Enterprise.

He Signed the Pledge.

When brought up for sentence on Saturday Scott, the forger, looked naturally very anxious. Judge Rose remarked that if he considered the prisoner appreciated the penalty when committing the forgery, he would have sentenced him for life; but taking into consideration all the circumstances of the case, he reserved judgment, upon the prisoner's entering into recognisance to appear when called upon and signing the pledge. The prisoner accepted the alternative and signed the pledge on the spot.—Belleville Intelligencer.

DUNN'S BAKING POWDER

THE COOK'S BEST FRIEND

EVERY FACULTY SUSPENDED.

Singular Case of Loss of Identity and Mysterious Restoration.

A Morristown, Pa., special says:—A most remarkable case of loss of identity, recalling the story of Griffith Gaunt, is agitating society circles here. Surgeon-General L. W. Read says it is the most peculiar in his wide range of experience.

Six weeks ago a strange gentleman of good address came here and rented the store, No. 252 East Main street. He divided the room into two apartments by means of curtains. The rear he furnished and occupied as a living room; the front he stocked with notions and toys and did a modest but successful business. The family from whom he rented the store came in daily contact with their tenant, but neither they nor any of his patrons ever noticed anything peculiar in his manner or habits. He visited Philadelphia several times, replenishing his stock, and conducted his business carefully.

No mental obliquity was noticed until yesterday morning, when he knocked at the door leading from the store to the dwelling part of the building. Mrs. Earl, who answered the knock, was surprised to hear him ask, "Where am I?" She tried to convince him of his whereabouts, but failing her husband came to her assistance. To him the tenant made the following statement: "I awoke about 4 o'clock this morning after dreaming that I was buying and selling merchandise. I discovered that I was in a store, and was seized with the fear that I would be arrested as a burglar. Now I want to know where I am." He could not be made to believe that he was in Norristown, or that he visited Philadelphia recently. He only answered: "I was in Philadelphia twenty-eight years ago, but not since that time."

Dr. Read was then summoned and to him the stranger made the following statement: "Doctor, I have just awakened from a confused dream. I am informed that I am in Norristown, Pa., and that this is March 14. If this is true the last two months have been an entire blank to me. Yesterday I left my home in Coventry, R. I. But that was the morning of Jan. 18. I drove to Green's station, on the New England Railroad, left my horse and carriage in charge of a friend, went to Providence, drew $500 from the bank, called at several places, including the store of my nephew, Andrew Harris, No. 121 Broad street, opposite the Narragansett hotel, and left there to go to my sister's residence on Westminster street. I have a distinct recollection of having passed the Adams' express office, corner of Dorrance and Broad streets, but have no recollection of a single event since that time. I am a minister of the gospel, my name is Ansel Bourne, and I am 61 years of age."

Dr. Read left him in the care of Mr. Earle's family, with instructions to partake copiously of food. He then telegraphed Andrew Harris: "Do you know Ansel Bourne? Please answer," and received the following reply: "He is my uncle. Wire me where he is and if well. Write particulars."

Mr. Bourne is rapidly regaining his faculties and is anxiously awaiting the arrival of relatives, when he will dispose of his stock of notions and toys and return home. He is a man of good address, fine appearance and an interesting talker.

Dr. Read is completely mistified thus far, and will venture no opinion on the case.

KILLED BY A DEER.

A Terrible Experience in the Parry Sound District.

Edwin Warren, a son of John Warren, formerly of the Tin Cap, near Brockville, and who removed to Parry Sound with his family some few years ago, recently met with a fatal accident in that district. He and a companion having set some hare traps in the woods, went one evening to take a look at them. On their way they were confronted by a large buck deer which the dogs had started. The animal made an attack upon Warren, who held a shotgun in his hand. He being on snowshoes could not get out of the way quick enough, and the animal, mad with rage, struck and knocked him down. Getting up he struck the buck with his gun, which was loaded. This caused it to go off, the charge entering the young man's right leg near the hip joint, shattering the bone. His companion and the dog succeeded in keeping the animal at bay, which soon afterwards disappeared. Warren had to lie on the snow while his companion started for help and in two hours the injured man's father came. The unfortunate man was freezing to death, as the weather was very cold. The old man forgot to bring matches and the terrible fear of being frozen stared them in the face. The injured man kept up good spirits and was warm by the dog lying upon him. The journey homeward was commenced but the weather being cold and the snow four feet deep, progress was very slow. More help arrived, however, and the party at once started to light a fire, the wounded man was the only one who could strike the matches the men being benumbed with cold. Again a start was made for home. It was an awful journey, the time made being one mile every two hours. He kept up well, and after ten hours of agony arrived at the village. Medical aid was summoned, but upon examination it was found that the unfortunate young man could only live a few hours, as the leg which had been broken was frozen to the body. In three hours after arriving home he died. He had only been married six months.—Brockville Recorder.

She Wanted a Judge or Two Killed.

There was one woman among the throng of sightseers at Forest Hills who was particularly desirous of knowing whether any judges were passengers on the wrecked train.

"Judges? No, madam. Did you suppose any judges were on board?"

"Well, I didn't know but there were. There are a good many judges living in Dedham. Dedham is a great town for judges. You say that they were mostly clerks and shop girls that were killed?"

"Yes, but their lives are just as dear to them."

"Oh, I know it," answered the woman; "I know it. But if we must have an accident I think it is well to have some distinguished people realize their responsibilities, it teaches people that a man may be celebrated and yet be liable, same as others. I thought if a judge or two was killed it might have a good effect on the young!"

She went away looking the disappointed philosopher in every line of her face.—Boston Transcript.

Enjoy Life.

What a truly beautiful world we live in! Nature gives us grandeur of mountains, glens and oceans, and thousands of means of enjoyment. We can desire no better when in perfect health, but how often do the majority of people feel like giving it up disheartened, discouraged and worn out with disease, when there is no occasion for this feeling, as every sufferer can easily obtain satisfactory proof, that Green's August Flower, will make them free from disease, as when born. Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint are the direct causes of seventy-five per cent. of such maladies as Biliousness, Indigestion, Sick Headache, Costiveness, Nervous Prostration, Dizziness of the Head, Palpitation of the Heart, and other distressing symptoms. Three doses of August Flower will prove its wonderful effect. Sample bottles, 10 cents. Try it. d90

Brain Work

Requires for its successful and pleasurable pursuit a full, uniform and continuous supply of pure, rich blood to the brain. If, through the torpidity of the liver, the blood becomes foul with bile, the brain is poisoned and overstimulated with the excess of blood which the irritated heart sends to it with frantic impulses. Dizziness, heaviness, loss of memory, impossibility of application to any kind of work, reveal the truth. To relieve this, and preserve not only the brain but the whole system in the best working order, Dr. Pierce's "Golden Medical Discovery" will be found invaluable.

Thoroughly cleanse the blood, which is the fountain of health, by using Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, and good digestion, a fair skin, buoyant spirits, vital strength, and soundness of constitution will be established.

Golden Medical Discovery cures all humors, from the common pimple, blotch, or eruption, to the worst Scrofula, or blood-poison. Especially has it proven its efficacy in curing Salt-rheum or Tetter, Fever-sores, Hip-joint Disease, Scrofulous Sores and Swellings, Enlarged Glands, and Eating Ulcers.

Golden Medical Discovery cures Consumption (which is Scrofula of the Lungs), by its wonderful blood-purifying, invigorating, and nutritive properties. For Weak Lungs, Spitting of Blood, Shortness of Breath, Bronchitis, Severe Coughs, Asthma, and kindred affections, it is a sovereign remedy. It promptly cures the severest Coughs.

For Torpid Liver, Biliousness, or "Liver Complaint," Dyspepsia, and Indigestion, it is an unequalled remedy. Sold by druggists.

DR. PIERCE'S PELLETS — Anti Bilious and Cathartic. 25c. a vial, by druggists.

GRATEFUL—COMFORTING

EPPS'S COCOA
BREAKFAST.

"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected Cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there was a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished frame."—"Civil Service Gazette."

Inspecting Timber Limits.

The Burk's Falls Arrow says:—"Mr. Geo. Strickland, of Messrs. R. & G. Strickland, lumbermen, of Lakefield, with his son Percy and Mr. Solmon Barrett, their inspector, visited Burk's Falls this week. They took a trip to Paxton township, inspecting some timber limits with a view to purchasing. Should they do so, their shipping point will be Burk's Falls via the North Branch of the Maganettawan River and the N. & P. Junction Railway. A pleasant hour was passed with them. Burk's Falls people will be glad if they make the purchase, as it will add to our trade."

BUTCHER'S linen for aprons now to be found at TURNBULL'S.

Acknowledgement.

The committee of the Peterborough Protestant Home thankfully acknowledge the following donations for March:—Stephen Payne, bag carrots and quantity cabbage; Mrs. Carlisle, basket apples; Mrs. George Burnham, rocking chair; A friend, one dollar's worth bread tickets; Ladies of the Baptist church, cakes; John Fallis, bag flour; Mrs. B. Ferguson, cakes from social; Mrs. McGill, apples: receipted account from G. Stethem, Esq., $4.73; Mrs. Halliday, quilt; Mrs. Templeton Brown, parcel clothing; Ladies St. Paul's Church, basket provisions; Miss Brown, parcel reading matter; Mrs. Dunlop, white quilt; Mrs. McGill, apples and jelly; Mrs. W. Green, muslin and lace for caps for old women; Curling Club, through W. G. Ferguson, Esq., barrel flour.

Gentlemen, it will pay you to call and see Rowse's stock of Gent's Furnishings. Everything stylish and cheap.

Personal.

The Burk's Falls Arrow of March 25th says:—"Mr. Munro, of the William Hamilton Manufacturing Company, Peterborough, was in Burk's Falls last week taking dimensions and completing the contract for supplying the new machinery for Messrs. Train & Son's mill. When he comes again we hope he will have learned that we are publishing the Arrow and could say something about the fine mill machinery turned out by his celebrated company. We are always glad to welcome to this growing village our Peterborough friends."

Mr. R. F. Morrow's friends will be glad to know that he has entirely recovered from his severe indisposition which forced him to close his dental rooms for some days. He is again on hand to meet the wants of his patrons.

Our townsman Mr. W. J. Delaney has returned to town after passing a successful examination at McGill Medical College, Montreal, obtaining first-class honors, which admits him to the final years in medicine.

A Wise Thing to Do.

Doubtless the recent cold dip has had the effect of somewhat depressing the spirits of those who were looking confidently forward to the early advent of spring. Particularly so has this been the case with merchants and the generality of business men. Now that we are entering in on the month of April, with its warm sunshine and showers, there will be a decided change, and those who were a short time since complaining of a late spring, inactivity in business, and so forth, will assume a more cheerful countenance, and make preparations for a large spring trade. This feeling will not be confined to business houses only, as it will be shared in alike by almost the entire community. Spring is a season when people require new goods of every description—in fact a complete transformation of everything in general takes place. The purchasing public watch the local paper for the announcements of our merchants, and are, as a rule, prudent enough to patronize the man who advertises, and does as he advertises. Merchants who are alive to their own interests are not slow to understand this, and knowing it, should at once secure a space in the columns of the REVIEW. An advertisement inserted now will pay for itself long before the last breath of winter has died away, and the man who advertises his spring stock judiciously will find that "taking stock" in printer's ink is a good paying investment.

Why, Maggie, where did you get your beautiful dress? I got it at Rowse's. We buy all our Dress Goods at the Trade Palace. They are so cheap.

Curling.

Lindsay and Peterborough are engaged in playing a five rink curling match this evening.

Slippers at 35, 40, 45, 50, 60, 75 cents and $1.00 at Kidd's new store.

At Zero.

Tuesday night was very cold for this time of the year. While the temperature was low—the Rev. V. Clementi's thermometer registered at zero—there was a strong wind.

Mary had a little lamb,
With which she used to play
She bought her boots at Kidd's new store
And was happy every day.

Removed.

Dr. Beatty, Veterinary Surgeon, has removed his office across the street, being now situated on Simcoe street, a few doors West of Phelan's Hotel. He retains his stables and yards.

Card of Thanks.

The Assembly Committee wish to tender their sincer thanks to the following gentlemen who so kindly loaned the meterial and furniture for decorating hall:—

D. BELLEGHEM, A. CLEGG,
JNO. HACKETT, A. W BRODIE,
M. SULLIVAN, O. C. ROWSE,
R. FAIR, GEO. WALKER,
J. E. MCINTYRE.

FINE shell cordovan shoes at Kidd's new store for $4.00 per pair. Hand made.

Heavy Horses.

Mr. T. Cavanagh shipped a pair of jet black mares on Tuesday to New York, from which place they will be taken to a stock farm to be used for breeding purposes. The span was the finest that has left Peterborough for a long time. They were well matched and weighed together two thousand nine hundred pounds. $470 was the price paid.

Temperance.

The Rev. J. Judd White addressed another large audience in the George St. Methodist Church on Tuesday evening his subject being "Personal Consecration." The Rev. I. Tovell was present. This evening the meeting will again be held in the George Street Church. The Rev. E. F. Torrance will occupy a seat on the platform. To-morrow evening the meeting will be held in St. Paul's Church.

Ladies do not pay $1.00 for everyday boots. You can get them for 85 cents at Kidd's.

We May Expect.

—Forces in a sun beam next Friday night.

—More force in sun beams to make the snow go.

—The batchelors to feel weary to-day.

—And no more balls to come off till next winter.

—A dead set this afternoon between Peterborough and Lindsay.

—And the curling season to close with this match.

The Land for Ladies.

The Northwest missionary spoke at St. John's Church school house on Tuesday evening of organizing a company to go to Peace River district. He mentioned incidentaly that there was a fine field for ladies up there. All the way up to his station the stopping off places were kept by men. At only one was there a lady. These, he added, would make excellent husbands, as they could cook, wash, bake and do almost everything around the house. The wife of one of these would surely have nothing to do but sit in the parlor and receive visitors.

Only 80 cents for a pair of ladies' fine button boots at Kidd's.

The Batchelor's Ball.

On Tuesday evening a ball was given in Bradburn's Opera House under the auspices of the batchelors of Peterborough. It was a very successful affair—elaborate decorations, inspiring music, beautiful costumes and a gay company all contributing to make the evening a most enjoyable one. Most of the guests were from Peterborough but visitors from Toronto, London, Chatham, Belleville and other places were present. Marsicano's Italian band seated in a parlor made upon the stage furnished the music for the dancers below. The programme is as follows:—

THE FAR NORTH-WEST.

THE LAND OF ALMOST PERPETUAL DAY IN SUMMER

And Darkness in Winter—The Indians of Peace River—Interesting Address by Rev. Mr. Brick.

On Tuesday evening the Rev. J. Gough Brick, missionary in the Diocese of Athabaska, N. W. T., delivered an address in St. John's Church school house. The place was filled with people, the ladies predominating. The Rev. J. W. R. Beck, Rector, occupied the chair. After singing "From Greenland's Icy Mountains," and prayer, the speaker was introduced.

The Rev. Mr. BRICK said he was glad to see so many people out on such a night. It showed that there was a missionary spirit in this place. It fact the missionary spirit in a church was a fair barometer of its prosperity, for show him a church where there was no missionary spirit and he would show them a church of little power or activity. He went on to speak of the motives which should impell people to interest themselves in missionary work. It was a grand work to endeavor to uplift mankind. Some would-be philosophers said it was useless to endeavor to uplift some races as the Indian, the Hindoo of the lowest caste; but when it was remembered how much was done by the Gospel for the Briton, who was little better in his primative state than the Northwest Indian, missionaries should not be discouraged. It was our duty to carry the light of the Gospel to the darkness it had not yet reached. It was not for him to say what would be the destiny of the heathen who who never received the Gospel, but this must interest all: What will become of us if we

NEGLECT OUR PRIVILEGES

in regard to enlightening them. God placed greater honor upon human instrumentality in doing His work, and that honor should be remembered. As regarded the Indians in our territory, it was our duty to enlighten them. We were using their soil and depriving them of their patrimony and in return we should give them the benefits which we enjoy. We have a great country in the Northwest. It had been the boast of the people of the United States that they had the largest territory, highest mountains and longest rivers. But the Dominion of Canada was much larger in territory than the United States, with Alaska thrown in. Our American brethren were proud of Boston, and Boston was the Hub. But Canadians could flatter themselves that the North Pole was in their territory. It was amusing to read the terms of the first transfer of this vast territory—the Canadian Northwest. Charles II. was then the reigning monarch in England, and he transferred it to the trading company on condition that on visiting the country they should present him with two elk and two black beavers, and as Charles never visited the country he never got the elk or beavers. It was estimated that the Canadian Northwest and Manitoba contained no less than three hundred million acres of land. He was sure that in time a great population would dwell in the country northwest of Winnipeg. The country was rich in

MINE FOREST AND STREAM

and these would all be taken advantage of. Of course the country's population was small as compared with the acreage. Of Indians there were 97,000 in the whole Northwest. These were divided up into tribes. First there was the great Cree tribe, the most powerful in the country. This tribe was divided up into three sections the Swampy Cree, the Plain Cree and the Wood Cree. Then there were the Blackfeet, the Bloods, the Chippewas, and others. He gave a description of the missionary work from its inception. Henry Budd was the first man who went out with the object of evangelizing the Indians. The Church Missionary Society now occupied the ground, as did also the Methodist and Presbyterians. The Methodists were doing a grand work. The Presbyterians were not doing so much. As to the practical results of the missionary work he could point with pride to there not being one Protestant Indian being engaged in the late rebellion. Everyone of the Indians who joined it were Roman Catholics if anything. He thought it was a good idea of the Presbyterians to call this ground foreign missions, for really it was foreign mission work as much as was the Japan or Chinese missions. In those eastern countries a high degree of civilization was met with, but in the North-West the Indian had to be civilized before the gospel could be preached with success. But now they were showing marked improvements in regard to civilization. They were given up their inhuman customs one by one. He commended the interest taken by the Dominion Government in the welfare of the Indians. They had adopted the best plan by helping the Indian to keep himself. Farm instructors were sent to teach the Indians on the reserves, with already good effect. He was not here as a political partizan, but simply spoke of these matters as he saw them. He supposed a clergyman might take an interest in the country. The Government had erred in sending out officials not suitable for the country, but on the whole was being borne of the Government's efforts. As he came out last fall he saw the little stocks on the Indian reserves, the little houses and the trim fields—all indicative of Indian industry. The Government threshing machines operated through the reserves free of charge. Unfortunately the Indians among whom he labored were beyond treaty lines. They were 450 miles beyond Edmonton, their nearest post office. Though these Indians did not make treaty with the Government he thought it the duty of the latter to keep them from starving in the winter, and as the land was taken up by white people it would result in a treaty being made. Where he was situated in the Peace river district was 900 miles higher latitude that the city of Toronto. Yet the land was rich and the climate exceedingly good—much better than in the Calgary district. As the country was just being opened up, however, travelling was extremely difficult. Supplies were brought up the river in boats, sometimes with great difficulty. They were not troubled with money out there. Their currency was a kind of skin which stretches like elastic. One "skin" was equivalent, in Edmonton, to 60 cents, at his station about 50 cents, and further down toward the Arctic sea 40 cents. As yet necessaries of life were expensive, with the exception of tea, which was only $1 a pound. He gave the price list of some articles as follows:—

GOOD FRUIT

	cts.
One pound sugar, one skin	.50
" " salt "	.50
One bar brown soap "	.50
One pocket handkerchief, one skin	.50
Two yards cotton, one skin	.50
" " print "	.50

and so forth. The climate was, on the whole, very fine. The first snow fell in the second week in November, and from that till the end of January it was pretty cold. The warm winds from the Pacific came about the end of January and took all the snow off. And now, while Ontario was still insnow, the cattle were out there grazing. The air was drier there and the cold not so much felt. At 25 deg. below zero he could travel without an overcoat. It was colder here to-day than at Peace River with the thermometer at 30 deg. below zero. In the winter they had not much day. It got daylight at about and dark at 3 in the afternoon. But they made up for it in the summer. It got daylight at two in the morning and at 10 o'clock at night a newspaper could be read quite plainly by daylight. He had just received a letter from his Bishop who stated that the supplies had not got through and that he had been without light all winter. He could sympathise with his Lordship, for he had been without candles himself one winter, and he could assure them that he had a dreary time of it. For the benefit of the boys present he described some of the oddities of the Indian character. He told a story of a tea meeting they had, the beverage made being as follows: A kettle full of water, 5 pounds of tea, a quantity of nigger head tobacco, several bottles of pain killer, all stirred with a stick and boiled.

9 IN THE FORENOON

The object of the rev. missionary was to get sufficient funds to erect a grist mill and establish a school. A good amount was collected at the close of the address, which made his collection well on to $1,000. A number of the audience was interested in examining samples of wheat and barley which the missionary sowed, reaped and threshed himself.

Iron to Advance No More.

PITTSBURG, March 29.—The iron manufacturers say the card rate of iron can hardly go any higher, as representatives of Swedish and English firms have recently invaded Pittsburg and are making desperate efforts to place orders for foreign iron. The manufacturers fear that another advance will let in foreign producers. The iron trade is not so good as it was a few weeks ago. Pig iron declined 50 cents a ton and muck bar $1.50.

Bad Floods Predicted.

THOMAS KELLY

The Daily Review.

THURSDAY, MARCH 31, 1887.

MR. MOWAT was determined to keep open every office that he could until after the elections. In cases where there were deputies to do the work it was comparatively easy to do so, and in one case at least where there was no deputy a pro tem appointment was made, and it was made known that the appointment was temporary so that applicants could be influenced. It is time the people took the appointment of some, at any rate, of these officers more directly within their own control.

Two concessions appear to have been wrung from Mr. Geo. W. Ross in regard to the reading of Scriptures in the schools. One is the promise of Mr. Ross, made in the House, that the regulations would be modified to permit the reading to be made from the Bible itself, which, if the promise is carried out, will be an important concession. The other is placing in the book of selections an indication with each lesson of the chapter and verses from which it has been taken. The Methodist Magazine is the authority for saying that this will be done. Neither of these concessions have been carried out yet, but if they should be, and they are promised, they will be important concessions. At the same time the Minister might go further and make other changes without injuring the schools. By-the-way, the Methodist Magazine says that the chapters and verses are to be added in the next edition. As the schools have all been supplied with the book, when will another edition be necessary?

REVIEWS.

THE CANADIAN METHODIST MAGAZINE.—The April number has no less than four sumptuously illustrated articles. The first is founded on Maclay's recent book on Old and New Japan, by the Rev. S. P. Rose, with numerous illustrations after photographs by native artists. Then follows a second paper on Edinburgh, with striking engravings of "Auld Reekie." Lady Brassey's experience at Trinidad and elsewhere are exquisitely illustrated, as is also the Editor's account of Victoria, B. C. Dr. Bowman Stephenson's racy pen gives a graphic account of life at the Antipodes. Of special interest is the touching story by the Rev. J. Bond, ex-President of the Newfoundland Conference—"Captain Sam's Two Easters." Mr. Bond's previous story in the Magazine, "Skipper Newton," is being republished in England. Mrs. E. A. Barr's story of "The Preacher's Daughter" is concluded. Another story of Yorkshire Methodism, by the same author, is to run through the year. Gervas Holmes, Esq., contributes a beautiful paper, "Interleavings from my Hymn-Book." Quite an Easter flavor is given to the number by several Easter readings and poems.

KILLED BY A SQUAW.

A Young Man Shot Through the Head in an Indian Camp.

WHITE RIVER, Ont., March 30.—A fatal shooting affray occurred about six miles north of White River, a C. P. R. station, about 4:30 yesterday afternoon. A young man named Edward Madden accompanied Mr. McDougall, fur trader of this place, to an Indian camp for the purpose, it is said, of collecting furs. When in the camp, McDougall got in a fight with the Indians, and Madden, while assisting McDougall in the row, was fatally shot in the head by a squaw, one of the inmates of the camp. Madden was employed as a night watchman at the C. P. R. station, and had the reputation of being an inoffensive and quiet young man. His sad end is much regretted by his acquaintances. His parents, who reside in Toronto, have been advised of his death.

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS

ONE HAS WON.

The Globe maintained until a day or two ago that Mr. Blake had one—of a Parliamentary majority. Sir John, it said, had not won. It now admits that Mr. Blake has not won, that Sir John has more than one.—Winnipeg Manitoba.

ABUSE OF THE PEOPLE.

A Rielite supporter of Mr. Blake thinks that the latter ought to resign his leadership "because this country is not fit to be governed by decent people." Compliments like these are what endear a party to the people of Canada, who have frequently shown their appreciation of them at the polls. A rebel sympathiser who is too decent for this country would do the decent thing by going to Dakota and blowing away with the country.—Toronto World (Indep.)

GRIT LOVE FOR THE PEOPLE.

Like the swine possessed of the devils, electors rushed madly to their own destruction. Thousands of years have little changed the perversity of the multitude. Take an example from a history familiar to at least some of the electors of this country. Look at a nation wrested by the miraculous power of Jehovah from a galling slavery, and shouting the praises of a splendid deliverance on the snores of the Red Sea. But how soon we find the same multitude grovelling in the same attitude of worship before the image of a calf—a golden calf—a boodle calf, such as we mourn to say the people of this Province prize far above a pure and honest administration of public affairs.—Cape Breton Reporter (Reform).

OCCASION TO KICK.

In regard to the Coffee appointment, registrarship of Carleton, the question is: Did the Government ask the liberals of Ottawa to nominate a candidate? Did it ask them to recommend some one for the office? If so, and the choice was not respected, the party has occasion to kick! Nothing makes a man madder than to take him into your confidence, solicit his opinion about some important matter, and act diametrically opposite to it; indeed his feelings may be wounded beyond the power of all any balm to heal.—Kingston Whig (Reform)

THE MERCIER TREASURY RAID.

Some patriotic members of our Local House ought to rise in his place and make enquiry whether the Government had any "views" at all on this matter, and what Mr. Mowat proposes to do about it. As the Premier will be one of the parties in the conference to be held by-and-bye, perhaps he would not like to commit himself in advance; lest it might look like an offence against [illegible] privilege. If we are sure that [illegible] of Ontario [illegible] a hint to the effect that the Premier of Ontario will surely appear at the conference as the champion of Ontario interests.—Toronto World (Indep.)

Mary had a little lamb,
With which she used to play
She bought her roots at Kidd's new store
And was happy every day.

GOVERNMENT OFFICES.

A recent appointment by the Ontario Government has provoked the hostility of the Liberals at Ottawa. The registrarship of the county became vacant some months ago, and for it there were many applicants. Among them Mr. P. J. Coffee, brother of the editor of the Catholic Record. He is a young man, a Liberal it is true, but without the claims upon the office which others seem to possess. Had the appointment been made soon after the office became vacant it could not have led to the difficulty now so painfully apparent. But it was left open, and the candidates brought all the influence they could to bear upon the government in their favor. The competition became the keener as the time went by. It was plainly evident that there would be great disappointment and bitterness of spirit. Anticipations in this respect have been fully realized.

The Government's action is objected to on two grounds:

1. It is charged that there has been a deception of the people, it having it understood, up to the time of Mr. Monck's enquiry, that the registrarship was not filled, while Mr. Coffee really had it and only awaited official notification in order to enter upon the performance of his duties. This deception, if practised, was wholly unnecessary. The appointment being a good one nothing could be gained by withholding the facts in connection with it. They had to reach publicity, and the Attorney-General should not have delayed the announcement of them until questioned respecting them by a member of the Opposition.

2 It is contended that the voice of the people was not regarded seriously by the government. The conservative papers—not too well-posted or truthful as a rule—say that the appointment of Mr. Coffee is the result of a promise made by the Government for the service rendered it by Mr. Coffee's brother, editorially and politically, during the local campaign. A statement like this must be accepted with a great deal of reserve, yet the fact remains that, despite the representations of those whose opinions ought to have weight with the government, who ought to know best of the ability and value and deserts of them, about the least eligible of the candidates was given an important position. By such a course the Government of the day has, of course, signally indicated its independence, but it has weakened its power and influence, and brought the system of public appointments into disrepute. For the first time in many years Ottawa returned a supporter of the Mowat Government, and that Government shows its appreciation of the Liberal victory by elevating to office one who is said to have neither the endorsement of the local member nor of those who elected him.

The people ought to have something to say about the selection of men who act in public capacities, and if they are to be deprived of a voice in the matter, if their nominations will be continually disrespected, government by party will take a drop in the public estimation. All liberals will not be so docile as those of Kingston were when their almost unanimous disapproval of the police magistrate's appointment was disregarded.—Kingston Whig (Reform.)

A TERRIBLE FALL.

On George Street, next to Long's Confectionery Store, is situated Rowse's Trade Palace, where a good Black, Cardinal and Gold Corsets at 50c. This is a terrible fall in price.

A DYNAMITE SCARE.

A Suspicious Parcel Causes Alarm—Proves to be a Hoax.

LONDON, March 30.—A brief sensation was caused to-day by the report that yesterday evening an attempt on the life of of A. J. Balfour, Chief Secretary for Ireland, was discovered and frustrated. In the mail at the Oxford street branch of the Post Office there was a small box addressed to Mr. Balfour. The mail clerk thought the package was peculiar and suspicious looking, and obtained permission to have it opened. It was found to contain a small phial filled with what was thought to be an explosive compound connected with springs attached to the bottle. Careful investigation to-day, however, shows that the whole thing was a hoax. The box was a jeweller's scarf pin box, and the bottle was filled with brown powder made up probably of pulverized coffee.

THE UNIONISTS PLATFORM.

Contributions from Hartington, Chamberlain and Caine.

NEW YORK, March 30.—The Tribune's London special says that Lord Hartington appears to-day as a contributor to the first number of the Liberal-Unionist Weekly, founded to advocate the policy of the Unionist wing of the Liberal party. Perhaps the most interesting passage in Lord Hartington's article is the declaration that there is not a single Liberal-Unionist who believes in coercion as a policy, but all believe it a necessity for any civilized country to assert the supremacy of the law. Mr. Chamberlain has an article in the same journal sternly hostile in tone to Gladstonian Home Rule. He declares that the whole responsibility for Liberal disunion rests with those who postpone the Liberal programme for the programme of the Chicago Convention. Mr. Caine, who is their caucus manager, cries out for open war against the Gladstonians till the party of secession and obstruction has been reduced to impotence. This founding of a Unionist organ is but one item in the programme which Mr. Chamberlain indicated lately at Birmingham.

WARLIKE OUTLOOK.

France's Alliance With Russia—Trouble in the Balkans Spreading.

LONDON, March 30.—Continental people to-day are increasingly warlike. A Berlin special comments on the predominance of Russian influences in the French cabinet, and foreshadows an early resignation of the Goblet ministry. The Hungarian war minister's circular recruiting the field telegraph force is referred to by the French press as a fresh proof that the allied powers are resolved to force France into war. Another Berlin special invests the visit of Roumanian royalty to Berlin with diplomatic importance. It asserts that the advice of Germany was asked as to a military alliance between Roumania, Servia and Bulgaria in resistance to Russia, and that the idea was encouraged. A Paris special states that public opinion in Alsace Lorraine is inflamed by the attitude of the German Ministry in relation to the Alsacian Diet and local government and institutions. The German garrisons are being quietly and steadily strengthened.

The reports transmitted of military risings in the Widden, Pievna and Philippopolis districts, came from Belgrade. From the same quarter comes the information that the Pan-Slavist agitation and uprising in Belgrade is spreading so rapidly that the powers will probably be forced into a conflict by events beyond their control before their preparations are completed. A Sofia special to-day discredits the announcement that Prince Oscar of Sweden has been accepted by the powers as Prince of Bulgaria.

LONDON, March 30.—It is stated that the Russian torpedo fleet on the Baltic sea, has been placed on war footing.

PREMIER SMYTHE DEAD.

British Columbia Province Loses Her First Minister.

NEW WESTMINSTER, B.C., March 30.—Hon. Wm. Smythe, Premier of British Columbia, and Chief Commissioner of Lands and Works, died on Monday. The deceased has been in active political life in this Province since 1871. He has been ailing for a couple of months. A reconstruction of the Cabinet will follow. The Assembly was to prorogue to-day, the business being through.

The late Premier of British Columbia was a native of Northumberland county, England. He was born in 1842 and educated at Whittington. Before emigrating to British Columbia he was in business as a merchant at Newcastle-upon-Tyne. He was first returned to the British Columbia Assembly in 1871 and sat continuously for the same constituency, Cowichan, until his death. His occupation in British Columbia was that of a farmer and justice of the peace. Mr. Smythe was leader of the Opposition during the session of 1872, but upon the defeat of the Walkem government resigned in favor of Hon. A. C. Elliott, who formed an administration in which Mr. Smythe held the portfolio of finance and agriculture. In 1878 the Walkem Government came into power again and Mr. Smythe assumed the leadership of the Opposition, which position he held until called upon to form a government in 1883, on the defeat of the Beaven Administration. He then became Premier and Chief Commissioner of Lands and Works. In the course of his legislative career Mr. Smythe secured the passage of a number of important local improvement measures. In 1883 he spent some time in Ottawa conferring with the Dominion Government on matters in dispute between his province and the Federal authorities. It is probable that the Hon. A. E. B. Davie, Attorney General of British Columbia, will succeed Mr. Smythe as Premier.

MURDERED FOR HIS MILLIONS.

ST. PETERSBURG, March 30.—A wholesale merchant of St. Petersburg, reputed to be worth millions, has been shot and killed by a man to whom he refused to give 8,000 roubles toward the Nihilist fund. The murderer has been arrested. Other Russian capitalists are fearful of suffering a similar fate. They are receiving letters threatening them with immediate death if they do not comply with demands to furnish money for "the common cause," as the Nihilist movement is called.

CHOLERA IN HUNGARY.

PESTH, March 30.—Three cases of Asiastic cholera have been discovered here.

NO CONSERVATIVE CAVE.

LONDON, March 30.—Lord Salisbury will preside at a meeting of the Conservative party to-morrow to consider the political situation. Lord Carnarvon denies that an anti-Coercion Conservative "cave" is being formed under his leadership, and says he knows of no such movement.

PRESS OPINIONS.

LONDON, March 29.—The Daily News says: "If Mr. Balfour intended to destroy his own case he could not have spoken with more triumph. The Parnellites would have done better not to interrupt him, for the longer he continued the more utterly helpless his contention appeared." The paper further says: "The bill is one of the worst ever introduced in Parliament. It has one advantage in that it destroys, once for all, the hollow pretence that the pseudo-unionists desire to treat England and Ireland on equal terms." The Standard, while admitting that Mr. Balfour betrayed a lack of grasp of the complexion of the Irish question, excuses him on the ground of his newness in office.

AN EXCITING SCENE.

DUBLIN, March 29.—Father Slattery was summoned by Judge Boyd to give similar information to that demanded of Father Ryan. He refused and was also ordered to prison. Both priests were removed to gaol in a cab The people hooted and jeered the police, and for a while refused to permit the cab to proceed. A disturbance ensued, and the police who were mounted rode with drawn swords upon the crowd and cleared a lane for the cab. Mr. O'Brien, editor of United Ireland, followed the prisoners to gaol. He, with the Lord Mayor and Archbishop Croke, rode in the Lord Mayor's carriage. The mob threatened the police the whole route, and the scene at times was very exciting.

REVOLUTIONARY RISINGS.

MADRID, March 30.—The revolutionary party in Spain, it was discovered, had planned simultaneous risings at Madrid, Burgoo, Ferrol and other important centres of disaffection. The plans of the revolution are in the hands of the government, and extraordinary precautions are being taken to guard against surprise and to overcome any attempt that may be made.

LORD LANSDOWNE THREATENED.

DUBLIN, March 30.—Mr. William O'Brien, editor of United Ireland, in a speech last night said that if the evictions on the Lansdowne estates did not cease he and Kilbride, who was the principal tenant on his Lordships Luggacurran estate, and who was recently evicted, were not re-instated, he would visit Canada and begin an agitation with a view to having Lord Lansdowne ousted from the palace at Ottawa.

A CONSTABLE IN CUSTODY.

DUBLIN, March 30.—Constable Dorney, who refused to assist in Father Ryan's arrest, has been imprisoned and a testimonial to him is being organized.

ROSEBERY IN GERMANY.

BERLIN, March 30.—Earl Rosebery dined with Prince Bismarck last night.

THE UNIONISTS.

LONDON, March 30.—Lord Hartington delivered a speech at the inaugural dinner of the Liberal Union this evening. He said the effect on Mr. Gladstone's open espousal of the action of the Parnellites during the present session was to divorce still further the opposing elements of the Liberal party. The round table conference had broken down. The Unionists were not prepared for a reconciliation based upon formulas they did not understand.

DEFENCE OF LORD LANSDOWNE.

LONDON, March 30.—Lord George Hamilton this evening, in the House of Commons, defended the Marquis of Lansdowne against the attacks of the Irish Nationalists with reference to the evictions on his property in Queen's County. Lord George Hamilton said Lord Lonsdowne had simply refused to give the rich tenants the same reduction as he made his poor Kerry tenants. In this action Lord Hamilton considered he was perfectly justified.

TWO OFFICERS' NARROW ESCAPE.

CAIRO, March 30.—Two British officers while out hunting recently, accidently wounded some passing Bedouins. A scuffle ensued, in which one of the Bedouins was killed and the officers were badly wounded, and narrowly escaped being hanged by the infuriated Arabs.

HEAVY SENTENCE FOR LIBEL.

LONDON, March 30.—Mr. James Davis, proprietor of the Bat, charged with publishing false, malicious and defamatory libel concerning Mr. Robert Peck, horse trainer, and who pleaded guilty to the charge and offered to apologize to plaintiff and to pay all costs, was, to-day, sentenced to three months' imprisonment and a fine of £500.

Strikes in Toronto.

TORONTO, March 30.—The steamfitters and plumbers threaten to strike on Friday morning. They want an increase all round of five cents an hour, which the employers flatly refuse to grant. The journeymen tailors' strike is practically at an end, most all the employers having agreed to pay a new scale of prices. The tailoresses have decided to demand an increase of fourteen cents per hour which the employers will refuse to pay. This may lead to further complications.

Advice to Mothers.

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup should always be used when children are cutting teeth. It relieves the little sufferer at once; it produces natural, quiet sleep by relieving the child from pain, and the little cherub awakes "as bright as a button." It is very pleasant to taste. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain, relieves wind, regulates the bowels, and is the best known remedy for Diarrhœa, whether arising from teething or other causes. 25 cents a bottle. Be sure and ask for "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup," and take no other kind.

RAILWAY DISALLOWANCE.

Some rash critics of the Dominion Administration, who care nothing for accuracy but rush blindly at any opening for an attack upon their political opponents, are talking great nonsense about the disallowance of a Manitoba Act chartering a railway from Brandon to connect with the railway system of the United States. They speak of it as a high handed abuse of the general veto power entrusted by our Constitution to the Dominion authorities. If these critics spent five minutes in thinking, instead of devoting all their mental energies to inventing abuse, they would see that they were altogether astray. Part of the bargain by which Canada secured the C. P. R. was that within the Territories of the Dominion no railways should be permitted tapping our great national road, and diverting its traffic to United States lines, of which it would be a mere feeder constructed at our cost. This condition was to apply to any part of our Territories raised to the Provincial status. Subsequently Manitoba asked and obtained part of this territory as an addition to its area, cheerfully accepting this condition for the district annexed to it, and solemnly ratifying the bargain by an act of its Legislature. The disallowed railway from Brandon is in this new part of Manitoba, and thus its prohibition is the mere fulfilment of a bargain for which the stipulated consideration has been received, and which had the sanction of both Dominion and Provincial Legislatures. To have authorized this railway would have been a dishonest act of repudiation.

The question of whether a railway within the old limits of Manitoba should be disallowed rests upon an altogether different footing. If the veto power were exercised in such a case it would be upon the ground of the interests, not of the C.P.R., but of Canada as a whole. For our people to build a railway and then to allow it to be used to convey traffic away from our own country and our own ports to those of a foreign nation, would be a stupid repetition of the blunder committed when we commenced to enlarge our canals on the St. Lawrence waters instead of below, so as to make the Welland Canal a costly feeder for the Erie Canal and New York harbor. Fortunately we avoided such an error in regard to the C.P.R. Thus the question of the disallowance of railway charters in old Manitoba is one of expediency, having regard to the interests of Canada. As soon as our own route is in a position to support competition and the demands upon it for carriage tax its capacity, the prohibition should cease. Whether that time has arrived, or when it will arrive, is a matter for discussion, not for the virtuperation of disappointed politicians careless of injuring their country if they can strike a blow at their successful rivals. It is evident that the time need not be long deferred. Even now it must be remembered that our two great Canadian railways are pushing on their lines in hot rivalry to Sault Ste. Marie, so that by way of Duluth there will soon be two additional competitive routes to Winnipeg.

As to the bargain to prevent diverting railways in the Territories that can only be honestly changed by a fresh bargain. If it should ever be considered expedient to negotiate for its abrogation there is one point that should be taken into consideration. In refusing to undertake its proposed task unless it was ensured against competition for twenty years, the C.P.R. certainly reckoned that it would require a monopoly of traffic for so many years after the completion of its road. As the people of Canada have given money to assist the C.P.R. in hastening the work of construction and the opening of the line, they have an equitable claim that the twenty years should be proportionately shortened, and this should be allowed if any new bargain is struck.

THE LAW OF LIBEL.

If that great Metropolitan journal the Toronto News does us the honor of criticising us we wish it would also honor us by reading the article criticised. The News says the Peterborough Review opposes Mr. Balfour's bill to amend the libel law, and then it proceeds to expatiate on blackmailing law suits against newspapers. Now the Review distinctly approved Mr. Balfour's proposal to check blackmailing by requiring security for costs. We objected, however, to his proposal to give greater license to the press by requiring proof of malice. If a journal slanders anyone without an attempt at investigating the charge, and when shown to be in error neglects to retract its calumny, it is guilty of malice in the eye of the law, and we believe this to be just. Our position is that a journalist has no more right to slander his neighbor than any other man, and that he should be more careful on account of his greater power of inflicting injury. At the same time we hold that blackmailing attacks upon the press by those who have no real grievance should be checked. The News will please excuse us if we think that a journalist who has to run his country to escape punishment for a scurilious attack upon loyal men leaving their homes in another Province to defend the Dominion against rebels in arms, and who when shown to be wrong was not man enough to retract or apologise, is hardly a fair judge of such matters.

ONTARIO LEGISLATURE

THE FIRST SESSION OF THE SIXTH PROVINCIAL PARLIAMENT.

Various Bills Advanced—Protection of Infants—Distress for Rent—Land Titles Act—Police Magistrates—Immigration—The Agricultural College.

Tuesday, March 29.—Another bill to amend the Municipal Act was introduced, and several private bills were read a third time.

PASSED THROUGH COMMITTEE.

Mr. Mowat's bills respecting the administration of Justice in Algoma and Thunder Bay and respecting the custody of documents relating to land titles were considered in committee.

PROTECTION OF CHILDREN.

Mr. Mowat's bill for the protection of infant children was read a second time. It is aimed at baby farming, and provides that no one shall be at liberty to receive infants for this purpose, except under regulations of the Municipal Council of the locality, nor without first getting registered on application to the municipal council. It will be the duty of the council to see that the person applying is a proper person and the house a proper house.

DISTRESS FOR RENT.

Mr. Hardy moved the second reading of a bill relating to distress for rent. It provided that goods and chattles exempt from seizure under executions at law should be exempt from distress for rent and taxes. It also provided that goods belonging to third parties could not be distrained for rent, but this did not apply to property of the wife or husband. There was also a provision for a set off against the landlord of amounts due by him to the tenant. If a tenant would not vacate the premises the goods otherwise exempt became seizable.

Mr. Ferguson said the bill embodied the leading principles of a measure he had introduced last session, and he was glad the Government had got light on the subject.

Mr. O'Connor said that the bill did not go far enough, and there should be no distress for rent.

The bill was read the second time.

ASSIGNMENTS FOR CREDITORS.

Mr. Mowat's bill to make further provisions respecting assignments for the benefit of creditors was read a second time.

LAND TITLES ACT.

Mr. Mowat moved the second reading of the bill providing that municipal councils may put the Land Titles Act in operation in their district, the counties to pay the expenses and have a local Master in each case.

Mr. Meredith thought that the provisions of this bill would destroy the Act. If the Attorney-General were to use the present registry offices for the local registration, the title could, in the first place, be examined by the master in Tornnto.

Mr. Mowat said that the power of Master of Titles was too important to give to the registrars. He would consider Mr. French's suggestion to permit two or more counties to unite for the purposes of the Act.

The bill was read a second time.

POLICE MAGISTRATES.

Mr. Mowat's bill providing for the appointment of more police magistrates than one in counties where the Canada Temperance Act is in force and for their salaries, and for the temporary appointment of special constables, was read the second time

SUPPLY.

The House went into Committee of Supply.

Mr. Hardy said it was proposed to reduce the immigration staff by the agent at Quebec and the assistant at the immigration sheds in Toronto.

Mr. Meredith thought that the Government was cutting off at the wrong end, and that there was no necessity for a special agent in England. All the expenditure for immigration should be stopped.

Mr. Marter said there was still an appropriation of $150 for an agent at Gravenhurst, although there was no need of such an officer, and emigrants never passed through the village of Gravenhurst.

Mr. Hardy said whenever there was an influx of immigrants the agencies had much to do. Perhaps the Gravenhurst agency was beginning to become obsolete.

Mr. Fraser said the agent in England could correct exaggerated statements made by steamship companies.

Mr. Gibson (Huron) attacked the Ottawa Government and the National Policy.

After further discussion the item, $16,900 for immigration, passed.

Mr. Clancy said the number of students at the Agricultural College was decreasing. The provisions for students cost twenty per cent. more in 1886 than in 1885.

Mr. A. M. Ross said the number of students from places outside Ontario had decreased on account of the increase of the fees.

Mr. Meredith said that was a mistake, as in 1882 there were only 22 non-resident pupils, while in 1886 there were 55.

Mr. Drury asserted that the criticism in the past had not been useful.

Mr. Creighton said that the Opposition desired to improve the institution and their criticism had been in that direction.

Mr. A. M. Ross said that the institution compared favorably with similar ones in the United States. The Advisory Board had been of service, but he admitted that there was room for improvement.

Mr. Preston said that the institution had practically done nothing for the masses of the farmers. Nothing had been done in the way of testing seed grain for the farmers or towards improving their stock.

Mr. Wilmot said that the surplus stock sold from the farm was a miserable lot.

Mr. Ballantyne said he presumed that the stock offered for sale would not be the best animals. To contend that the farm ought to supply the country with improved stock was childish. It was never intended that it should do so, that being left to private enterprise. He would be glad to see the experiment of practical dairy farming tried.

After further discussion the item passed and the committee rose. The House adjourned at 10.30 p. m.

Twenty thousand dollars worth of gambling apparatus seized by the New York police during the past year was burned by the city authorities on Saturday.

Employment has been speedily found for all able-bodied immigrant arriving in Montreal so far this season, and the demand for their services is said to be greater than in any previous year.

The Montreal Trades and Labour Council are petitioning for amendments to the city character restricting the powers of the Chairman of the Finance Committee and giving the Mayor a veto power.

At the enquiry in Montreal on Tuesday into the charges made against members of the city police force, Police Magistrate Dugas gave evidence of a very damaging character against some of the detectives.

A special cablegram to the Mail says that while Mr. Gladstone was speaking on Tuesday night on the Irish Crimes bill his voice failed him and he gave painful evidence of a break-up of his physical strength.

It is understood that the Government have decided upon sending a joint geological and topographical expedition early this spring to the Yukon country. The expedition will be under the charge of Dr. Dawson and Mr. Wm. Ogilvie, and will leave Victoria, B. C., early in May.

Mr. J. Wyld, the Dominion delegate to the West Indies, has returned to Ottawa. He states that he has been very successful in his mission of establishing better commercial relation between the West Indies and Canada, and that a line of steamships between Halifax and Havana will probably be established this summer.

A special cablegram to the Mail says much indignation is felt in London political circles at the attempt to stir up the hatred of the Irish Canadians against the Marquis of Lansdowne. Mr. Balfour stated in the Commons on Monday night that Lord Lansdowne was receiving from the tenants on his estates less than the Griffiths valuation.

DUNN'S BAKING POWDER

THE COOK'S BEST FRIEND

SHIRLEY CARSTONE

By ELIZA ARCHARD.

Copyrighted by American Press Association.

Another point of especial concern with Col. Carstone had been that his children should learn to speak correctly. Himself and wife, both highly cultivated persons, had had their lot in life cast in the crude, unlettered community of Linwood. It happened so, and they could not change it. But he determined at least that his children's voices should not glide into the flat, odious dialect of the average uncultured American. To this end so many hours were devoted each week to language lessons. Col. Carstone himself took charge of these. Mistakes in his children's speech were carefully noted and corrected. The regular language lesson brought much merriment among the young ones and their papa.

The father adhered rigidly to his plan as long as he lived. The daughter unconsciously adopted it in her school and clung to it.

There was yet one more matter on which this accomplished gentleman laid great stress. That was home politeness. He declared that home was exactly the place to practice the highest politeness one knew.

"It's the place where politeness is most needed," he told his family. "If you wish to be at ease and graceful, you must learn to be at ease and graceful at home. Practice the best manner you know constantly, so as to make it your own manner. Then you will never know anything else."

He was as good as his word, too. He was as chivalrous and deferential to his wife down to the last of his life as if she had been one of her own pretty lady friends.

So notable was this in the rustic neighborhood in which they lived that Jim Sweet was moved to remark to Mis' Simpkins:

"Be goll dinged if I ever see a man like Carstone! He's mannerdly to is own wife. He's as perlite to her as if he wuzn't married to her!"

"He is, is he!" retorted the peppery grocer wife. "Well, all I've got to say is that he's a show in these parts. He ought to be locked up in a glass case and toted around the country with the circus, ten cents a sight!"

Shirley's father had been gracious and courtly to all the world. He was a man who was polite to his own children. He saw ahead of his generation. The new and better educational theories which are only now slowly making their way among thoughtful men and women he perceived long before, and put into practice. His children's harmonious development was so blended with their plays that they scarcely knew which was instruction and which was play.

These wise, sweet methods were infallibly reflected a hundred fold in the work of his daughter, as face answereth to face in a glass.

Her pupils learned to use their eyes and their thoughts to see the beauty that lay all about them. They were taught that each was a block of living clay, hiding in its heart a statue of perfect nobleness and beauty. To chisel away the obstructing ignorance, selfishness, awkwardness and unworthiness, leaving only the statue in it splendid grace—this was their education.

The girl succeeded with them to a degree that would not have seemed possible. But Rome was not built in a day. Her task was the work of tiring years. Yet it was its exceeding great reward. The Linwood school children came to look on life from a loftier plane than their ancestors had done. A stranger coming among them after they became men and women would have catalogued among their virtues and graces a broad intelligence, a delicate sense of honor, an ease and polish of manner socially, a kindliness that in some wise neared them to the ideal community.

Thus bravely Shirley wrought. She was forced to the deferment of her own brightest, sweetest hopes. She toiled year by year at a labor that was hateful to her. Yet, working through the children committed to her care, it was her happy privilege to quicken Linwood into a higher, finer life. Was not that something? It was much.

Outside of the blessed home-life in the stone house, Shirley had known little of the world socially. When she became the village school mistress, the faithful Mis' Simpkins had advised her that she must make herself acquainted with the families of her pupils. That was to gain the general good will. The good dame gave the young teacher much advice. Mis' Simpkins was always ready to give away anything that cost nothing.

Shirley attended some of the neighborhood festivities. They grated on her painfully. She shrank apart from the company. The women's clack, the harsh guffaw of the men, the idiotic snickering of the older girls, only repelled her.

In the conversation of the Linwood women, the most petty incident, the most contemptible fault or mistake of those who were absent were taken up and discussed with an intensity and made as much of it as if the fate of a kingdom had hung on them.

Shirley sat in silence. She listened and meditated. The thought of her poem was seldom long absent from her mind. It ran like an undermotive through her every day deeds—the only bright theme in her life then. Above all, the dream of a kingly woman haunted her imagination still. She had said the people in her grand epic that was to be should be women. She could create the kingly woman from the vision in her imagination, but she had thought the minor characters were to come from life. Were all the women in the world like these in Linwood? Then whence were the women in her poem to come?

Another thought chased this one. Her girl pupils—would they be like that, too, when they came to be women?

"They shall not," said Shirley.

She went no more to the Linwood Sewing society. But from that day she was drawn nearer to her girls, to work more earnestly with them. She answered now to them the question she had asked her father in childhood, and the answer was this:

"A girl has as much sense as a boy if she will make use of it!"

She impressed on them intensely that their intellectual powers were given them for use, and they would be guilty of nothing less than a sin if they neglected them.

"You learn your lessons as well as the boys do," she told the larger girls. "Why should you get stupid later? Don't let me hear of it!"

With a sweet insistence she protested from day to day that they should not allow their mental horizon to narrow till it inclosed only ribbons and gossip. They must not follow the millions of their kind, who live and make no more impression on their world than gnats upon an elephant. When they died it was recorded on their tombstones that they were the wife of Smith. That was all.

Shirley read and studied with her girls. She interested them permanently in science, in literature and in the large affairs of life. Cannot a genius do all things? Yet with all this work, this intense concentration of energies elsewhere, the poem had again to be put off.

So more years moved on.

And still no news of the master.

To be Continued.

A FUNERAL IN ALASKA

Letter in Juneau, Alaska, Free Press:—Having had information the other day of a cremation to take place at the Indian village, I bethought me to stroll down to the beach and witness the same.

The defunct siwash was known around Juneau as Frank, and was formerly employed at Martin Bros'. store in the capacity of Indian clerk, and the klootchman (it being a double cremation of one of each sex) had been called Jennie; both, as it happened, having died of consumption.

The morning service consisted of the ancient ceremony known as a "Potlatch," which is always customary among the Indians of Southeastern Alaska on the occasion of a death of one of their number.

The "potlatch" is a division of whatever temporal goods the deceased may have possessed, such as blankets, dry goods, etc., among his or her relations, according as the merits of each individual case may justify.

In the services of the mourning, which are very long and to the Indian mind very impressive, the first in the order of the day is a eulogistic discourse by one of the old men, which, being delivered by him in sections, so to speak, is taken up and sung by the rest in a monotonous sort of chant; the old man is then superseded by another venerable buck who goes through the same service, and he in turn by another, until all the old men have had their individual say.

The chanters keep time by continually thumping the floor with sticks and beating on a drum.

This performance being gone over for a day or two, the "potlatch" takes place.

The body of the deceased is first wrapped in a matting, woven from split roots, and in appearance resembling coarse straw. They then convey the body to the place of cremation, which is always on the beach at high water mark. On this occasion they had on hand for the purpose of burning the two bodies about one cord of wood, some split and some in small logs. First a platform of small logs is laid a foot from the ground, and a space of four inches between each log. On this pyre, which was about seven feet long by five feet wide, the two bodies were placed about three feet apart, and around them a miniature log hut was built to the height of four feet, the inclosed space is then carefully filled in with split wood and fine kindling, and now everything being in readiness, the fire is lighted from the bottom. The native diet being chiefly salmon, an oily substance, the bodies of the Indians seem to contain a considerable amount of oil, as they burn very readily. While the corpses were charring, the friends of the deceased continued to poke them with long sticks, occasionally raking the fragments of burned flesh from the fire and wrapping them in skins, blankets, etc. Returning from the cremation of the two natives, I heard singing in a native house, and dropped in to see what was going on.

There was quite an assemblage of natives squatted around a small fire in the centre of the small room, and at one end of the house the corpse of an old woman lay, covered with sheets and blankets. All around the room was strung up muslin, pieces of calico and a few blankets; also, three umbrellas, etc., all of which will be distributed among the relatives and near friends. The procession described above will be gone through.

GRITS OUT AND IN.

In opposition, one plank of his (Mr. Mercier's) platform was the abolition of the Legislative Council of Quebec. In power, he endorses it. In opposition, he condemned the appointment of political hacks to official sinecures. In power, he has appointed two such men fire marshals of Montreal in face of the bitter opposition of even the English Liberal press, for the offices are not only unnecessary but directly objectionable. In opposition, he denounced the unnecessary number of portfolios in the Quebec Cabinet. In power he created a new portfolio to meet party exigencies. In opposition he declaimed against partisan manipulation of offices of public trust. In power he has dismissed the sheriff of St. Francis, for forty years a respected and capable officer, to make room for a man whom he wishes to get out of the Legislative Council in order to replace him with a tool of his own. In opposition he protested against the imposition of unnecessary burdens upon the people. In power he already demands a new loan of four millions for which no immediate need can be shown.—Ottawa Journal (Indep.).

THE BUSINESS VIEW.

The sensible thing to do would be to capitalize the present subsidies, and to stop all grants from the Dominion Treasury for local purposes by a constitutional inhibition if necessary; but that either of these things will be done we do not seem much reason to hope.—Monetary Times.

Horsford's Acid Phosphate.

Dr. F. De V. Hoard, Concordia, Kan., says: "I have used it personally, and am greatly pleased with its action as a nervine."

Enjoy Life.

What a truly beautiful world we live in! Nature gives us grandeur of mountains, glens and oceans, and thousands of means of enjoyment. We can desire no better when in perfect health, but how often do the majority of people feel like giving it up disheartened, discouraged and worn out with disease, when there is no occasion for this feeling, as every sufferer can easily obtain satisfactory proof, that Green's August Flower, will make them free from disease, as when born. Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint are the direct causes of seventy-five per cent. of such maladies as Biliousness, Indigestion, Sick Headache, Costiveness, Nervous Prostration, Dizziness of the Head, Palpitation of the Heart, and other distressing symptoms. Three doses of August Flower will prove its wonderful effect. Sample bottles, 10 cents. Try it. d90

Brain Work

Requires for its successful and pleasurable pursuit a full, uniform and continuous supply of pure, rich blood to the brain. If, through the torpidity of the liver, the blood becomes foul with bile, the brain is poisoned and overstimulated with the excess of blood which the irritated heart sends to it with frantic impulses. Dizziness, heaviness, loss of memory, impossibility of application to any kind of work, reveal the truth. To relieve this, and preserve not only the brain but the whole system in the best working order, Dr. Pierce's "Golden Medical Discovery" will be found invaluable.

For "worn-out," "run-down," debilitated school teachers, milliners, seamstresses, housekeepers, and over-worked women generally, Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is the best of all restorative tonics. It is not a "Cure-all," but admirably fulfills a singleness of purpose, being a most potent Specific for all those Chronic Weaknesses and Diseases peculiar to women. It is a powerful, general as well as uterine, tonic and nervine, and imparts vigor and strength to the whole system. It promptly cures weakness of stomach, indigestion, bloating, weak back, nervous prostration, debility and sleeplessness, in either sex. Favorite Prescription is sold by druggists under our positive guarantee. See wrapper around bottle. Price $1.00, or six bottles for $5.

A large treatise on Diseases of Women, profusely illustrated with colored plates and numerous wood-cuts, sent for 10 cents in stamps. Address, World's Dispensary Medical Association, 663 Main Street, Buffalo, N. Y.

THURSDAY, MARCH 31, 1887.

A SERIES OF ROWS.

A Heavy Penalty on one of the Perticipants—The Magistrate's Remarks.

For some time past something like a feud seems to have been brewing between some of the young men of the town and vicinity, till it has culminated in a series of fights and other disorders.

The first of these encounters occurred at Roddy's Hotel on Saturday morning between three and four o'clock. The proprietor of the hotel had been giving a dance on the completion of a new dining room. Between three and four o'clock in the morning a young man named McDonald, of Belleville, and two young men, brothers, named Larone, all three Roman Catholics, went to the hotel. The proprietor did not want them to stay and asked them to leave, but they declined to go. A fight then occurred between the two Larone brothers, one wishing to go and the other refusing. During the progress of the fight McDonald attacked Roddy and gave him a severe bruising. A number of True Blues who were dancing then came out and took a hand in the fracas. The fight became general and for some time all sorts of weapons, from a spitton to a baseball club, were used indiscriminately. McDonald and the two Larones were finally ejected, but they remained in the vicinity of the building for some time, challenging all hands to come out and give them satisfaction. None of the parties in the house were seen to go out, however. But about fifteen minutes afterward, on someone going out, a young man named Burheart was found lying near the door. He does not know how he got out, but says that after he was out the three kicked him and beat him. This, however, is to be taken with a grain of allowance, as he does not remember anything about the affair other than being in the fight. But Burheart's friends believed what he told them in regard to being beaten, and were very indignant at it.

On Saturday evening several fights took place, one resulted rather seriously. A farmer named Barry of Ennismore, and a man from town named Robinson had a set-too on the corner of George and Simcoe streets. Robinson was badly hurt, his face being almost disfigured. Later in the evening another disturbance took place on the corner of George and Hunter. The whole of the intersection of the streets were filled with people. A man named McCarthy of Ennismore, who seemed to be the cause, was arrested by Capt. Cooper and taken to the cells. No actual fight took place on this occasion however. The air was filled with all sorts of rumours on Sunday night but owing to the watchfulness of the police no further trouble occurred

On Sunday night however some young men hearing that the Larones and McDonald were at Curtin's eating house, near the Grank Trunk station they marched in a crowd to avenge Burhearts injuries. The place was beseiged; the door was kicked in and the windows broken. The three, who were actually in the house, hid themselves upstairs and then Curtin invited the crowd to come in and search. They came but did not find who they were after.

The last row of the series occurred on Tuesday afternoon when Michael Larone and his friends meeting a young man named Webster and his friends, on the corner of Water and Hunter streets, another scuffle took place. The police being telephoned for the combatants separated and the crowd dispersed. Both participants, however, were brought up by Capt. Cooper this morning, and the matter, on investigation, was settled by Larone being fined $50 and costs or 20 days in goal, he being clearly to blame for this row.

The MAGISTRATE in addressing the defendants said there seemed to be bad blood existing between the True Blues and the young Roman Catholics, which caused trouble to the older inhabitants both Roman Catholic and Protestant. He was determined to stamp this out. As Larone was clearly to blame he would impose on him a heavy penalty, but if the other was in the wrong he would have had to suffer equally. Larone not having the amount of the fine went to goal.

To-morrow ten of those who participated in breaking in Curtin's house will be put on trial.

Slippers at 35, 40, 45, 50, 60, 75 cents and $1.00 at Kidd's new store.

PETERBOROUGH'S TURN.

Lindsay Defeated by Sixty Shots in the Five Rink Match.

The five rink match played in the Charlotte Street rink between Lindsay and Peterborough resulted in a glorious victory for Peterborough. Every one of the Peterborough rinks won with handsome majorities. Thus the ire of the Peterborough's, which has been simmering to keep itself warm ever since the Lindsays took the Governor-General's trophy from them, has had an opportunity to fairly boil over—and great was the bubbling and boiling thereof.

Lindsay was completely routed, even Flavelle, who was wont to shed lustre over the club's campaigns, was left behind by Ferguson by 14. Rutherford, who has made a reputation for himself this season as skip, topped the majorities, winning by 16. Attrill won by 10; McNeil by 7, and Cameron by 13.

The score is as follows:—

THE TEMPERANCE REVIVAL.

Another Large Gathering—Local Temperance Societies Explained.

Another very large audience assembled in the George Street Church on Wednesday evening. The services are of such a character that they draw the people. The singing is pleasing and attractive and the speaking humorous and effective. On this evening the speakers did not permit themselves to indulge so freely in wit or amusing anecdote, but addressed themselves more seriously to the subject. Mr. White spoke for some time, and Mr. Tovell delivered a telling address.

Mr. WHITE, during the evening, explained the methods and objects of the Women's Christian Temperance Union and of the Royal Templars. The Union was an organization of ladies with the object of doing good, especially in the temperance line. The active membership consisted of ladies, but gentlemen could become honorary members and thus assist the Union. The society of Royal Templars of Temprance consisted of three degrees. The first was a temperance degree, the object of the whole order being to promote temperance, and members initiated into this degree could, at their option, provide for sick and funeral benefits, The second degree carried with it insurance, and members could insure their lives on a safe and advantageous plan for $500, $1,000 or $2,000. The third or Knights degree was a uniform degree. He urged his hearers to band themselves together for temperance work by uniting with these societies. The meeting was an interesting one throughout.

This evening the meeting will be held in St. Paul's Church. To-morrow evening, after a service of song in the George Street Church, Mr. White will hold a meeting in the Auburn Church.

Below Zero.

The Rev. V. Clementi's self-registering thermometer recorded 5 deg. below zero on Wednesday night.

Personal.

Mr. Adam Hudspeth, M. P., Lindsay, registered at the Oriental Hotel on Wednesday.

Mr. Sam. Hughes, editor of the Lindsay Warder, skipped No. 5 Rink in the curling match on Wednesday.

A CHOICE assortment of Scotch and Canadian tweeds, worsteds and West of England pantings to choose from at TURNBULL'S. Remember there is a first-class tailor always on the premises to execute work promptly.

Law Society.

A meeting of the Law Society was held on Monday evening, at which the officers for the ensuing year were elected as follows:—

PRESIDENT—D. W. Dumble.
VICE-PRESIDENT—W. H. Moore.
SEC.-TREASURER—E. B. Edwards.
TRUSTEES—A. P. Poussette, Q. C., and E. H. D. Hall.

Ladies do not pay $1.00 for everyday boots. You can get them for 65 cents at Kidd's.

Patti.

A number of citizens who were lucky enough to secure tickets for the Patti concert are going to take advantage of them on Saturday. The seats were secured by Mr. Alex. Craig, of the Rossin House, formerly of town, and the party who go to occupy them on Saturday are indebted to him for his trouble.

Gentlemen, it will pay you to call and see Rowse's stock of Gent's Furnishings. Everything stylish and cheap.

Real Estate.

At the auction sale of lots on Water and George streets, belonging to the Burnham estate, held at the Grand Central Hotel on Wednesday, one lot fronting on George street was sold to Mr. James Clotworthy. The lot has 30 feet frontage and a depth of 190 feet. The price paid was $690, or $23 a foot. The other lots were not sold.

BUTCHER'S linen for aprons now to be found at TURNBULL'S.

We May Expect

—Millinery openings.
—High water soon.
—The advent of the spring dude.
—More temperance meetings.
—The Lindsays to feel tired.
—And to say they'll fix Peterborough on some future occasion.
—No more skating this season.
—The strong arm of the law to put down unseemly disorders.

Why, Maggie, where did you get your beautiful dress? I got it at Rowse's. We buy all our Dress Goods at the Trade Palace. They are so cheap.

ENNISMORE.

COLD SNAP.—At sunrise on Tuesday morning, March 29th, the thermometer indicated 1 deg below zero, at night only 6 degs. above, and on Wednesday morning at zero, being very cold for so late in March.

COBOURG.

Farming. On Tuesday last, Police Magistrate Dumble committed Joseph Benham, of Brighton, to gaol on a charge of perjury. Bail was refused.

A FALSE PRETENCE.—On Saturday last, Cornelius was sentenced to two months in for obtaining $10 from Messrs. R. G. Blackham and Wm. Steen, of Port Hope, for the ownership of a boat that belonged to Pat. Nolah, of Cobourg. The offence was committed last summer.

SUICIDE.—Edward Tierney fatally shot himself on Friday last at his home on the Brighton road near Trenton. Shortly before 3 o'clock he went into the woodshed and discharged the contents of one barrel of a shot gun into his left temple. The report was heard by his young brother, who ran to the shed and found the wounded man gasping for breath. Mr. W. E. Vandervoort, of Belleville, drove up at the same time and saw Tierney breathe his last. He was lying on his back with the gun by his right side, and lived about two minutes. He did not speak after firing the fatal shot. Deceased was about twenty-three years of age and lived with his widowed mother. He had been addicted to the use of strong drink, which was indirectly the cause of his tragic death.—World.

TENNYSON'S JUBILEE ODE.

Said to be Blank Verse, but Reads Like Very Blank Prose.

LONDON, March 29.—Tennyson's Jubilee ode is published. It is entitled "Carmen Seculare," and is in alternative three and eight-line blank verse stanzas. The first and second stanzas are as follows:—

Fifty times the rose has flowered and faded,
Fifty times the golden harvest fallen,
Since our Queen assumed the globe, the sceptre.

She, beloved for a kindliness,
Rare in fable or history,
Queen and Empress of India,
Crowned so long with a diadem,
Never worn by a worthier,
Now with prosperous auguries,
Comes at last to the bounteous
Crowning year of her Jubilee.

Of the next five stanzas the short ones sing the attributes of the Queen, and the long enjoin the nation to celebrate the Jubilee with illuminations, festivals, charities, etc. The subsequent stanzas read as follows:—

You, the patriot architect,
Shape a stately memorial;
Make it regally gorgeous—
Some Imperial Institute,
Rich in symbol and ornament,
Which may speak to the centuries,
All the centuries after us,
Of this year of her Jubilee.

Fifty years of ever broadening commerce,
Fifty years of ever brightening science,
Fifty years of ever widening empire.

You, the mighty, the fortunate,
You, the Lord territorial,
You, the Lord manufacturer,
You, the hardy, laborious, patient children of Albion,
You, Canadian, Indian, Australasian, African,

All your hearts be in harmony, all your voices in unison,
Singing hail to the glorious
Golden year of her Jubilee.

Are there thunders moaning in the distance?
Are there spectres moving in the darkness?
Trust the Lord of Light to guide her people till the thunders pass, the spectre vanish,
And the light is victor, and the darkness
dawns into the jubilee of the ages.

Food for Consumptives.

Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil, with Hyd pophosphites, is a most marvellous food and medicine. It heals the irritation of the throat and lungs, and gives flesh and strength quicker ter than any other remedy known. It is very palatable, having none of the disagreeable taste of the crude oil. NOTICE.

SEALED TENDERS, addressed to the undersigned and endorsed "Tender for Indian Supplies," will be received at this office up to noon of SATURDAY, 30th April, 1887, for the delivery of Indian Supplies during the fiscal year ending 30th June, 1888, consisting of Flour, Bacon, Groceries, Ammunition, Twine, Oxen, Cows, Bulls, Agricultural Implements, Tools, &c., duty paid, at various points in Manitoba and the North-West Territories.

Forms of tender containing full particulars relative to the Supplies required, dates of delivery, &c., may be had by applying to the undersigned, or to the Indian Commissioner at Regina, or to the Indian Office, Winnipeg.

Parties may tender for each description of goods (or for any portion of each description of goods) separately or for all the goods called for in the Schedules, and the department reserves to itself the right to reject the whole or any part of a tender.

Each tender must be accompanied by an accepted Cheque on a Canadian Bank in favour of the Superintendent General of Indian Affairs for at least five per cent of the amount of the tender, which will be forfeited if the party tendering declines to enter into a contract based on such tender when called upon to do so or if he fails to complete the work contracted for. If the tender be not accepted, the cheque will be returned.

Tenderers must make up in the Money columns in the Schedule the total money value of the goods they offer to supply or their tender will not be entertained.

Each tender must, in addition to the signature of the tenderer, be signed by two sureties, acceptable to the department, for the proper performance of the contract.

When implements of a particular make are mentioned it is because the articles so designated suit the department for the purpose required better than others; in such cases the competition between tenderers must, of course, be in the transportation to the place of delivery.

In all cases where transportation may be only partial by rail, contractors must make proper arrangements for supplies to be forwarded at once from railway stations to their dentination in the Government Warehouse at the point of delivery.

Tenderers will please note carefully the following conditions:—

1. Supplies will not be paid for until the Department has been assured of the satisfactory delivery of each article for which payment is claimed.
2. No tender for supplies of a description different to that given in the index will be considered, and supplies which are found, on delivery, to be of kind or quality different to those described, will be rejected by the agents of the department; and the contractor and his sureties will be held responsible for any loss entailed on the Department through failure to deliver in accordance with terms of contract.
3. It must be distinctly understood that supplies are to be delivered at the various points for the prices named in the tender; that no other additional charge for packing or any other account will be entertained, and that an invoice must accompany each separate delivery of supplies. An invoice for each separate delivery must also be sent to the Department of Indian Affairs at Ottawa, and one to the Indian Commissioner at Regina, if the supplies are for the North-West Territories. When the supplies are for points in the Manitoba Superintendency the triplicate invoice should be sent to E. McColl, Winnipeg.
4. Prices must be given for articles to be delivered at each point of delivery named in the Schedule for each article for which a tender is submitted, and not an average price for each article at all points of delivery; no tender based on a system of averages will be considered
5. Tenderers should understand that they must bear the cost, not only of sending their samples to the Department of Indian Affairs, but also freight charges incurred in returning such samples to the tenderer.
6. When supplies are to be delivered "equal to sample," tenderers should understand that the sample is to be seen either at the Department of Indian Affairs, at the office of the Indian Commissioner at Regina, at the office of the Inspector in charge at Winnipeg, or at any one of the undermentioned Indian Agencies.

FRIDAY, APRIL 1, 1887.

WORKINGMEN MEET

TO ADVANCE THE INTERESTS OF THE KNIGHTS OF LABOR.

Speeches by Several—Mr. E. C. Hill's Views on Social and Labor Questions —Another Meeting to be Held.

A meeting of the workingmen of the town was held in the Knights of Labor Hall on Tuesday evening. There was a fair attendance. Mr. J. W. Mowat being elected to the chair, called the meeting to order and explained the object of the meeting. For some time past a lodge of the Knights of Labor had been organized here but had not yet been brought prominently before the public and their desire now was to make themselves and their principles known.

Mr. EMMERSON, being called on, said that as he was not much of a speaker he would give them a reading. He then read the platform of the Knights of Labor as follows:—

I. To make industrial and moral worth, not wealth, the true standard of individual and National greatness.

II. To secure to the workers the full enjoyment of the wealth they create, sufficient leisure in which to develop their intellectual moral and social faculties: all of the benefits, recreation and pleasure of association; in a word to enable them to share in the gains and honors of advancing civilization.

In order to secure these results, we demand at the hands of the STATE:

III. The establishment of Bureaus of Labor Statistics, that we may arrive at a correct knowledge of the educational, moral and financial condition of the laboring masses.

IV. That the public lands, the heritage of the people, be reserved for actual settlers; not another acre for railroads or speculators, and that all lands now held for speculative purposes be taxed to their full value.

V. The abrogation of all laws that do not bear equally upon capital and labor, and the removal of unjust technicalities, delays and discriminations in the administration of justice.

VI. The adoption of measures providing for the health and safety of those engaged in mining and manufacturing, building industries, and for indemnification to those engaged therein for injuries received through lack of necessary safeguards.

VII. The recognition, by incorporation, of trades' unions, orders and such other associations as may be organized by the working masses to improve their condition and protect their rights.

VIII. The enactment of laws to compel corporations to pay their employees weekly, in lawful money, for the labor of the preceding week, and giving mechanics and laborers a first lien upon the product of their labor to the extent of their full wages.

IX. The abolition of the contract system on National, State and municipal works.

X. The enactment of laws providing for arbitration between employers and employed, and to enforce the decision of the arbitrators.

XI. The prohibition by law of the employment of children under 15 years of age in workshops, mines and factories.

XII. To prohibit the hiring of convict labor.

XIII. That a graduated income tax be levied.

And we demand at the hands of Parliament:

XIV. The establishment of a National monetary system, in which a circulating medium in necessary quantity shall issue direct to the people, without the intervention of banks; that all the National issue shall be full legal tender in payment of all debts, public and private; and that the Government shall not guarantee or recognize any private banks, or create any banking corporations,

XV. That interest-bearing bonds, bills of credit or notes shall never be issued by the Government, but that, when need arises, the emergency shall be met by the issue of legal tender, non-interest-bearing money.

XVI. That the importation of foreign labor under contract be prohibited.

XVII. That, in connection with the post-office, the Government shall organize financial exchanges, safe deposits and facilities for deposits of the savings of the people in small sums.

XVIII. That the Government shall obtain possession, by purchase, under the right of eminent domain, of all telegraphs, telephones and railroads, and that hereafter no charter or license be issued to any corporation for construction or operation of any means of transporting intelligence, passengers or freight.

And while making the foregoing demands upon the Provincial and National Governments, we will endeavor to associate our own labors.

XIX. To establish co-operative institutions such as will tend to supersede the wage system, by the introduction of a co-operative industrial system.

XX. To secure for both sexes equal pay for equal work.

XXI. To shorten the hours of labor by a general refusal to work for more than eight hours.

XXII. To persuade employers to agree to arbitrate all differences which may arise between them and their employees, in order that the bonds of sympathy between them may be strengthened and that strikes may be rendered unnecessary.

He then read figures obtained from the the Ontario Bureau of Statistics, showing that the workingmen in some places got not enough wages to support them, and in others got just a small margin over. He urged organization to remedy this. Organized labor always commanded higher rates.

The CHAIRMAN said that equity was their motto. They wanted only what was fair—a fair share of the profits of their labor. Low wages was a bad thing. The merchant or manufacturer did not profit by low wages as a rule, but it was the consumer that profited. A raise in wages meant a raise all round, and the consumer who paid more for his goods would himself have to get higher wages. Thus the purchasing power of all classes is increased. This was not a society to try to take capitalists by the neck, but rather to arrange matters to benefit them—to prevent the strikes that do so much injury. High wages meant good times. Money freely circulated then. But a low wages period was sure to be a period when the money is locked up in banks.

After a considerable pause, the chairman having called on several to speak with no responses,

Mr. E. C. HILL arose. It pained him to see this state of things. Here were free institutions of various kinds for the advancement of the masses and yet they were not taken advantage of. He held that in a country like this every young man should be able to get up in a public meeting and express his views on the question of the day.

Mr. F. W. MILLER said that the doctors and lawyers had unions, and to them the working men had to pay union prices every time. In lawyers' and doctors' offices the price they demanded for their work was put plainly on a card and hung on the wall. Why should not the laboring man have a schedule of what he demanded for his work? Fair wages was all they wanted. One advantage they could have by organization was to make this rate, but another was that they could elect men to the public offices who had their interests at heart.

Mr. BOWEN followed advocating organization. He also agreed with Mr. Miller in regard to Parliamentary representatives. If a lumberman was in Parliament he would talk lumber; if an iron manufacturer, he would talk iron; but what they wanted was men to speak for the workmen.

Mr. O'BRIEN said that many of the strikes had been blamed on the Knights of Labor, when they were not responsible for them.

Mr. T. HICKEY said that this was a prosperous town in every way, except respecting the K. of L. He would like to see an Assembly of 800 or 900 members here, and also a Ladies' Assembly.

Mr. F. FAIRIN also spoke briefly advocating union as the best means of bettering the condition of the workingman.

Mr. E. C. HILL, being called on, read a piece of poetry setting forth the toil of the 90 and 9 and the luxury of the 1. He then addressed the meeting. It was labor that made the world go on. The laboring man hews the wood and quarries the stone and shapes it into the stately mansion. His work brings the beautiful furniture in which the millionaire sits and the handsome mirror in which his daughters look at themselves. Behold what you will that is beautiful and, except that which is brought forth by labor. He had always been a Knight of Labor though not belonging to this organization before. The laboring man was more entitled to respect than any class in the community. Why even the dainty lady can't go to a ball without before going she kneels to the shoemaker to have her feet measured for her slippers. The workingmen were the class that built up the nation and he thought they had as good a right to unite and demand their just dues as doctors or lawyers. Why even the ministers had their unions In order to command a place in society the workingman should respect himself. The workingmen here were different from those of the United States. There when coming from the shop they dressed themselves like ordinary citizens. But here they went through the streets in all the blackness of the shop. Respect was due to the workingman. He would ask who was the most entitled to respect: The man who builds the locomotive to carry us where we wish to go, or the young fellow who steals his high education at the workingman's expense, rents a room, is too lazy to sweep the cobwebs down, and hangs out his shingle as Attorney at Law. (Laughter.) But since these institutions were free and the workingmen had to pay for them he blamed them for not using them for their children's benefit. Their children were entitled to hold the highest positions in the land if they could qualify for them. The workingmen's children, as a rule, were like a plant in a barren place with fertile earth all around. All it needed was some one to push the earth round and care for it a little to make it flourish and bring forth beautiful blossoms. There were some inconsistencies he could not see through. He could not see why, if a lawyer could live and get rich on four hours work a day, the workingman should be forced to work more than 8 hours at the most. He could not see why a rest on Saturday would not be just as beneficial to the workingman as to the people who get their $1,000 a year to teach French, German and Latin to a comparatively few boys and girls. Of course we were living in France and Germany, and Latin was also of prime importance to the workingman, and, therefore, they had to pay to support these teachers. But, said a certain lawyer to him, "we are the thinking part of the community." "Thinking part," he replied, "a young man learning his trade thinks as much in a week as you do all your life." If a trade is learned properly it required thought, and many a night of wakefulness was spent on it. He urged neutrality in political contests. Let the workingmen be like the Quakers—a company of friends. Let them work for one another and help each other and they would be a force mighty enough to lift the nation.

Messrs. Beavis, Bowen and others followed, after which on motion it was resolved to have another open meeting for workingmen next Thursday evening in the same place.

LATEST CABLE NEWS

TIRED OF CONVICTS.

SYDNEY, N. S. W., March 31.—In the Colonial Assembly, yesterday, a stringent bill was introduced for the protection of the colony against foreign criminals. Shipmasters landing any such criminals are to be made liable to a penalty of five years' penal servitude and their vessels will be forfeited.

WAR A CERTAINTY.

LONDON, March 31.—The Rome correspondent of the Daily Chronicle asserts that Mgr. Galimberti, while in Berlin, obtained a promise from Dr. Windthorst to reverence and obey the behests of the Holy See. The correspondent also says that Mgr. Galimberti obtained the impression that any attempt to improve the relations between France and Germany would be useless and that war would soon be a certainty.

HARTINGTON ON EVICTIONS.

LONDON, March 31.—The Marquis of Hartington, in his speech delivered at the inaugural dinner of the Liberal Union last evening, said that in his judgment Parliament should not refrain from legislation dealing with Irish rents fixed by the act of 1881. Referring to the enforcement of evictions, Lord Hartington said that if the Government would divise a more equitable method of adjusting the differences between landlords and tenants growing out of arrearages, such action would go far towards satisfying the English conscience.

A DENIAL DOUBTED.

BERLIN, March 31.—The Russian ambassador here denies that a new attempt has been made on the life of the Czar at Gatschina, but the denial meets with no credence.

ALSACE-LORRAINE.

BERLIN, March 31.—The future position of Alsace-Lorraine will, it is no secret, be an imperial province, with direct dependence on the Imperial Government at Berlin.

AN OPPOSITION OFFER.

LONDON, March 31.—The Opposition have informed the Government that they are willing to allow the first reading of the Crimes Bill to-day if the second reading is deferred until after the Easter recess. The Government is not inclined to consent to the proposition.

MR. MORLEY'S VIEWS.

LONDON, March 31.—Mr. John Morley, in a speech addressed to Liberals and Radicals last evening, characterized the provison of the Government's crimnal act amendment bill, changing the venue of trials from Ireland to England as not only grotesque but malignant, and could not have been drawn up by anyone having knowledge of the national sentiment of the Irish people. If the bill were passed Mr. Morley declares the Liberals were pledged to undo the mischief and injustice its operation entailed.

THE HARLON MURDER.

DUBLIN, March 31.— Police Inspector Somerville and Constable Garrett, who were found guilty by the coroner's jury of Murdering Hanlon at Youghal, have been released on their own recognizances.

LOSS OF THE EAGLE.

Supposed to Have Been Driven on the Breakers.

ST. JOHN, Nfld., March 31.—The sealing steamer Eagle was last seen by the steamer Aurora on the night of the 11th inst., near Funk's Island. A terrible sea was running at the time. Next morning the Aurora could find no trace of the Eagle, and nothing has been seen of the ill-fated vessel since. A message from Green Pond, about 100 miles from this place, says that keeper Cabot, of the lighthouse, had boarded the sealing steamers Vanguard and Hector. Both those vessels reported passing spars, forecastle and the name board of the Eagle near the spot where she was last seen. Lighthouse keeper Cabot is a reliable man, and from his knowledge of affairs there and the fact that the Eagle had not been seen since the 11th, while the other vessels of the fleet have been spoken every few days, it is universally believed that the vessel with her two hundred and sixty men was driven on the terrible breakers so numerous inside Funk's Island. The sea broke upon her and she probably sank immediately with her fifty crew on deck and two hundred and ten seal fishers below. The sea that swept the coast that night was the worst ever witnessed by the oldest sealers on board the other vessels. No ship once getting on to those terrible breakers could live.

ONTARIO LEGISLATURE

THE FIRST SESSION OF THE SIXTH PROVINCIAL PARLIAMENT.

Peterborough Boundary—Questions Answered—Mr. Mercier's Conference —Haliburton's Registrar—Municipal Franchise—The Game Law.

WEDNESDAY, March 30.—Several bills were introduced.

THE TOWN BOUNDARY.

Several bills received their third reading, including one, in charge of Mr. Stratton, to declare and define the correct boundary between the township of Smith and the town of Peterborough.

NIAGARA FALLS RAILWAY CO.

Mr. MOWAT, in reply to Mr. Meredith, said that no Order-in-Council had been passed directing he transfer of the Niagara Falls Railway. An order authorizing the company to proceed with its construction had not been passed, but had been applied for.

ALGOMA TIMBER DUES.

Mr. PARDEE, in reply to Mr. Meredith, said the government had assumed the right to collect dues for timber cut in the disputed territory west of the Provincial Boundary established in 1875 and for the year 1886 the amount realized at Rat Portage had been $14,797.

MR. MERCIER'S CONFERENCE.

Mr. MOWAT, in reply to Mr. Meredith, said he had received a communication from Mr. Mercier regarding the proposed conference. He had answered that he concurred in what was said as to the autonomy of the Provinces. In regard to financial arrangements he said this Province was satisfied with the provisions of the British North American Act and would prefer to have no change if its principals were carried out by the Dominion. In view of the financial difficulties of some of the Provinces this Government would be glad to consider and discuss any change which might be proposed by other Provinces. He stated also he approved of the proposition for a meeting of delegates from the Provinces representing, if possible, all the Local Governments of the Dominion with respect to both subjects. Until some proposal had been made and discussed it was not necessary to consult the Press. If anything should be done which by constitutional usage required the sanction of the House the Government would apply for it.

REGISTRAR OF HALIBURTON.

Mr. FELL moved for a return of copies of all correspondence received by the Government or any member thereof regarding the conduct of Frederick Mooney, registrar for the Provisional county of Haliburton, and any correspondence asking for an investigation into his general conduct. Also copies of any report made to the Government by any office who may have been instructed to investigate charges preferred against the registrar, if any such exist. He said that there were complaints that this registrar had been doing conveyancing and otherwise misbehaving himself.

Hon. Mr. MOWAT replied that charges had been preferred against the registrar and a report had been made. Owing to pressure of business he had not been able as yet to deal with the report. When the report was dealt with he would bring it down.

The motion was withdrawn.

RETURNS.

Mr. Meredith obtained an order for a return regarding revenue from that part of Algoma formerly known as the disputed territory, and Mr. Gibson (Huron) for a return of amounts received by counties and cities on account of Scott Act fines.

MUNICIPAL FRANCHISE.

Mr. PRESTON moved the second reading of his bill to abolish the farmers' sons' franchise and substitute that of landholders' sons.

Mr. FRASER said this bill opened the whole question as to whether the municipal franchise should follow on the lines of the Parliamentary franchise. The Government was preparing an amendment to obviate the difficulty about entering farmers' sons on the assessment roll.

After further discussion the bill was withdrawn.

EXECUTION SEIZURES.

Mr. Gibson's (Hamilton) bill relating to exemptions from seizure under execution was referred to a special committee.

THE GAME LAW.

Mr. BALFOUR moved the second reading of his bill allowing the spring shooting of all water fowl.

Mr. GARSON moved a hoist, that the bill be read on May 24th.

After a discussion the amendment was carried by a vote of 44 to 34.

Several bills were read the second time and a number of private bills were passed through committee. The House adjourned at 6.20 p.m.

Celluloid Collars and Cuffs for ladies and Gentlemen are to be had very cheap at Rowse's Trade Palace.

A SHUFFLING PLEA.

But if injustice had been done, Mr. Mowat could not shelter himself behind Sir John Macdonald. Two wrongs do not make one right. Mr. Mowat would not be justified by the fact (if it is a fact) that Sir John had done the like. The simple question is this: Has Mr. Mowat fairly and honestly divided the Ontario constituencies? That question he ought to answer. He can defend his measures or he cannot. By putting in his pitiful, shuffling plea that Sir John has done the same thing he confesses his guilt. —Hamilton Spectator.

CHOLERA IN HUNGARY.

PESTH, March 30.—Three cases of Asiastic cholera have been discovered here.

Brain Work

Requires for its successful and pleasurable pursuit a full, uniform and continuous supply of pure, rich blood to the brain. If, through the torpidity of the liver, the blood becomes foul with bile, the brain is poisoned and over-stimulated with the excess of blood which the irritated heart sends to it with frantic impulses. Dizziness, heaviness, loss of memory, impossibility of application to any kind of work, reveal the truth. To relieve this, and preserve not only the brain but the whole system in the best working order, Dr. Pierce's "Golden Medical Discovery" will be found invaluable.

The Daily Review.

FRIDAY, APRIL 1, 1887.

THE PARLIAMENT BUILDING JOB.

MESSRS. DARLING & CURRIE, architects, of Toronto, are not disposed to submit to the unjust treatment of them by the Mowat Administration in regard to the new Parliament buildings. They have published a pamphlet, embodying their letters to Mr. Mowat and Mr. Fraser, which show how badly both the architects and the people of Ontario have been treated. No wonder the Ministers refused to bring down the correspondence for the perusal of the members.

It appears that the plan of Messrs. Darling & Currie, with that of Messrs. Gordon & Helliwell, were considered the best of the many competing in 1880, but in spite of their excellence neither could be accepted because they would cost somewhat more than the sum then authorized bo the Legislature, namely, $500,000. So much were they approved, however, by the experts reporting on them, the Hon. A. Mackenzie, Mr. Storm, a Toronto architect, and Mr. Waite, a Buffalo architect, that the Ministry next year instructed Messrs. Darling & Currie to prepare modified plans, being now allowed to exceed $500,000, which, however they were to depart from as little as possible.

In 1885, the vote having been raised by the Legislature to $750,000, these plans were again submitted to Mr. Waite, this time alone. Now it may have been very right to select a foreign architect as one of three experts to pronounce on the plans, but it certainly was not just to make him sole judge of the work of his Canadian professional rivals, more especially as he seems to have been invested with the fullest powers of condemnation. For presently it leaked out that Mr. Waite, of Buffalo, thought that none of the Canadian architects competing were qualified to design our Legislative buildings. Then Mr. Waite, himself was given the job. He had been empowered by a secret report to brush his professional rivals out of his way, and then he was allowed to make his own plans, not being cramped as they were by a limit of cost, but being permitted his full swing regardless of expense. The contract for the mere brick and masonry work of his stupendous building has been let for a sum exceeding the amount to which the Legislature saw fit to limit the expenditure for the whole edifice.

Messrs. Darling & Currie naturally wished to see the report on which the Administration dismissed them so unfairly. A short time ago the Commissioner of Public Works offered to show it to them if they agreed not to make it public, an offer which they very properly declined. Now, however, the Ministers tell the House that they cannot bring down the report as it was only verbal, but they are willing to have one written now. Evidently in this case, as in that of the Lennox Registrarship, the Ministerial memory is failing, and if this goes on it may become a question for medical experts to consider whether this defect does not render them unfit to transact business.

There is, however, another flaw in this miserable business for which a defective memory can hardly be pleaded in excuse. The Administration have cooked the accounts as presented to the House. The contract with Lionel Yorke under date of Oct. 7, 1886, for the brick and masonry work of the Parliament and Departmental building is stated to be for $670,250. This is not the true amount. The falsification seems to have been perpetrated to keep secret as long as possible the usurpation of the Mowat Administration in defying the limit which the Legislature set for the expenditure on the new buildings. They have taken upon themselves to increase the expenditure of the people of Ontario without any authorization from them or their representatives. If they thought the House too penurious in this matter, Mr. Mowat and his colleagues had an opportunity at the general election of appealing to the electors. But instead of doing this they carefully kept the people in the dark, not even hesitating at falsehood to hoodwink them.

DISCLAIMERS WELCOMED.

THE Ottawa Free Press says we publicly apologised to a member of its staff to avoid an action for libel. The Free Press is not very accurate. If we had wronged a member of the staff of the Free Press or any other man we would hasten to apologise, but there was no question of apology in this case. One of the members of the Free Press staff wrote to inform us that he was not the person who sent telegrams injurious to Canada to United States journals. We had never said or insinuated that he was guilty of the offence, and we readily accepted and published the denial he volunteered for himself personally, and also accepted his disclaimer for the rest of the staff as far as his own knowledge extended. As he wished to place himself right with the public in this respect we readily obliged him, but having made no charge against him we had nothing to apologise for.

We will now have great pleasure in opening our columns to any other honest gentleman connected with the Ottawa Free Press who may wish to repudiate any connection with the theft or receiving of stolen official reports published in that journal. Probably there are some members of the Free Press staff who do not approve of this kind of "journalistic enterprise," and we will gladly give publicity to their disclaimers.

THE MARKET REPORTS.

REVIEW OFFICE,
Thursday Evening.

The local market has been dull this week, but if the buyer had little to buy he had the satisfaction of paying high prices for wheat, at least. The advance in the price of wheat is the most noteworthy fact. From last weeks quotations it has advanced from two to five cents. Eighty-five cents was paid for choice seed wheat this afternoon. There is little or nothing to say of other commodities.

At the end of March, 1886, the visible supply of wheat in Canada and the United States was computed to be forty-nine million, seven hundred and seventy three thousand nine hundred and seventy nine bushels. The visible supply on hand at the present time is nearly three million bushels larger, the amount being fifty-two million four hundred and eleven thousand six hundred and ninety-four bushels. This fact argues that wheat should go down in price but nevertheless it is advancing.

Cheese.

The Montreal Gazette says:—There is really nothing on which to base a report concerning the cheese market. Nearly all the stock has been shipped out (wholly by way of Boston) and it is not probable that more than 3,000 boxes remain to go forward. Business, therefore, is solely on local account. Exports from Portland for the week ending march 26th were 1,197 boxes, all on through shipment. The exports from Portland up to date were 122,804 boxes, of which 78,126 were on through shipmegt, against 171,756 in 1886, and 106,559 in 1875. The total exports from Montreal and Portland from May 2nd to date were 1,014,769 boxes, against 1,248,357 in 1886, and 1,251,160 in 1885, a decrease of 233,588 boxes from last year, and of 200,391 from 1885. The cable was unchanged at 65s. A year ago quotations were 9¼c @10¼c., with the cable at 50s.

French Needs.

Beerbohm of March 18th says that the French farmers are declared to be about as badly off as those in the United Kingdom, although one would have thought that with the duty equal to 5s 3d per quarter, which has been in force two years, their condition at any rate must be less distressing, and that any further enhancement was not urgently required What would, however, seem to confirm the view that last season's duty-paid prices have not been found sufficiently encouraging is the fact asserted in some recent advices that the era sown for the present crop is only about the same as the previous season, which again had not been naturally supposed to materially exceed the year before. If this is correct it is evident that the further imports into France now after prices have finally adjusted themselves, cease to be not much less than in former years.

Furs.

The following suggestions will be of interes to trappers:—

CASED.—Ermine, Fisher, Foxes, Lynx, Marten, Mink, Opossum, Otter, Skunk, must be "cased" that is, not cut open. In skinning, cut at the rump and turn the skin inside out (like a glove) over the body of the animal, leaving the pelt side out.

Then after scraping, cleaning and dying, turn the skin back again while it is soft and easily managed, leaving the fur side out.

Then put a thin board inside the skin, cut the natural shape of it, stretching the skin to its fullest extent, but not so much as to make the fur thin. Too much stretching spreads the fur over a large surface, and makes it thin and lacking in richness. A liberal supply of good boards should be kept on hand.

Stand or hang in a dry, airy, shady place.

Keep out of sun, away from fire and smoke.

Remove board when fairly dry.

Never use bent sticks, bows or anything irregular in shape or that yields.

When the above are "opened" they have a southern appearance that lessens the value greatly

OPEN.—Badger, Bear, Beaver, Cats, Racoon, Wolves, Wolverine, must be "open;" that is, cut open, up the belly from rump to head. After scraping, cleaning and drying, stretch a uniformly oblong shape to the fullest extent of the skin, but not so much as to make the fur thin.

When thoroughly dry, trim off legs, shanks, flippers and any little pieces that spoil appearance of skin, but leave on heads and noses.

EXCEPTIONS. — Beaver are sometimes stretched almost round, but appear very much better stretched oblong. Value by the skin, never by the pound. They rapidly lose heavily in weight. They bring most sold by the skin.

Muskrats must be "cased," but with fur side in. Chop off the tails as explained. Skin at the nose and make rumps square.

Round tails have less value and do not sell well.

Muskrats must not be injured by shot or spearing. Trap them.

NOTICE—Skins that have been dried without proper care can be treated same as fresh green skins. Otherwise they have no value. Dissolve a handful of common salt in a pail of fresh water, and apply frequently with brush or rag (to pelt side only as it spoils appearance to wet the fur) until the pelt becomes perfectly soft. Then handle as explained.

The same with "open" skins.

CAUTION.—Trap furs. Spearing tears the pelt. Shot cuts the pelt and shaves off the fur. Both do bad injury and lessen selling price.

Do not cure with alum or salt. It injures them for dressing and spoils their sale.

Do not dry skins at a fire or in the sun, or in smoke.

It often "burns" them, when they then spoil and ruin on being dressed.

Dry in the open air where shady.

Meaty skins often "burn." The meat and fat on them "heats" and "burns" them, and they then go to pieces and rot on being dressed.

Skins should be attended to at once, when fresh, and every particle of fat and flesh removed, when it can be done easily, and without tearing or injuring the pelt.

Too much warmth curls and spoils the top fur or hair.

Never stuff furs of any kind; dry and stretch as explained.

Do not stretch out the noses and make them pointed.

It gives a Southern appearance and lessens value.

Do not cut off heads, ears or noses, or mutilate in any way.

It lessens value and injures sale.

Remove as much of bone from tail as possible, otherwise the tail rots.

The pelt should be as clean and smooth as a piece of paper.

Skunk with the white stripe (or any portion) shaved out, blackened, or tampered with, must be collected at half price.

The Spring moulting animals must not be killed until they have at least a fair growth of fur.

Stop trapping as soon in early spring as the fur begins to shed or becomes thin, or a little faded.

These too early or too late caught furs are a disgrace to fur trappers and collectors, and a wasteful, worthless slaughter.

SOMETHING NEW UNDER THE SUN!

GOUGH'S

FRESH ARRIVAL OF SPRING OVERCOATS AND SUITS

ARE THE NOBBIEST AND NEWEST UNDER THE SUN!

Those High-Price "Clothing Dealers" can't see the funny about GOUGH'S GIFT DEPARTMENT, and claim such things as beneath them. Yes, low advertising is beyond their comprehenson, because they don't understand the first principles of Low Price System. We freely admit that we are fallen clothiers, wallowing in the lowest depths of Bed Rock Prices, while our exalted brethern look down upon us from their high places, and go wild because we capture the trade.

☞ Farmers, Mechanics, Merchants, Bankers and Laboring men, come in and see us, take no man's word. Investigate and believe your own eyes, and you will be convinced that GOUGH is the Cheapest Clothier on earth.

This week we will offer extraordinary inducements. All our departments have been augmented with new features and choice stock, which will justly excite the admiration of all visitors. Call! It will pay as well as please you to see.

GOUGH, the Wonderful Cheap Man, Peterborough.

N.B.—Be sure of the place, four life-size signs on front of building. Look up for them.

GREAT

CLEARING OUT SALE.

GENUINE ∴ BARGAINS

In Each Department.

I have decided to let the whole of my present Stock go at Wholesale Cost Price. In these days people expect Bargains, and feel justified in obtaining all they can for their money.

I will give the inhabitants of Peterboro' and surrounding country a chance for once of getting Reliable Goods at prices that will, in truth, be Bargains, of which they are invited to come and judge for themselves.

The Stock consists of the usual Staple Goods besides a large variety of FANCY GOODS not to be had elsewhere in town, viz.:—

Dress Goods, Velveteens, Gloves, Hosiery and Underwear.

Blankets, Quilts, Table Linen, &c.

Small Wares in great variety.

Fancy Goods, such as Desks, Work Boxes, etc.

Fancy Work in Slippers, Cushions, Brackets, Silk and Filoselle Wools, etc.

Mens Underwear in Merino and Wool, and Mens Furnishings generally.

After 23 years' business in Peterborough, I wish to give my old customers and the public generally something unusual in Real Bargains, and will be pleased to see them as quickly as possible avail themselves of them, for, of course, those coming early will have the largest choice.

JOSEPH SOLD TO EGYPT.

CRITICAL AND PRACTICAL NOTES BY PROF. SAMUEL I. CURTISS.

Lesson I of the International Series, Second Quarter, for Sunday, April 3—Text of the Lesson, Genesis xxxvii, 23-36. Golden Text, Genesis xxxix, 21.

Jacob had twelve sons. Two of them, Joseph and Benjamin, were by his wife Rachel, who would doubtless have been his only wife had it not been for the greed of Laban. The narrative with which we are concerned in this lesson shows some of the evils of polygamy. The eldest son was Reuben, but the elder son of Rachel, although really the eleventh in the order of his birth, was Joseph. Taken all in all, he is the most beautiful character of Old Testament history. No wonder his father loved him. In view of Reuben's lust, and Simeon and Levi's cruelty, and the evil report that came from some of his other sons, he not only gave him the preference because he was Rachel's son and the son of his old age, but perhaps intended to give him the rights of the first born. We may suppose that the mark of distinction which he put upon him in clothing him with a coat of many colors, or, as the margin of the revised version reads, in accordance with the view of the majority of scholars, in clothing him with a long tunic having sleeves and reaching to his feet, was an indication of his intention as well as his special fondness for Joseph.

This aroused the jealousy of his brothers, which was still further awakened by his wonderful dreams regarding his brothers' sheaves bowing down to his sheaf and in respect of the sun and moon and eleven stars showing him royal honors. These were not merely fancies of a bright and ambitious mind, but were doubtless communications from God himself. From this time on, with the exception of one chapter, the book of Genesis is occupied with Joseph as the central figure in the history.

At the time when this chapter opens, Jacob was dwelling in Hebron, but his sons, with the exception of the two youngest, were pasturing his flocks in the vicinity of Shechem, which had been the scene of the frightful massacre by Simeon and Levi. Dr. Thomson tells us, from his observations in the Orient, that it is not at all surprising that the sons of Jacob should so soon have visited a place which seemed to be so much fraught with danger. Perhaps for this reason Jacob was concerned about them and particularly anxious to know about their welfare. In any case his desire was a natural one to get tidings from them, when there was probably no other way of hearing from them.

At his father's command Joseph undertook the journey from Hebron to Shechem, which would require more than two days and which involved no little peril on account of lions, bears, panthers and wolves, which infested the country at that time.

On arriving at Shechem he failed to find his brethren, as he was wandering about in search of them he learned that they had gone to Dothan (or the two wells), a place nearly twelve miles north of Shechem. When they saw him coming, instead of being glad to see him, they agreed to kill him, to cast him into a pit, and to report to their father that he had been devoured by a wild beast. Reuben, however, persuaded them to cast him alive into a pit, with the intention of rescuing him and restoring him to his father. These pits are common in Palestine. They are in the shape of a demijohn, and are designed to hold rain water. During part of the year they are dry, and were often used as dungeons, and although sometimes not deep, yet, on account of their peculiar shape, it would be impossible to climb out.

THE LESSON.

Joseph in the Pit (vs. 23, 24).—With engaging frankness and confidence the handsome youth came to his brothers only to be roughly seized by them, and notwithstanding his entreaties, which were enough to melt a heart of stone (Gen. xlii, 21), they stripped him of his beautiful garment and rudely thrust him into a pit.

V. 25. Their utter unconcern for the crime which they intended to commit was manifested by their sitting down to eat (compare Prov. xxx, 20). Their hearts were as hard as the hearts of those who live on the hire of the gambler, the drunkard or the fallen; but the time was coming when they were to be tormented with the memory of that hour (Gen. xlii, 21; l, 15-18). As they looked up they saw a caravan of Ishmaelites, who were on their way to Egypt.

Joseph Sold (vs. 26-28).—In the absence of Reuben, Judah, who was born for leadership, proposed that they should sell him as a slave. He said that thus they would avoid shedding the blood of one who was their own flesh. The proposition pleased his brethren. As the Ishmaelites came to hand they were discovered to be Midianitish merchantmen. Joseph, therefore, was drawn up from the pit and sold for twenty pieces of silver, or ten shekels less than the ordinary price of a slave, although boys from 5 to 20 years of age were sold for the same amount as Joseph (Lev. xxvii, 5).

Vs. 29, 30. Meanwhile Reuben returned and went to the pit, only to find that Joseph was gone. In the report which he gives to his brethren he manifests the same lack of dignity and control which appear later on, and which are marks of the instability of which his father complains when he says, in after years, "Unstable as water, thou shalt not excel." (Gen. xlix, 4).

Jacob's Bitter Cup (vs. 31-33).—Jacob was once more to drink the cup of deception to the very dregs, which he had pressed to his father's lips years before, and which he had already found so bitter. His sons kill a he goat, they dip Joseph's mantle in it, send it to their father, saying that they have found it, and ask whether he recognizes it as his son's coat. The plan succeeds. He believes, as they wish to have him, that Joseph is torn in pieces. But although they had succeeded in deceiving their father, the subsequent record shows how there came a terrible awakening when they felt, perhaps for the rest of their lives, the pangs of a guilty conscience.

Jacob Not Comforted (vs. 34, 35).—Jacob was overwhelmed with grief. As is customary among Orientals, he rent his clothes and put sackcloth upon his loins. Although his sons and daughters sought to comfort him, he refused to be comforted. Heaven had not then been clearly revealed, although we read in the New Testament that the patriarchs were seeking a heavenly country (Heb. xi, 16). We have no evidence that he knew anything of the resurrection. For him there was no comfort in the hope of reunion with Joseph in the future life. He could think only of his son in the dark, shadowy abode of sheol (see the Revised Version, margin to v. 35), for Jesus had not brought life and immortality to light through the gospel (II Tim., i, 10.

God's Plan (v. 36).—Although Jacob was now suffering for the deception which he practiced on his father, yet God was, after all, causing all things to work together for his good. It was a necessary part of God's plan, as we shall see hereafter, that Joseph should go to Egypt. Hence the Midianites were furthering God's plan when they sold Joseph to Potiphar, an officer of Pharaoh, who was chief of the executioners. God's plan was carried out even by Joseph's brethren (compare Matt. xxvi, 24); but they were to suffer something of the woe which befalls evil doers even in this life.

POINTS TO BE REMEMBERED.

1. Jealousy often makes men murderers.
2. God has established different classes in society. The attempt to break down such natural distinctions, through communism or anarchism, leads to madness and murder.
3. Sin brings its own punishment.
4. We should be thankful for him who has brought life and immortality to light in the gospel.
5. God overrules the wickedness of men for good in the fulfillment of his purposes. (Ps. lxxvi, 10).—Sunday School World.

The Rahway Tragedy.

JERSEY CITY, N J., March 30.—Anthony Knolls was arrested last night on suspicion of being the murderer of the unknown woman found on Saturday morning in Rahway with her throat cut from ear to ear. He was arraigned in court to-day, but nothing new was learned, and he was remanded till to-morrow.

NEWARK, N. J., March 30.—Superintendent Harper, of the Newark City Home, visited Rahway to-day. It is said that he identified the body of the murdered girl as that of Mary Malbey, a former inmate of the institution. Since her discharge she has been living with a Mrs. Marsh. The latter will go to Rahway to-morrow to view the body. While here the girl kept company with a man named Byrne.

Immigrants Snowed Up.

OTTAWA, March 31.—The department of Agriculture has information to the effect that about 1,000 emigrants, who arrived in Halifax by the steamer Parisian, are snowed up on the line of the Intercolonial railroad, between Rimouski and River du Loup. The storms on this part of the line are reported to be the worst ever seen in Canada. All the mails have been delayed several days. The drifts in some places between Rimouski and River du Loup are reported to be 30 feet in height.

Astonishing Success

It is the duty of every person who has used Boschee's German Syrup to let its wonderful qualities be known to their friends in curing Consumption, severe Coughs, Croup, Asthma, Pneumonia, and in fact all throat and lung diseases. No person can use it without immediate relief. Three doses will relieve any case, and we consider it the duty of all Druggists to recommend it to the poor, dying consumptive at least to try one bottle, as 70,000 dozen bottes were sold last year, and no one case where it failed was reported. Such a medicine as the German Syrup cannot be too widely known. Ask your druggist about it Sample bottles to try, sold at 10 cents. Regular size, 75 cents. Sold by all Druggists and Dealers, in the United States and Canada. d90

Our New Citizen.

The Aurora Borealis, of Aurora, Ont., of the 11th March contains the following with reference to Mr. Sheppard, who has just taken up his residence with us:—"We regret to state that Mr. Sheppard has definitely decided to remove from Aurora. Since coming here some two years ago he has proved himself a sharp, shrewd business man. He has endeavoured to supply customers with goods at a reasonable profit, and treat rich and poor with equal courtesy. We are sure the people of this section will join with us in wishing Mr. Sheppard and family all prosperity and happiness in their future home. We further cordially recommend that gentleman to the business community of Peterborough, whither, we believe, he is going."

Lundy, one of Peterborough's oldest residents, died on Thursday night at his place in North Monaghan, He was born in the County of Cavan, Ireland, and came to this couny when Peterborough was a village, and has lived in its vicinity ever since. He was nearly 73 years of age at the time of his death.

Why, Maggie, where did you get your beautiful dress? I got it at Rowse's. We buy all our Dress Goods at the Trade Palace. They are so cheap.

Browne Medal.

The bronze medal awarded to the Peterborough Lock Manufacturing Company at the Colonial and Indian Exhibition, London, Eng., arrived this morning. It bears on one side the head of the Executive President, the Prince of Wales, and on the other the name and date of the exhibition. This company was the only one awarded a medal at the exhibition for such goods as are made by them, and this fact is something they and the town might be proud of. The diploma awarded them is on exhibition in the window of Messrs. Fairweather & Co.'s store.

Vital Statistics.

The record of vital statistics for the month of March of the town of Peterborough, kept by Mr. Macdonald, divisional registrar, is as follows:—

Births	25
Marriages	11
Deaths	5

This is the largest number of births that have been registered in one month for many years, while the death rate is very low. The returns for the months of January, February and March are as follows;—

Births	58
Marriages	22
Deaths	20

Gentlemen, it will pay you to call and see Rowse's stock of Gent's Furnishings. Everything stylish and cheap.

Salaries.

At a meeting of the Committee on Appointments for the Board of Education it was agreed to recommend increasing the salaries of Messrs. Stirling, Head Master of the South Ward Schoool, Mr. McCreary, Head Master of the West Ward School, and Mr. Smith, Principal of the Public School. Mr. Stirling's salary will be, according to recommendation, $600 instead of $500, Mr. McCreary's $600 instead of $500, and Mr Smith's $750 instead of $700. Other applications for increases of salaries will be held over till the open meeting of the Board. It was moved to appoint Mr. Jas. Stratton Public School Inspector at $150 a year. An amendment was moved to appoint him at $200 a year. Both motion and amendment were lost.

Children's Button Boots for 80 cents at Kidd's are really good.

Investigation.

At the Police Court this morning the ten young men whom the police suspected of having been implicated in breaking in Curtain's eating house on Sunday night were arraigned, charges of disorderly conduct being preferred against them by Capt. Cooper. Mr. E. B. Edwards appeared for the town, and Mr. W. H. Moore, for the defendants. Pleas of not guilty were entered on behalf of John Armour, jr., John Smith, R. Robinson, W. Aynsly, Geo. Duncan, John Douglas, A. Webster, A Robinson, John Bunting, and Jos. Neilist. The case occupied from 10 a.m till 1.15 p.m., and during that time a large amount of evidence was taken, some of it very contradictory. At the close the Magisirate said he would give judgment to-morrow. He obliged four of the ten to give bail for their appearance to-morrow—Geo. Duncan, John Smith, John Armour and Jos. Neilist.

A TERRIBLE FALL.

On George Street, next to Long's Confectionery Store, is situated Rowse's Trade Palace, where are sold Black, Cardinal and Gold Corsets at 50c. This is a terrible fall in price.

FOR ANOTHER WEEK.

The Temperance Revival Meetings to be Continued—Thursday Night's Meeting.

The temperance meeting on Thursday night, March 31st, which was held in St. Paul's Presbyterian Church, was very largely attended, the capacious edifice being filled. The Rev. J. Judd White, the Rev. F. H. Wallace, B.D., and the Rev. J. C. Wilson occupied seats on the platform, and each delivered an address. Mr. Wallace, in his address, explained the absence of the pastor of St. Paul's, the Rev. Mr. Torrance, who was detained by a cold.

Mr. White's address, as usual, was largely humorous, but was an effective one. Mr. Wallace referred to the fact that his father (the Rev. R. Wallace, Presbyterian minister, of Toronto) had been for very many years an advocate of temperance, and he (the Rev. F. H.) having been nurtured in the principles of temperance, had never departed from them. Mr. Wilson also gave a practical address.

Singing was, at all the meetings, a marked feature of the services, a large choir leading in that part of the service. Mrs. White, wife of the Rev. J. Judd White, who is a good alto singer, assisted her husband and the choir.

At the close of the meeting, which was one of the most successful of the services, at a consultation of members of the Women's Union and the Royal Templars, it was decided to ask Mr. White to remain another week and continue the temperance

This evening, after a service of song in revival. Mr. White consented, and the meetings will continue for another week. the George Street Church, Mr. White will conduct a meeting at Auburn.

—Juicy joints of Easter beef.

—The jolly butchers to beam with good humor at the coming harvest.

—Piscatorial diet to be shelved for a time.

—A big audience at the police court tomorrow morning.

—Street fights to subside.

Farewelled.

On Wednesday evening a number of Mr. Ed. Clegg's friends met to do him honor on his departure to Montreal, where he will fill a position in a leading wholesale house. Mr. Clegg, who has been bookkeeper at Fairweather & Co.'s dry goods store for some time, is a young man who by steadiness of habit, good business ability, and courtesy to all, has won the confidence of his employers and the respect and friendship of many. Good feeling was expressed toward him on Wednesday evening by his being presented with a beautiful gold watch and an address, in which his friends expressed themselves as being both sorry and glad.

THE KNIGHTS OF LABOR.

Important Letter from Archbishop Manning Endorsing the Order.

BALTIMORE, Md., March 31.—A special from Rome gives the following as the text of a letter from Cardinal Manning regarding the Knights of Labor to a prominent divine of that city:—

"LONDON, March 11.

"MY DEAR LORD,—I have read with great assent Cardinal Gibbons' document in relation to the Knights of Labor. The Holy See will, I am sure, be convinced by his exposition of the state of the new world. I hope it will open a new field of thought and action. It passes understanding that officious persons should be listened to rather than Church officials. Surely the episcopate of the wide world is the most powerful and direct instrument in the hands of the Holy See for gathering correct local knowledge and enforcing its decisions. Who can know the temper of America, England and Ireland as well as they who have a finger upon the pulse of the people? Hitherto the world has been governed by dynasties. Henceforth the Holy See will have to deal with the people and the bishops in close daily and personal contact with the people. The more clearly and fully his is pressed the stronger Rome will be. Never at any time has the episcopacy been so detached from the civic powers and united in itself, and so well able to see, to realize and to use its powers. The failure to see and use these powers will breed much trouble and mischief. My thanks are due to the Cardinal for letting me share in the argument. If I can find a copy of my lecture on "The Dignity and Rights of Labor," I will send it to him. It will, I think, qualify me for knighthood in the order. Brentano, some years ago, published books on the Guilds, in which he proves that the association of labor and the crafts go back to antiquity; but there is this notable fact, in the English and Teutonic laws—they were recognized, favored and chartered; in Imperial and Latin laws they were rigorously prohibited. We are at this day as a church the mother, friend and protector of the people. As the Lord walked among them, so His church lives among them. The Cardinal's argument is irresistible.

"Your affedtionate servant in Christ,

"HENRY EDWARD,
"Cardinal Archbishop of Westminister."

Children Cremated.

HALIFAX, N.S., March 31.—While a farmer at Long lake, Madawaska country, N. B., was working at some flax, it ignited and set fire to his house. Two children of four and five years were burned to death, and the remainder of the family barely escaped with their lives.

Another New Cruiser.

HALIFAX, N. S., March 31.—The new cutter for the Dominion fishery protection service, called the Triumph, was launched at Shelburne yesterday. She is 106 tons register, and it is said she will prove a good sea boat. The new war ship takes the place of the schooner Howlette, and will be put into service at once on the western coast of Nova Scotia, the Howlette being put out of commission. The latter schooner was commanded by Capt. Chas. Lorway, of Sydney, C. B., last summer, and he will probably be given the charge of the Triumph. The new cutter is expected to be very fast. She has fine lines and is quite a handsome vessel.

FORCES IN A SUNBEAM

A LECTURE BY BISHOP WARREN IN THE GEO. ST. CHURCH.

The Many Powers of Sunlight Described —The Colors, Heat, Light, and Other Factors of the Sunbeam—An Interesting Discourse.

On Friday evening Bishop H. W. Warren, of the Episcopal Methodist Church of the United States, delivered a lecture in the George Street Methodist Church, his subject being "Forces in a Sunbeam."

The Rev. J. Judd White sang several songs before the lecturer was introduced.

Bishop WARREN, in commencing, spoke of the planetary motions, the accuracy with which time pieces are regulated by the stars, through the agency of astronomers, and of the peculiar manner by which the velocity of light was discovered. Its velocity is 185,000 miles per second. That was the sunbeams first force—its ability to travel with unparalleled speed. They spoke of instantaneous photography. It was not instantaneous. It took the twenty thousandth part of a second for light to do its work after the exposure. What a grand invention to transfer the precious features of our babes to paper. (Smiles). The sun rises in the morning—we say it does, though the earth simply rolls over so that we may see the sun. It takes eight minutes for light to get to us. We say we see the sun when in reality we don't see it at all. We see rays of light which we suppose have been emitted by the sun. We know that the sun exists simply by faith—a mode by which we receive 99-100 of our instruction. From the nearest fixed star it takes light not 8 minutes but 3 years to wing its rapid way down to where our little solar system rolls around. From the next fixed star it takes 7 years to come to us, and from the stars of the 12th magnitude it took a beam of light thousands of years to get to the place where we live. These last stars might have been blotted out of existence before the creation of Adam, and still the last rays of light that leaped from their bosoms would not yet have reached us.

A ball leaving the barrel of a rifle travels 2,000 feet the first second, 1 500 the next, and 8,000 the next, and then it stops. We cannot put enough force behind that ball to keep it going. Not so with light. It travels unimaginable distances It still flows on with the same speed and presents the same lustre as when it left its sun. This is the second force of the sunbeam.

Water and air cannot be driven in opposite directions within the same lines without having a collision. A railroad conductor once said, when threatened with dismissal on account of a collision happening, that he was now convinced that it was impossible for two trains travelling in opposite directions at the same time to get past each other without colliding, and that, therefore, he wouldn't try it again. Not so with the sunbeams. They can go in opposite directions, pass and repass each other without let, hindrance or injury. This is the third force of the sunbeam.

This sunbeam was not an indivisable thing. It was possessed of various faculties and energies. The ray of white light when dissected by the prism fell into seven colors. These seven separate entities travel together through space like a regiment. But it was not the steady tramp, tramp, tramp of the regiment on dress parade. These factors of the sunbeam all go in different paces and yet keep together as they fly. All of these factors were possessed of different powers. We wake in the morning and say that the sky is red. More correctly we should say that the heavy masses of vapor between us and the sun at this particular time are impregnable to 6-7 of the sunbeam and that the red is the only color that pierces it. Like the victorious part of a company making an assault, though the others have fallen the stronger press on to take the redoubt. So the red beam triumphs with victory on its lip and the flush of glory on its cheek. He demonstrated the different steps, yet the same rate of speed, of the sunbeam by showing that although the vibrations to produce the soprano note was many times the number required to produce the bass, the sounds of each reached the end of a long hall at the same time. The lowest sound was produced by 16 vibrations per second. Few ever heard it. The highest was produced by 38,000 vibrations per second, and it required the most delicate and sensitive woman to catch the sound. All hearing was lost at 40,000 vibrations per second. Perhaps that was why women talked more than men—they heard more He asked why light might not be produced by musical vibrations as by any other kind. He argued too that there might be music in the sunbeam and a still higher harmony in the motion of the planetary train. Shakesphere had this idea as was evidenced by Lorenzo's words in the "Merchant of Venice." He spoke of the impressionability of the sunbeam. The salt contained in a tear was sufficient to change its color. By this way astronomers could tell, by examining the beams from different stars, what those stars were made of. He classed the other forces of a sunbeam by military terms. A. was light; B. was the influence that made vegetation thrive, C. was heat. In a very interesting way he described the uses of each. There were also different kinds of heat in the sunbeam. There was a kind that went through the window glass with facility; there was another which would not, and it was a good job for us, for it would be a hard thing to heat houses in the winter if it did. The forces of the sunbeam was far greater than gravitation. Gravitation cried: "I will hold the water to the earth." The sunbeam said: "I want it for the upper air." And thousands of tons of water ascended at the mandate of the sunbeam. The sunbeam was all powerful The coal was but condensed sunbeams. Sunbeams raised the vegetation that afterward made the coal. He gave some examples of the conversion of force into heat, the most amusing of which was the school "marm" laying the stick on the palm of the bad boy's hand. The bad boy should be thankful to her for demonstrating this great law so simply. He held that more members had been made during the last 20 years han the preceeding 80, and that more would be made in the next 10 years than in the present 20. Newton was wont to say that he was wandering on the shore of the great ocean of truth. Here and there he picked up a pebble smoother than the rest or a shell brighter. He invited those present to join with him in exploring this great ocean which reached to infinity and lasted throughout all eternity.

CATTLE ON THE STREETS.

To the Editor of the Review.

SIR,—Is it not time that the Council passed a by law prohibiting the butchers from making a barn yard out of our front street at Easter and Christmas. This herding of cattle along our crowded thoroughfares is most dangerous and also most indecent. This morning there was what might have turned out to be a most serious accident. A spirited team of horses, with some ladies in the sleigh, became frightened at the approach and bellowing of the cattle. The horses heads were caught by some passers by or something serious would have happened. We are no longer a country village and as a city we should be governed as a city.

It is very commendable for the butchers to have cattle that they are proud of, but they should keep them on the Market Square or some other convenient place and not force the scenes they do on our front streets. Hoping some action will be taken in this matter, I am,

Yours, etc.,
COW.

The Panama Canal.

NEW ORLEANS, April 1.—Mr. Charles De Lesseps says that it is expected that ere the eighties have elapsed the Panama Canal will be open to navigation. A very large force of laborers are at work, and these are being daily increased by new men from the Gulf islands.

Three Boys Burned to Death.

PORT BEDWELL, Cal., April 1.—Mr. J. B. Bolin's residence at Cedarville was burned last night. Mr. Bolin's wife, three boys and two girls were asleep when the fire began; the girls escaped, but the three boys, ages seven, ten and fifteen years, were burned to death. Mrs. Bolin is seriously injured and is in a precarious condition.

Anarchy in the Family.

EAU CLAIRE, Wis., April 1.—Ald. Chas. L. James, a noted Anarchist and a son of the English author G. P. R. James, was sued by his wife for a divorce, and a decree was granted yesterday on the ground of failure to support and inhuman treatment. Mrs. James gets the custody of her children and a house and lot.

Settlers from the States.

WINNIPEG, April 1.—A large number of Minnesota and Dakota farmers have made application to the Dominion Lands Office here for sections and part of sections of land in this country. A farmer from Madison, Wisconsin, now in the city, says a large number from his section are coming to the Canadian Northwest this spring.

Hanged Himself in Gaol.

GUELPH, Ont., April 1.—James Tomlinson, a farmer from Maryboro' township, committed suicide in the gaol here yesterday morning by hanging himself to his cell door with a towel. Deceased was 45 years of age and leaves a wife and family. Tomlinson was confined in the gaol as a lunatic, his relatives being unable to procure his admission into an asylum. Financial difficulties were the cause of his trouble. There are six insane persons still in the gaol.

BUTCHER'S linen for aprons now to be found at TURNBULL'S.

THE HIGHER LAW.

The Keynote of the Agitation Against the Crimes Bill.

LONDON, April 1.—The Standard says strong pressure is being put upon Mr. Gladstone to formally and publicly declare that any Liberal members voting for the Crimes Bill, shall be considered to have no further connection with the party.

NEW YORK, April 1.—The Tribune's London correspondent says, the note of a rapidly rising agitation in England against the new Coercion Bill is the same which Mr. W. H. Seward sounded in the phrase "Higher Law." Both in Mr. Gladstone's speech on Tuesday in the House of Commons, and in Mr. John Morley's speech outside, is discoverable a tendency to deny the sanctity of law as law. Private conceptions of justice are henceforth to be set up against the judgment of the majority as declared by the Statute. This spirit is the same which forces Mr. Gladstone to the front of the party which expresses its dislike of the proposed measure by obstruction in Parliament. Mr. Gladstone means to sanction neither illegality in Ireland nor unparliamentary methods in the House, but he abandons for the time being the ground he took up when defending his own coercion measures and occupies a position not unlike that of the Parnellites when they protested against the first crimes act. Undoubtedly the crisis is, as Mr. John Morley says, a grave one. The Liberal leaders seem resolved to go all lengths in promoting the agitation against Mr. Balfour's bill. No importance need be attached to the frenzied cries to arms which appears in the Pall Mall Gazette. It is the attitude of serious men which is of importance. The Government declare they will stand of fall by coercion. They may drop certain provisions of their bill, but they must stick to its principle, which is that of governing Ireland against the wish of the majority of the Irish people by exceptional methods, unknown in England.

LONDON, April 1.—The National Liberal Federation has issued a summons for a meeting to be held on April 6 for the purpose of denouncing the proposed Irish coercion measure.

NO HOPE FOR THE EAGLE.

Three Hundred Men Dashed on the Rocks and Killed.

HALIFAX, N. S., April 1.—Captain Barry, commander of the Arctic steamer Alert, who is an old Newfoundland sealing skipper, says that reports from St. John's leave no possible hope for the safety of the sealing steamer Eagle. He came up from St. John's a few days ago, was intimately acquainted with the steamer and her commander, Jackman. He cannot understand the rumours about the condition of her boilers, as he says she was fitted with new boilers this winter. The Eagle was 343 tons register, built at Dundee in 1870 specially for the seal and whale fisheries, was owned by Bowring Bros., of St. John's, New York and Dundee, and was a splendidly equipped vessel. She was fitted with new boilers at St John's, and put in first-class order at the expense of $25,000. He witnessed her trial trip in St. John's Harbour on the 2nd of March, when, decked in flags and bunting, she made her trial trip in St. John's Harbor with ninety pounds to steam on her boilers. The usual pressure to which her boilers would be put was seventy pounds. She gave every satisfaction on that occasion. Early on March 10th the sealing fleet sailed out of St. John's Harbor and headed northward. The fleet invariably keep together, and generally find the first signs of seals in Bonavista Bay, one hundred miles north of St. John's. It is exceedingly rare that any one of the fleet is not seen and reported for three days and an extraordinary thing for a vessel to be away from the rest of the fleet for a week. The fact that the Eagle has not been heard of for three weeks, and the passing of wreckage by the rest of the fleet with her name board, seals the doom of the ill fated craft, in his mind, beyond the shadow of a doubt Sailors who came up from St. John's by the last mail boat, told him of the frightful sea that swept along the north coast on the night of the 11th.

THE SCENE OF THE DISASER.

Funk Island is the most dangerous and dreaded spot on the Newfoundland coast. It is a barren rock, about two miles in area, and rising up out of the water about sixty feet, and is for miles around surrounded by breakers, over which the surf breaks in the wildest fury. This fatal spot is located about 40 miles northeast of Cape Bonavista The Eagle would be dashed to pieces on those breakers in a very few minutes. The nearest lighthouse is on Cabot Island, off Cape Freels, and about 10 miles from St. John's. Capt. Barry says the appalling loss of life is the most terrible blow yet inflicted on St. John's. He thinks the Eagle had at least 300 men on board. Every able-bodied man wanted to go to the seal fisheries this year. Great distress has prevailed among the fishermen during the past winter, and the seal fisheries was about their only hope to enable them to pay off the debts incurred, and also for the existence of their families this year. The loss of these 300 brave fellows will leave fully one thousand utterly helpless widows and children.

A FAMOUS SEALER.

Capt. Barry had an intimate personal acquaintance with Capt Jackman, who he says, was one of the most famous sealers though only forty-four years of age. For the last two years he has been overwhelmed with ill-luck. In 1886, for the first time in his life, he came home without a single seal. Then he went on a whaling voyage in the Eagle, but did not capture any fish. Last winter he was given command of the Resolute, one of the finest steamers of the sealing fleet. He captured twenty thousand seals, worth $30,000, and had every promise of redeeming his good name, but just before starting for port a heavy field of ice drifted in shore, drove his splendid vessel on the rocks, and both ship and cargo was a total loss. His crew of 310 men escaped with their lives by jumping on the ice with what they stood upright in, and after terrible suffering from hunger and exposure they were rescued by the sealer Arctic. This disaster occurred on the breakers off Fogo Island, and within sight of Funk Island, the scene of the latest catastrophe. The crew of the Resolute, as well as the Eagle's crew, which went on a profitless whaling trip, lost their whole season's work; but they had the utmost faith in the star of their skipper. The name of Jackman is a magical one to the Newfoundland sealer, and scores of them again risked their luck with him this winter, only to meet their doom. They were doubtless dashed into eternity within 36 hours after leaving port.

LONDON, April 1.—The revenue returns for 1886-87 show an increase of £1,191,457.

IRISH AFFAIRS.

LONDON, April 1.—The whips of both parties in the House of Commons are doing their utmost to secure a full attendance at to-night's session. It is not known positively whether Mr. Parnell will move the amendment of which he has given notice. The Gladstonian Liberals will meet the Government's motion for a second reading of the Irish Crimes Act Amendment bill with a hostile amendment. The form which this shall take is not yet decided upon.

ATTACK ON THE CZAR.

BERLIN, April 1.—Advices from St. Petersburg fully confirm the report that another attempt has been made on the life of the Czar. It is learned that on Tuesday, while the Czar was exercising in the park connected with the Gatschina Palace, he was fired upon by an officer of the army, the ball passing close to his person. The officer was immediately seized by attendants and imprisoned.

AN ASSASSIN SHELTERED.

BUCHAREST, April 1.—Three Bulgarian refugees, one of whom is a brother of one of the men under condemnation for participation in the recent insurrection, yesterday attacked the Prefect of Ruschuck whom they met in one of the streets of the city. They fired at him with revolvers, wounding him, and then fled. Two of them were overtaken and imprisoned, but the other took refuge in the Russian legation.

AGAINST COERCION.

LONDON, April 1.—The Liberals are organizing a popular demonstration against coercion, and have decided to have an enormous demonstration in Hyde Park on Easter monday. The council of the Liberal federation meet to-day to decide on what further action they will take.

THE AR AGAN ESCAPES.

BERLIN, April 1.—Russian advices state that the execution of the persons actually concerned in the recent attempt upon the Czar's life has been postponed in the hope of obtaining further disclosures from them regarding the plot. The chief prisoners are confined in the Schlusselburg fortress, and the remainder in St. Petersburg citadel. Quantities of explosives and numerous compromising papers have been found in the house of a sister of one of the prisoners. A general's wife and a doctor's wife who were compromised in the murder of the late Czar are implicated in the present plot. Some of the prisoners are students in the Female College. They had a quantity of money when arrested. They refused to give any information. Threads of the conspiracy were discovered at Charkoff, Kieff, Warsaw, Moscow, Odessa and Novo Teherkask.

A CONSPIRACY.

COPENHAGEN, April 1.—King Christian has been informed from St. Petersburg that another unsuccessful attempt has been made upon the Czar's life. News has also been received of the discovery of a conspiracy in Caucasus. One hundred officers of the Tiflis garrison have been arrested for complicity in the plot.

BURGLARS IN PARIS.

LONDON, April 1.—The Paris police have captured an organized thieves' institute, and captured the captain and five leaders. Each member, of whom many are juvenile criminals, is subjected to strict discipline, and is entitled to a loan every morning from the common fund. The discovery of the association explains the enormous number of robberies and burglaries which have been recently committed in Paris.

BOYS COMMIT SUIBIDE.

LONDON, April 1.—Two boys, each 14 years of age, committed suicide in Vienna by blowing their brains out with revolvers. Another playmate of theirs had recently committed suicide by jumping from a tower. It is supposed that their heads were turned by reading unwholesome literature.

THE HAGUE, April 1.—A despatch from Batavia says reports have been received there of serious riots in Celebes.

THE CRIMES BILL.

LONDON, April 1.—In the Commons Mr. Conybeare continued the discussion amid cries of "divide." Mr. T. P. O'Connor moved to adjourn the debate. Mr. Gladstone, in supporting the motion, said that there were strong reasons for it. He also defended Mr. Parnell's delay in moving his amendment, and said this was a grave and serious case, demanding another night for discussion. With reference to Mr. Parnell's speech, Mr. Gladstone said he had never known of an instance in which the case made for such a bill had been so completely torn to rags (Loud cheers.) Mr. W. H. Smith complained because the Parnellites had not risen sooner and said he was unable to accede to Mr. O'Connor's request. Mr. Parnell supported Mr. O'Connor's motion. Mr. O'Connor's motion was rejected by a vote of 361 to 254. Upon Mr. Smith putting the question Mr. Gladstone rose and walked down the floor into the Opposition lobby, all the members of the Opposition standing and cheering him as he did so. On returning to the House he was again loudly cheered. The motion for cloture was carried by a vote of 361 to 253, and the first reading of the bill was agreed to without a division. The announcement of the result of the cloture decision was received with cheers and counter-cheers, and cries from the Parnellites of "Tyrrany!" "Down with the speaker." All the members on the front Opposition bench, with Mr. Gladstone leading, left the House followed by a large body of Liberals.

SATURDAY, APRIL 2, 1887.

THE QUEBEC CONSTITUENCIES.

THOUGH the people of Ontario have no right to interfere in the composition of the Provincial Legislature of Quebec, yet, as we are part of the same Dominion, we must naturally feel interest in the question, as in any other that effects the welfare of any portion of our country, so we can not be accused of impertinence if we discuss it.

Mr. Mercier has announced his intention of bringing in a measure for the redistribution of the Quebec constituencies for the Provincial Legislature. Till the bill is introduced we cannot tell whether the intended change is of limited extent or a thorough going re-arrangement of the constituencies. It certainly cannot be urged that such a redistribution, if fair and moderate, is uncalled for. There is such a great and growing disproportion in the population that some of the inequalities may well be redressed. For instance in the case of the city of Montreal and the counties of Hochelaga and Ottawa, the population is now so great as to call for double the number of the present representatives—they now have only five members though according to their numbers they are entitled to ten. Justice should certainly be done in these cases, and possibly in some others. But there are symptoms in the utterances of the press supporting Mr. Mercier that the proposed redistribution of Quebec constituences is not to be conducted on these lines. There are hints that the Rouges, having, like the Reformers of Ontario, obtained office by trickery, are hoping like Mr. Mowat to maintain themselves in power by dishonest gerrymandering. Canada is threatened with the disgrace of another Provincial Premier retaining office by arranging the constituencies so as to neutralise the voice of the people. How this can be done we know by the example of Mr. Mowat, who by dishonest partizan manipulation has so arranged the Ontario constituencies that in the last two elections at least he has obtained majorities in the House from a minority of votes cast by the electors. He is as Premier of Ontario the creature of trickery, not the free choice of the people.

If Mr. Mercier has the same object in view, he will endeavor, like Mr. Mowat, to perpetuate his reign by the unfair legislation of his supporters in the legislature in defiance of the rights of the people. If he really wishes to redress inequalities of population, he can accept the suggestion to adopt the course recently taken in the mother country of leaving to an imperial authority the task of arranging in detail the limits of the constituencies. Even if he should not care to do this, he may if he so choose, do justice to populous ridings without indulging in petty tricks to favour his political friends. If he does not give adequate representation to the five constituencies we have meationed, it will be evident that his object is self-aggrandizement, not the fair representation of the people.

SECRECY OF THE BALLOT.

A SECTION of the press is saying a great deal about the voting in the recent elections in the North west Territories not being by the ballot. They profess to think it a great wrong that it can be known for whom the people in the Territories voted, and especially wrong that the Government should be able to ascertain which candidate an elector supported. But it is only a profession; they do not hold such opinions. What they object to is that a Conservative Government should know how the people voted, but if the Government was a Reform one they would be satisfied and would not ask for a secret ballot. How do we know this? Because in another part of the Dominion there is voting by ballot for Provincial purposes with a pretence to secrecy. The ballot is not secret, for the Government can ascertain for whom every man in the Province recorded his vote. There are a large number of people in the Province referred to who have to rely on the Government or its officers for certain privileges, which makes it, according to the arguments of the Reform press when referring to the North-west, all the more necessary that the ballot should be secret. Yet these same papers are silent regarding the Provincial law, and they ask for no change in it. The Government is a Reform one. The Province is Ontario.

Another session of the Ontario Legislature has come and is nearly passed, and yet Mr. Mowat gives no evidence of a desire to make the ballot in the Ontario elections secret, as it is in the Dominion elections. In fact, he does not intend to do so during this session at any rate. His stubborn refusal to do so shows that the Reformers of Ontario do not desire to have a secret ballot, and are determined that the people shall not obtain it.

THE Mail, revising its calculations to date, allows Sir John Macdonald a majority of 28. After giving this as its own opinion, it remarks that "Conservative papers claim a majority for the Government of 39, that result being obtained by giving the Opposition only 30 seats in Quebec." Well, the "Conservative papers" are right, counting as supporters of the Ministry those who have already so declared themselves, but the majority is probably underestimated, as further adhesions of Nationalist Conservatives may be expected. The discrepancy of one in the count is due to the anticipation of the re-election of Mr. Cargill, whom the Grits, not liking technical objections, are factiously, but vainly, opposing.

ONTARIO LEGISLATURE

THE FIRST SESSION OF THE SIXTH PROVINCIAL PARLIAMENT.

The Queen Victoria Niagara Falls Park—The Action of the Legislature—The School Law—Various Bills Advanced a Stage.

THURSDAY, March 31.—A couple of bills were introduced and three private bills received their third reading.

NIAGARA FALLS PARK.

Mr. MOWAT moved that the House resolve itself into committee to consider resolutions regarding the Queen Victoria Niagara Falls Park. The resolutions authorized the Park Commissioners to raise by debentures $325,000, the money to be applied to the satisfaction of the Lieutenant-Governor. The debentures are to be countersigned by the Provincial Treasurer, and may be guaranteed by the Province. They are to be payable on January 1st, 1927, and the rate of interest is not to be higher than four per cent. A sinking fund, out of the park receipts, is provided for. The Government may at any time vest in the Commissioners, to be held for purposes of the park, any part of the crown lands the property of Ontario, lying along the bank of the Niagara River, and not included in the original survey of the lots laid out in the townships of Stamford and Niagara. Mr. Mowat gave a sketch of the circumstances which led to the Province taking action. It was expected that the revenues would be amply sufficient to meet interest on the debentures. It was intended that the park should be free and a charge made only when guides or mechanical appliances were required. He pointed out the natural advantages of the Canadian side over the United States side. It was intented to have a celebration at the opening.

Mr. MEREDITH supported the general idea of preserving the property, but said the House had not sufficient information as to the annual cost, the improvements proposed, and the lands expropriated. The responsibility must rest on the Government, as they had the means of knowing whether there would be any charge on the revenues of the Province.

Mr. MOWAT said the Government were prepared to take the responsibility.

The resolutions were passed in committee, and a bill framed on them introduced.

PASSED THROUGH COMMITTEE.

A number of Government bills were passed through committee of the whole.

THE SCHOOL LAW.

Mr. G. W. ROSS moved the second reading of the bill to amend the Act respecting Public schools, which he explained was to remedy omissions in the present law, and remove incumbrances. He would, perhaps, not have made the amendments at all, had the Government not been consolidating the statutes. Section 26 permitted provision to be made for kindergarten instruction for children between three and five years of age, and this was the only revolutionary clause in the bill. At the Normal schools at Toronto and Ottawa there were already classes being trained as kindergarten teachers.

The bill was read the second time, and the House adjourned at 6 o'clock.

THE LAND BILL.

Introduced in the House of Lords—Explained by Earl Cadogan.

LONDON, March 31.—In the House of Lords to-night Earl Cadogan (Lord Privy Seal) presented a bill providing for the purchase of Irish holdings, or in other words for the abolition of the system of dual ownership created by the Act of 1881. It was proposed, he said, to admit leaseholders to the benefits of the Act of 1881. (Cheers.) The leaseholders whose leases expired prior to 1881, numbering 160,000, were to be admitted to the benefits of the Act of 1881 in the same manner as those whose leases expired in that year. It was also proposed that a landlord must issue notice in the form scheduled in the bill when he obtains an ejectment writ from the court, and that he be required to serve the tenant with that notice in the manner prescribed by the courts, either by service or by posting, that, when the tenant receives this notice he shall become ipso facto caretaker of his holding for the period of six months, and that the redemption shall run as from that date.

Earl Cadogan said the Government found it impossible to adopt the Land Commissions recommendation that a period of five years for the fixing of judicial rents be substituted for that of fifteen years, according to the present law. The Government agreed with Lord Hartington that it was an open question whether the Irish rents were excessive or nor or whether excessive rents were exacted. Therefore it would be unreasonable to deal anew with the settlements of rents fixed by the Act of 1881. If those settlements should be disturbed the landlords and tenants would be led to believe that there was no finality to such a settlement.

The Government believe the time had arrived to formulate a further measure dealing with the tenants' purchase of holdings, and looked to that mainly for a settlement of the questions which unhappily agitate the country. In that alone, they believed, would be found the solution of those grave questions. (Cheers.) The Government proposed to deal with the question in two parts. The first was the bill just described, dealing with questions of urgency and great difficulty arising from the Land Act of 1881. This bill, which it was hoped would reduce the number of evictions one-half, would be followed by a bill relating to the purchase of holdings. This latter bill the Government hoped would permanently settle the difficulty. The Government asked their lordships, who were landlords in Ireland, and those connected with them, to make heavy sacrifices. The measure strictly regarded the rights of property, and was, through an earnest desire to remedy complaints arising from the land laws, drawn in a spirit of fairness and justice.

They proposed to relelve tenants who were insolvent through no fault of their own, but through misfortune. For extravagant and improvident tenants the Government proposed a county court, the judge of which, while granting the landlord judgment, should be empowered to reasonable stay execution for a period to be decided by the judge, the tenant meanwhile not to be removed from his holding. The Government would constitute the county court judge a judge in bankruptcy within the area of his ordinary jurisdiction. In reference to those tenants who are insolvent through no fault of their own, the court might order a composition upon an insolvent's old debts, the debtor continuing to occupy his holding for as long a period as the judge may decide, and to pay a fair rental fixed by the Court. The principle here was tendency to give innocent insolvent, of whose good faith and recitude the court should be assured, but extravagant and idle insolvents would be left to the ordinary laws. The rates of landlords who had not received their rents or whose land had not been occupied owing to intimidation would be remitted. The bill passed its first reading and the second reading was fixed for April 21st.

THE CARLETON JOB.

Mr. Mowat Traffics His Patronage for Political Support—A Scathing Criticism.

We take from the Irish Canadian the following editorial remarks on the manner in which Mr. Mowat sold the Carleton Registration for opposition to Conservative Roman Catholic candidates:—

"There were, it appears, several applicants for the office, two of whom—Dr. St Jean and young Mr. Waller—were, as we learn, quite acceptable to the Reformers of Ottawa. Dr. St. Jean, it is admitted, was an old and earnest party-man, who had devoted a great deal of his time and considerable of his means in support of Reform principles; and it was thought that he was well entitled to any reward in the gift of the Government, with a prior claim to what was going. Mr. Waller, being in possession, and performing the work of the registry office in a most acceptable manner, had the best wishes of a large number of his fellow-citizens, who hoped that he would be promoted from the post of deputy to the position held by his late father. This good will was heightened by a widespread sympathy for his widowed mother, in whose interests it was naturally supposed the Government would be but too anxious to do what it could in recognition of the services of her late husband. But neither long nor faithful service in the case of Dr. St. Jean, nor efficiency, coupled with right of succession in that of Mr. Waller, weighed sufficiently with the Government to influence it in either direction—and the prize was awarded to Mr. Coffey. Being a young man, it is said, Mr. Coffey had not yet won his spurs, either by actual work or influence; and his only claim on the Government lay in the fact that his brother—the Rev. Father Coffey—was editor of the Catholic Record.

"Slight as this claim would seem, it has been found potent enough to bring the Government to Father Coffey's terms—the providing his brother with a snug billet for life, or during good behavior. The reverend and worthy gentleman is not, as we have seen, one of those who set much value on verbal "promises to pay;" for before he pledged the support of the Record to Mr. Mowat, he insisted that the bargain should be reduced to writing. The dicker having been completed and duly authenticated in December, Father Coffey went to work with a will; and between that and and election day he made things lively in the columns of his journal, especially for those of the Conservative candidates who were Catholics. We were at a loss to account for Father Coffey's fierce denunciation of Messrs. White, Clancy, Coste and Baskerville, all Catholics—and were it not for the question put by Mr. Monk as to the registrarship of Carleton we might perhaps be still unable to offer as explanation of conduct so unnatural; but the Hon. Mr. Mowat's open confession reveals the whole mystery, and we have no longer to seek the spur to Catholic Record's rampant partizanship. The vial has been removed and the plot exposed in all its nakedness. Though Father Coffey has got the best of the bargain, it is doubtful whether the readers of the Catholic Record will feel flattered at having been made cat's paws to pull his chestnuts out of the fire."

SHIRLEY CARSTONE

CHAPTER XI.

BOYS.

The wings that would have plumed their flight skyward were overweighted earthward. It was Shirley's fate.

Here were the boys, her brothers. They tried her faculties to the utmost. In the flower of her beautiful youth she was relegated to the position of the middle aged.

Rip, the boy tramp, seemed in some way to be inextricably entangled with the fortunes of the Carstone family. He had been "bound out" from the county house, at the proper age. But not ropes or chain cables could have bound him in any place to stay. He was a vagabond in the blood.

Rip had made overtures of alliance offensive and defensive to the Carstone boys early in his career. Though younger than both Tom and Percy, he fascinated them and led them. He was in a way the incarnation of the spirit of evil fighting against Shirley for the souls of her boys. She had said within herself:

"I mean to make my boys so refined in taste that they will sicken at gross dissipations when they come to be men."

So she did at last. She was gifted with the radiant will and strength of him who overcomes. All things were under her.

But there were hostile elements in her camp which she little foreknew. Annoyances the meanest and most petty beset her, constantly.

Rip, the boy tramp, had sought first to include Brownie among his good comrades. The girl of 13 repelled his friendly advances with an inborn haughtiness which angered his soul to fury.

"Here's something for you," said he, sidling up to her timidly. "It's as pretty as a red wagon. I got it purpose for you, and 'twant no fool of a job, neither."

He held out a soft lined gray bird's nest. It contained three beautiful pale, green eggs, speckled with brown.

"How dare you steal a bird's nest," said Brownie indignantly. "Go and put it back where you got it. Take away your dirty hand!"

Rip's eyes glowed with rage. He dashed the nest to the ground. "Never you mind, Miss," he said. "You think you are so very fine, but you're nothing but a girl anyhow. You'll get your come-up-ance. You'll get your hair pulled when you won't know who does it. Some feller'll pounce out on you in the dark and scare you into fits, and you'll never find out who it is. When you've got your best clothes on, somebody 'll splash your white dress all over. "Boys'll yell out, 'snub nose! snub nose!' at you when you come to town. Somebody'll unpin your pink ribbon sash unbeknownst, and pitch it into a mud puddle. And it'll be this same feller, every time. You mind that!"

"Get out!" said Brownie, angrily.

"Yes, an' the same feller's got a bumblebee in jail in a hollyhock, and he'll let it loose in your hair this minute. Wow-w-w!"

He gave a big soprano screech to mimic a girl. At the same time he unprisoned a great fat bumblebee against Brownie's black, curly hair. She screamed in earnest. A laugh, a wild Indian warwhoop, a twinkling of bare heels in a double somersault and the boy vanished. He was as good as his word. From that day he tormented Brownie till he made life a burden to her at times.

Every manner of deviltry that head of boy could devise was set going by Rip, aided and abetted by Tom and Percy Carstone. Tom was a great lumbering boy with a strong but slow brain, which was behind his size and his years. He knew better than to follow the lead of Rip, nevertheless he did so. Because we know leaders to be reckless and bad, therefore we follow them sometimes.

Petty thefts began to be noted about Linwood to an extent never before known. Who committed them was a mystery.

"Sam, what becomes of all the eggs?" said Brownie. "We can't get an egg for a custard, any more."

"Miss Brownie," said Sam, solemnly, "it's them boys. There's pickins and stealins agoin' on about yer dat's a disgrace to a 'spectable neighborhood. It's things to eat that's most gin'ally always stole. A man wid a head fur figgers would know from dat ar fac 'twus boys done it," said Sam with a modest pride. "Them derned boys!"

"I wonder where the boys are," said Mrs. Carstone one evening. "You ought to look after them better, Shirley, I don't know what you are about evenings. Tom and Percy are out every night. There's Pet gone, too. We called him Pet when he was little, because he was so delicate and pretty, and looked like a girl. He was that cowardly that he would scream with fright if your father so much as set him up on a gate post. It seems as if he always would be afraid of the dark. I think he's getting over it lately."

Shirley might have told her mother what she was about evenings. But she did not.

"I know where the boys go nights, mamma," said little 8-year-old Harry. "They're in Robber's Cave."

"What!" said Shirley.

"They are in Robber's Cave, that's where they are Shirley. They won't tell me, but I followed them one night. I glimpsed at them through the curtain. I'm not afraid of the dark."

Harry was a brave little man, and belligerent.

"They steal corn, and eggs, and chickens, and roast them in the ashes, and eat them," continued the child. "The smoke gets into their eyes, and they get cold and muddy, but they say the grub tastes ever so much better than the cooking at home. They call it grub."

"Where's Robbers' Cave?"

"Get the lantern, Shirley, and I'll take you there. The enemy 'll surprise 'em. Rip is the robber chief, though he's the littlest. They've all learned to smoke, and they've got whisky there. They've lots of other things, too, and when they get enough, they're going to run away, and Rip's going to sell them and they're going to start a robber band in the west, Rip says."

"Why did'nt you tell me this before, Harry?"

"I only heard 'em talk last night. I found their cave long ago. It's dug in the hillside, and covered with leaves and weeds and limbs of trees. Nobody would ever know 'twas Robbers' Cave. They crawl in underground, and they lay a flat rock over the hole. They've a curtain to shut out the light. When they hear a noise they say 'douse yer glim.' That means put out the light. They think it's the awfulest fun."

All this time Shirley and the child were walking rapidly over stones, undergrowth and mud to an out-of-the-road little ravine a quarter of a mile away. Harry stopped with mathematical exactness at a large flat rock. It looked extremely innocent. They moved it and made a little noise.

"Douse yer glim!" they heard a voice say.

"Stand here, sis, right by the curtain," whispered Harry. "O ho! fellers the enemy is upon you!" he shouted aloud.

There was a stumble and a push against the curtain. But in the blind darkness the amateur robbers could not get out.

"Now we've got you where Moses was when the light went out," said the tantalizing child. "Guess that conundrum. Say, boys, where was Moses when the light went out?"

No answer. Shirley lifted the curtain suddenly and let light into the proceedings. As she did so half a dozen boys dodged back into the recesses of an underground hole deep enough to stand upright in. Among them were Tom, Percy and Pet Carstone. The rest quickly made their escape. They slunk in silence before a glance of command which they knew too well to disobey. The cave looked like a junk shop.

Shirley picked up and threw down in rapid succession, respectively, a meat knife, a rusty pistol, a jewsharp and a coil of rope.

"And here, as I live, you've got father's sword in this dirt hole! Now tell me who did this! You, Pet—the boy father used to sing to sleep in his arms till you were 5 years old because you were afraid of the dark! Nice boy you are, aren't you?"

He hung his head.

The Carstone boys surrendered unconditionally to General Shirley. Three fallen heroes marched sullenly and silently in front of the enemy to the house. They vanished ignobly to their dungeon cells, otherwise their beds.

And Shirley—well, when Shirley had disposed of them, she went to the room mutually occupied by herself and the youngest Carstone, and sat down and laughed as she had not done in years. It was the youth in her that laughed—the daring, fun loving, eternal youth.

But there was no more Robbers' Cave.

The boys had a deep grudge at the Presbyterian minister. How they paid it off remains to be recorded. This devout and learned man was extremely dignified. He was also particular in his personal appearance. What could be more proper in a teacher of that gospel which proclaims that cleanliness is next to godliness? Nothing.

From much delving in lore and much profound thought, the good man had lost his hair prematurely. The sisters in the church had it that their pastor had studied the hair off his head. In truth, he was as bald as an onion.

He may be easily pardoned for seeking to remedy his misfortune as best he might. The good man wore a wig. But it was not vanity that led him to wear a wig. It was to keep him from taking cold. He himself said it. Getting an influenza in the head was bad for the effectiveness of religious oratory. He had to be particular on this point. Therefore, no living creature in Linwood had ever seen the minister without his wig, unless it was the cat. Being a widower may or may not have emphasized the liability to influenza. At any rate, though, nothing could be more dignified and decorous and spotless than the reverend gentleman's appearance, wig and all. The ladies of the church took pride in it.

'Twas prayer meeting night. In the back of the church was a door, long unused. It was directly in the rear of the platform whereon the minister sat.

The people were assembled for the beginning of the service. The minister was in his place. Near the platform, likewise in his proper place, sat Deacon Durham, most rigid and devout of all.

It was the impressive moment when the exercises were about beginning. The minister had already said "ahem" to clear his throat.

Suddenly there came three loud and hollow raps at the long unused door behind the minister. The congregation started. The like had never been known before.

To be Continued.

Astonishing Success

It is the duty of every person who has used Boschee's German Syrup to let its wonderful qualities be known to their friends in curing Consumption, severe Coughs, Croup, Asthma, Pneumonia, and in fact all throat and lung diseases. No person can use it without immediate relief. Three doses will relieve any case, and we consider it the duty of all Druggists to recommend it to the poor, dying consumptive at least to try one bottle, as 70,000 dozen bottes were sold last year, and no one case where it failed was reported. Such a medicine as the German Syrup cannot be too widely known. Ask your druggist about it Sample bottles to try, sold at 10 cents. Regular size, 75 cents. Sold by all Druggists and Dealers, in the United States and Canada. d90

Advice to Mothers.

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup should always be used when children are cutting teeth. It relieves the little sufferer at once; it produces natural, quiet sleep by relieving the child from pain, and the little cherub awakes "as bright as a button." It is very pleasant to taste. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain, relieves wind, regulates the bowels, and is the best known remedy for Diarrhœa, whether arising from teething or other causes. 25 cents a bottle. Be sure and ask for "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup," and take no other kind.

The Daily Review.

SATURDAY, APRIL 2, 1887.

THE CITY AND SUBURBS

Sheppard

Opens on Saturday, note the address, 1st door south of Arcade, George street. Good goods cheap.

FINE shell cordovan shoes at Kidd's new store for $4.00 per pair. Hand made.

Young Men's Meetings.

The Young Men's meetings will be held in the Y. M. C. A. Hall on Saturday night at 8 and Sunday afternoon at 4 o'clock. These meetings are interesting and all young men will find a cordial welcome.

Rev Gehan Al Howie.

This gentleman, a native of Mount Lebanon, will be in Peterborough on April 14th and 15th. The Young Men's Christian Association, who are bringing him here, expect crowded houses, as every one will want to hear him.

Gent's White Shirts only $1 at Rowse's Trade Palace.

Sheppard

Opens his store on Saturday, April 2nd, the first door south of Arcade, George street—Dry Goods, Clothing and Hats and Caps. Many lines have been bought at a rate of 60 cents on the dollar to clear. These goods will be slaughtered. It will pay you to look through.

Jubilee Singers Coming.

The advance agent of The Original University Singers of New Orleans was in town yesterday and made arrangements for the appearance here on Easter Monday of this celebrated double quartette of colored singers. As this will be the musical event of the season, we believe they will have a crowded house.

Ladies do not pay $1.00 for everyday boots. You can get them for 65 cents at Kidd's.

Foresters' Funeral.

The members of Court Peterborough No. 29, C. O. F., are requested to meet in their hall on Sunday afternoon at 1.30 o'clock, for the purpose of attending the funeral of their late Brother, George Mabbitt. The members of Court Little John are also invited to attend. Members are requested to provide themselves with white gloves. By order of the Chief Ranger. A. D RUSSELL, Secretary.

Only 80 cents for a pair of ladies' fine button boots at Kidd's.

Presentation.

The Cambellford Herald says:—"Capt. Boyler, who returned to Campbellford for a short visit during the vacation of a few weeks, was again remembered by her friends in a practical way. On Thursday night last a number of her Saved Army friends invited her to the residence of Mr. D. Millar, where she was made the recipient of a writing desk, $5.00 in cash, and a few articles of less value. Capt. Boyler was delighted with the unexpected gift, and the kindness displayed, and the esteem manifested for her; and it is a source of comfort to her to know that her work while she was stationed here is valued by many who will for years to come hold her name in fond remembrance."

EVERY lady should see these new Jersey Corsets TURNBULL is introducing.

A TERRIBLE FALL.

On George Street, next to Long's Confectionery Store, is situated Rowse's Trade Palace, where are sold Black, Cardinal and Gold Corsets at 50c. This is a terrible fall in price.

Boots and Shoes.

Don't forget the auction sale of Boots and Shoes at 7 o'clock to-night in the store next to the REVIEW office.

P. B. C.

The annual meeting of the Boating Club will be held at the boat house on Monday evening at half past seven o'clock.

Church Sale.

The ladies of St. Andrew's Church intend holding a sale of useful and fancy articles on the 21st inst. in St. Andrew's school room. Particulars later.

Bird Cages and Baby Carriages.

We notice that Messrs. Breeze & Bain have just got in stock a very complete line of American bird cages and baby carriages.

Social.

A social under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid Society of St. Paul's Church, will be held in the Sunday School room, on Sunday evening, April 7th, at 7.30 o'clock. Refreshments will be served during the evening, and a very good musical programme provided. Admission 25c.

Slippers at 35, 40, 45, 50, 60, 75 cents and $1.00 at Kidd's new store.

Big Demonstration.

The Salvation Army announce that they will hold a big demonstration on the occasion of the second anniversay of their attack on Peterborough, on April 9th, 10th and 11th. Nearly all the officers in the district will be present and also a host of soldiers. On the evening of the 11th a display of trophies and fireworks will be made.

Why, Maggie, where did you get your beautiful dress? I got it at Rowse's. We buy all our Dress Goods at the Trade Palace. They are so cheap.

The "Warder" Fire.

The Coroner's jury which held an investigation in the origin of the fire at the Lindsay Warder office returned the following verdict:—"We, the jury summoned by Mr. Thos. Beall, Coroner, on the fire inquest in the Warder office, render the following verdict: That the fire was the work of an incendiary, and was wilfully done by some person or persons unknown to us. (Signed), Geo. Ingle, foreman."

April Fool.

Messrs. Winch and Webber, adipose and artful, have been chuckling all day over the "April fool" they palmed off on the public. They are now ready to admit that it was all a humbug about the cow having triplets, and have gained nearly a pound a piece in weight laughing at those who were foolish enough to believe it. They never purchased any cow from Mr. Maloy or Douro; the cow hadn't the triplets and they are not now in Harry Winch's stable. The report that the cow had a quartette of progeny is not true.

Personal.

The Campbellford Herald says:—"Mr. McFadden, of Peterborough, gave an address at the Saved army meeting on Sunday night last. He related a very touching incident in connection with his own family, three of his children having been carried away by diphtheria. His remarks contained words of encouragement to many of his listeners."

Mr. E. B Edwards, county solicitor, will leave for London, England, on Monday to look after the interests of the county in the case to be brought before the Privy Council—Bickford vs. County of Peterborough. He will be gone about three months.

Gentlemen, it will pay you to call and see Rowse's stock of Gent's Furnishings. Everything stylish and cheap.

The Third Week.

The temperance meetings will be continued for several days longer. They will be conducted by the Rev. J. Judd White, assisted by local clergymen and others, and a large local choir. Mrs. White will also take part. The meetings will all be held in Bradburn's Opera House as follows:—Tomorrow at 4 o'clock in the afternoon and at 8.30 o'clock in the evening, and on the evenings of Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday at a quarter to 8 o'clock. During this week the meetings have been largely attended, and as the interest appears to be growing no doubt there will be crowded houses at each service.

Lumbermen's Meeting.

The Toronto World of Friday says:—A meeting of the leading representatives of this important industry was held yesterday afternoon in the parlor of the Queen's Hotel, Mr. A. H Campbell of Toronto being in the chair. By invitation Mr. Henry W. Darling, ex-President of the Board of Trade and Mr. Edgar Willis, Secretary, was present. The meeting was called for the purpose of discussing the advisability of forming a trade branch or section of the Toronto Board of Trade. Mr. Darling explained the method of organization and also set forth the advantages to be gained by connection with the board. It was unamously resolved that advantage be taken of the facilities offered by the board. Messrs. A. H. Campbell, Toronto; David Gilmour, Trenton; J. L. Barton, Barrie, and Jas. M. Irwin, Peterborough, were appointed a committee to prepare an address to the Council for permission to organize, and also to prepare the necessary bylaws. All present made a personal application through Mr. Darling for membership in the board."

Children's Button Boots for 80 cents at Kidd's are really good.

Heavy White Quilts only $1 at Rowse's Trade Palace.

GRASS linens, table linens, table napkins, linen handkerchiefs, etc., fresh from the loom in Belfast, Ireland, now opened out at TURNBULL'S Grand value. See them.

$15 EACH.

Four of the Ten Young Men Fined at the Police Court.

Of the ten young men charged with being implicated in breaking in Curtin's eating house on Sunday night, four were fined this morning.

Mr. Edwards appeared for the town and Mr. Moore for the defence.

On application of Mr. Moore, the four prisoners held over on bail from Thursday were heard. They all swore that they threw nothing, and three out of the four denied that they had a hand in the row at all. Armour acknowledged having gone in the house in search of McDonald.

The MAGISTRATE said that this was an extraordinary case. It seemed that McDonald beat somebody on Thursday night and certain persons agreed to give him a beating in turn. On Sunday night a crowd of young men went to Curtin's where McDonald was. Now some one must have brought the word that McDonald and the Larones were at Curtins, and those who went with the crowd knew what they were going for. Then four young men, Armour, Duncan, Wainwright and Nellist, were hid behind a car near Curtins. This looked as though they had some object in view. Even though they were not guilty of breaking in the house, the fact of Duncan, Armour, Smith and Nellist being in front of crowd when a charge was made on the house condemned them. They knew why the house was being attacked, and if they were merely sightseers it was their business to keep back. He commended the action of Curtin in giving protection to the three young men when summoned to turn them out. Then, when the victims were not delivered to the crowd, the door and window were smashed. The circumstances of these four occupying the positions they did condemned them. It showed that they were the leaders of the crowd. Two days ago he imposed a heavy penalty on a young man for provoking a fight with one of these True Blues, as they were called. He did that, not merely to punish him for the violence, but to stamp out this party fighting He would impose a fine on each of these four for the same reason. They were acting in such a manner as might have led to serious results, and might have stirred a feeling of bitterness between two classes of the community. He fined them each $15: in default of payment distress, and in default of distress imprisonment for 20 days.

POLICE COURT.

DISORDERLY.

FRIDAY, April 1.—Barry and Robinson, who had the fight on the corner of George and Simcoe streets on Saturday night, were brought before the court this morning charged by Capt. Cooper with having been disorderly in a public place. They pleaded guilty and were fined $5 each. The fines were paid.

Concert in Lindsay.

The Lindsay Post says:—"The concert given under the direction of Mr. D. B. MacDuff on Wednesday evening was not well attended. The combined attractions of the fire inquest, board of trade meeting and other local assemblies no doubt effected the attendance. Mrs. Harrison did not sing, having been unavoidably detained. Miss Vair contributed two very pleasing songs and was encored. Mr. T. B. Dunn created a very favorable impression with his fine baritone voice and excellent presence. Mr. Jaques gave some bass solos and was well received. Mr. Parker played a well rendered piano solo and gave the accompaniments. Mr. MacDuff played magnificently violin solos and was warmly encored. It is to be regretted that a large audience was not present, as the concert well deserved good patronage."

A Cable to Canada.

HALIFAX, N. S., April 2.—The Herald today publishes an interview with Mr. Fisher superintendent for the French cable company, who have just withdrawn from the cable pool. He says his company contemplate giving Canada direct cable communication with the Old World independent of the United States. The French cable now lands at Sydney, Nova Scotia, and his scheme is to build a connecting land line from that point to Montreal, tapping all the leading cities of the Maritime provinces. At Montreal the proposed line would connect with the Baltimore & Ohio and C. P. R. systems, being thus independent of the Western Union. The company's steamer will arrive from France next week, and repair the break in the cable between Sydney and St. Pierre. As soon as this is done the construction of the land lines will be commenced.

CARLETON REGISTRARSHIP.

Mr. Mowat's Majority by Purchase—How He Won Ottawa and Other Seats.

We find in the Irish Canadian the following letter condemning Mr. Mowat's conduct as to the Carleton Registrarship, a condemnation which as our readers have seen that paper supports editorially:—

PEMBROKE, March 26, 1887.

To the Editor of the Irish Canadian.

DEAR SIR,—It has been my privilege during the past week to meet and converse with many of the leading Reformers of the Easterly portion of Ontario. The burning theme with all is the appointment of P. J. Coffey to the Registrarship of the County of Carleton. On all hands the appointment is condemed as one of the worst blunders ever committed by the Mowat Government. If Mr. Mowat intended this appointment as a compliment to his Catholic supporters in Ottawa and Eastern Ontario he certainly has not consulted their wishes, as among the hundreds of Catholics with whom I have conversed I have not found a single individual who approves of the appointment, except this young man Coffey and his immediate relatives. Protestant Reformers are equally outspoken in their disapproval, and directly charge Mr. Mowat with having previous to the date of the Provincial elections, entered into a corrupt bargain with Rev. John Coffey, the editor of the Catholic Record of London, who is a brother of P. J. Coffey, to give the Registrarship to the latter in return for the support of the Record in the aforsaid local elections. In proof of this they point to the frantic appeals of the Record on behalf of the Mowat Government, its seven column editorial under the head of "God, the Country and the Constitution" in which the editor prostituted his journal and the influence of the Church of which he professes to be a champion, for purely partizan purposes and value received by this appointment of his brother.

Now, Mr. Editor, I hold that it is the duty of the Catholic electors of Ontario to enter a firm protest against the bargain and sale so plainly implied in this transaction. They should inform Mr. Mowat in unmistakable terms that their wishes must be considered in such appointments as this one, and that they are not represented by the vain and arrogant young man who turns the editorial crank of a sectarian organ published in London and uses its influence for the benefit of his relatives.

Yours truly, LIBERAL.

CHOLERA IN SOUTH AMERICA.

Terrible Ravages of the Disease—Hundreds Die in a Day.

The ravages which the cholera is making in South America are represented in a vivid manner in the following letter from Las Penas, in the Province of Cordova, in the Argentine Republic. It was published in the Pall Mall Gazette, of March 18th:—

"I'll just give you a small sketch of the 'microbe' that is fast thinning us out here—cholera. In Rosario it has nearly disappeared, but in Canada de Gourez, where, you will remember, I used to be, the Italians especially are having a fine time of it. They die in heaps, and are chucked into an immense pit or are buried by their relations under a mound of earth in the middle of a wheat field. Their goods and chattels are then thrown into a heap and burned—that is to say, what the soldiers don't pocket. In Mendona and Tucuman, two places that used to be thickly populated cities, the scourge has been so terrible that few have returned to tell the tale. Some days in the centre of the latter place as many as 250 died a day, to say nothing of the outskirts of the town. In Monto Video they do not wait for the people to die, but cart them off as soon as they get sick. The papers say that the dead carts pass through the streets with dead and dying all mixed up. The scenes in the hospital are, or rather have been something too terrible to describe. A regiment of artillery (which means to say in this country the scum of the earth, such as assassins and cattle-stealers condemned to the ranks for life or for a term of years) has been nearly cleared out in Rio Cuarto. The band of music I heard has been completely blotted out. I cannot describe to you the terror that has prevailed here. Several of my acquaintances are gone, poor fellows—one died in three hours! Some cases have occurred where the subject nearly dropped dead in the street. The authorities have fought pluckily against this fearful pestilence. A brother of a friend of mine was assassinated a few days ago in Tucuman by an infuriated mob, who in the panic believed that the filtered water was meant to poison them. I was in Rosario a few days ago, taking down Mackenzie, who was seriously ill, and happened to hear the story from the poor beggar's own lips. Mackenzie is in Rosario, waiting to recover his health to go home.

"We are passing through an awful crisis. The drought here is so terrible that a glass of water is being sold for five cents—about 2½d. The cattle are charging the fences madly, and daren't even keep them back. One of the streams that crosses the Estancia, and also provides the water for nearly a thousand people, has dried up! What with the drought, cholera, and the fearful hailstorm, in which we lost about a 1,000 cattle, you can imagine the state we are in. The drought up to the present is said to have saved us here from cholera, so perhaps we ought to be thankful. The best is past all description. Imagine the horses and cattle in Mendoza have also died of cholera! They have barred the passes to Chili, and so every one is out of work there, and unable to sell a thing."

Rocky Mountain Scenery.

NEW YORK, April 2.—The exhibition of pictures of Canadian Rocky Mountain scenery on the lines of the Canadian Pacific railroad at the Canadian club has been remarkably successful. Over one thousand persons representing the best people in New York have responded to the invitation to view these specimens of the work of Mr. John Fraser, formerly of Toronto, now of Boston. Much surprise is expressed at the beauty and sublimity of the scenery. It is believed that many tourists will take in this portion of the continent next year. Professor Goldwin Smith has signified his intention to lecture before the Canadian club on the 14th of April, his subject being: "The schism of the Anglo-Saxon race."

Celluloid Collars and Cuffs for ladies and Gentlemen are to be had very cheap at Rowse's Trade Palace.

LATEST CABLE NEWS

SEVENTY-TWO YEARS OLD.

BERLIN, April 2.—Yesterday being Prince Bismarck's seventy-second birthday, the Chancellor received numerous tokens of esteem from all parts of Germany. The Chancellor visited the Palace where the Emperor awaited him. In his passage along Unter Den Linden, Bismarck received a constant ovation.

THE LAND BILL.

LONDON, April 2.—Lord Cadogan omitted to mention two important clauses in his exposition of the Land Bill in the House of Lords on Thursday. One of these clauses provides that in the future judical rents shall be reckoned from the date of application instead of from the date of judgment of the Land Court. The other provides that tenants in arears asking that judical rents be fixed, shall have their arears estimated on the same basis as that upon which the rents are estimated

TO STICK TO EACH OTHER.

VIENNA, April 2.—Bulgaria and Servia have arrived at an entente cordiale. The arrangement includes a military convention. Roumania will probably join in the agreement.

RUSSIA WON'T ASSIST.

LONDON, April 2.—Russia has declined France's invitation to participate in the Exhibition to be held in Paris 1889, on the ground that she cannot assist to celebrate an event she detested. Russian subjects are forbidden to send exhibits.

PROSECUTION ABANDONED.

DUBLIN, April 1.—The prosecution against Messrs. Dillon, O Brien, Crilly and Redmond for their connection with the Plan of campagin has been abandoned.

OPPOSED TO BOTH.

LONDON, April 1.—The Standard says:—The Parnellites regard Lord Cadogan's Land bill with as much disfavor as they do Mr. Balfour's Coercion bill, and consider that the eviction clauses in the former would operate entirely to the disadvantage of the tenants.

MAGAZINE RIFLES CONDEMNED.

LONDON, April 2.—It is stated that prominent Russian military officers have condemned the magazine rifle and favor the retention of the American Verden rifle with small calibre, pressed powder and steel pointed bullets.

A CONSTABLE DISMISSED.

DUBLIN, April 2.—Constable Dorney, who threw down his arms and refused to obey orders and take part in the arrest of Father Ryan, of the Herbertstown branch of the National League, has been dismissed from the force. The government have decided not to prosecute him.

SANGUINE PARNELLITES.

LONDON, April 3.—The text of the Coercion bill, now that it has been made public, intensifies Irish Nationalist opposition to the measure. Parnellites express themselves as sanguine that in an appeal to the country the Government would be overthrown.

ARREST OF BULGARIAN REFUGEES.

SOFIA, April 3.—The Roumanian Government has caused the arrest of all Bulgarian refugees found at Bucharest.

THE ASSASSINS.

SOFIA, April 3.—The two men who were imprisoned for making an attempt to assassinate the Perfect of Rustchuk, are named Kavasoff and Ivanoff repectively. They are natives of Russian Bessarabia and lived at Rustchuk until the recent revolt occurred, having relations with Kischeneff, the chief of the revolutionary committee.

TO VISIT ENGLAND.

LONDON, April 2.—It is reported that the Emperor Francis Joseph will come to England during the Queen's jubilee if political affairs permit of his leaving Austria.

THE GOVERNMENT STRONG.

LONDON, April 2.—Although Mr. Gladstone and Mr. Parnell will make a strong fight against the Coercion Bill, it is believed the Government will carry it through easily.

MAY LEAD TO WAR.

LONDON, April 2.—The expulsion of M Antoine from Alsace-Lorraine has given rise to an uneasy feeling in all the capitals of Europe. It is feared that it will lead to fresh complications.

WANTS TO KEEP THEM DARK.

CONSTANTINOPLE, April 2.—The Sultan has forbidden the publication of any news concerning the Bulgarian troubles by the papers here.

THE BALKINS ABLAZE AGAIN.

LONDON, April 2.—An outbreak is reported at Rustchuk. It is stated the war minister has been attacked.

MORE EARTHQUAKE.

ROME, April 2.—Further earthquake shocks have been felt at Savona. Professor Flab has gone to study the phenomena on the spot.

TWO SHOTS FIRED.

LONDON, April 2.—A despatch from Vienna says:—"While the Czar was walking on a terrace overlooking the lawn at Gatschina palace a shot was fired from behind a bush and the bullet whistled close to the Czar's ear. A second shot was fired from behind another bush but without effect. The sentinel who was near immediately fired upon the first assassin, and, it is raported, killed him on the spot. The second assassin tried to escape but was arrested. He was an officer of the army.

THE POPE AND THE PEOPLE.

ROME, April 2.—A second audience given by the Pope to Americans will be held today. The number to be received is limited and the demand for tickets is great. The report is denied that Mgr. Galimberti, while in Berlin, sounded the German government regarding a project for papal mediation between Germany and France.

WHOLESALE HANGINGS.

BERLIN, April 2.—Three persons concerned in the attempt to assassinate the Czar by means of bombs in St. Petersburg on March 13th were hanged on Thursday morning. Twenty more officers in the various branches of the service have been arrested in connection with the attempt made against the life of the Czar in the park of the Gatschina palace on Friday last.

LORD RANDOLPH.

LONDON, April 3.—Lord Randolph Churchill made a speech at Paddington yesterday, in which he declared the action of the House of Commons the previous evening was not only momentous in its importance and encouraging, but worthy of Parliament and the nation. He said that, altough he intended to continue his crusade against the extravagance in the Government management, he still remained a true and faithful supporter of the Tory party and maintained the necessity of the Union. He was convinced that nobody could devise a Home Rule scheme capable of satisfactorily standing the criticism of Parliament.

TO HUNT DOWN NIHILISTS.

LONDON, April 2.—The Russian government has placed at the disposal of the police $125,000 to be used in unravelling Nihilists conspiracies in Russia and $62,000 to be used for the same purpose in foreign countries.

LEAGUE HEADQUARTERS.

DUBLIN, April 3.—It is stated if the Crimes Bill is passed, the headquarters of the National League will be removed from Dublin to London.

SORT OF OTTAWA SCRIBE.

BERLIN, April 3.—The expulsion from German territory of M. Antoine, the Protester delegate to the Reichstag from Metz, is approved of by everyone. He was an open, bitter enemy of Germany, and was forever troubling the authorities of the Reichsland. During the recent elections he published, through interviews in French newspapers, sensational canards to the effect that Emperor William was in a comatose condition, and that he was dying. He also caused to be published what purported to be interviews concerning the hostile relations between Prince Bismarck and the Crown Prince, and many other fictions which were pleasing to the French people.

A FAMOUS BREWER DEAD.

LONDON, April 3.—Lord Hindlip, formerly Sir Henry Allsopp, a member of the brewing firm, is dead. He was 76 years of age.

A COLLAPSE.

VIENNA, April 3.—The fine Roman amphitheatre at Poli, in Austria, on the Adriatic, suddenly collapsed yesterday and fell into an immense chasm which opened on the site. From this chasm vapours are emitted.

ATTEMPTED ASSASSINATION.

SOFIA, April 3.—An attempt has been made to assassinate the president of the courtmartial before which the persons concerned in the recent revolt at Rustchuk were tried.

A ROLLAND FOR AN OLIVER.

Germany's Retort to France's Outcry About the Spy Business.

BERLIN, April 2.—The Post, referring to the remarks of the French papers on the alleged disclosures by an official of the French Office to German officials, expresses amazement that the press of a country which has for years kept up unexampled organization of espionage in Germany should make an affair devoid of significance the occasion of all kinds of insulting accusations and unmeasured demands. The Post says:—"The facts established in the evidence given at the trials for treason of Jenssen Saranio and Prohl brought to light a net work of spies organized by the Paris intelligence department throughout Germany. As to the demand of the Paris papers that the German military attache who received the information should be recalled, such a request if made by the French Government could only be answered by the simultaneous recall of the German Ambassador at Paris." The Post proceeds to enumerate cases where Frenchmen, even superior officers, have been detected in flagrant dereliction, set free because the Government desired to conciliate France. In conclusion the Post says: The spy system was carried to perfection in Germany while similar charges against Germany have their chief basis in French fancy.

RELICS OF EARLY DAYS.

Found in a Mysterious Vault in Glengarry Village.

GLENGARRY, Ont., April 2.—Two men digging in the cellar of the Commercial hotel on Main street yesterday, suddenly felt the ground giving way beneath them and before they could escape down they went into a regular vault. Upon close examination it was found that this was nothing more nor less than a passage way, the roof of which was about five feet in hight and in width little more than half that measurement. Proceeding with their lanterns for about ten yards, the passage opened out into a regular apartment in which were found evident traces of ancient times. Several pieces of rude, but decayed furniture, drinking vessels, and some parts of long since decayed fabrics were there, the place itself presented a very weird and ghastly appearance. Nothing was there to indicate the probable date at which this underground apartment was last used, except the old dirk upon which several unintelligible hieroglyphics were deeply carved. Part only of these are in English capitals, the remainder being of some other nation. The English letters read "Lo of Lirpa," but the other characters have a much more significant appearance. This was the only article in the strange vault which was disturbed. It was forwarded to Edinburgh, Scotland, where several of the professors of the University will be asked their opinion regarding it. A large number of persons visited the hotel last night to examine this relic from the earth.

Elevated Railway for Montreal.

MONTREAL, April 2.—The promoters of the Island & Park Railway, organized two years ago, are pushing their project and will bring it before the Road Committee at once. The scheme includes an elevated road from St. Henri to Hochelaga, passing along Craig street, with a central station at the foot of St. George street. Starting from Craig, the elevated road is to go up St. George, and to have stations at St. Catherine and Sherbrooke streets. It passes to the top of Mount Royal. A level line starts from Fletcher's field and skirts the foot of the mountain, with stations at the Exhibition grounds and each cemetery. It passes through the municipalities of Outremont, Cote de Neiges, Notre Dame de Grace, and Cote St. Antoine, and again enters the city. The cost of the road is estimated at about $200,000.

PRISON LABOR.

At length Mr. Mowat has reluctantly yielded to the protests against his favorite system of letting out the labor of prisoners to contractors at a cheap rate, to compete unfairly with the labor of honest workingmen, and has announced the discontinuance of the practice. His argument in favor of the system, and that still used by those who continue to defend it, is that it is neither just nor expedient that criminals should be maintained in idleness while honest men have to work to sustain them. They proceed to say that such prison labor, unless it is to be absolutely unremunerative, and therefore wasteful, must necessarily take the place of labor that would otherwise be performed by honest workingmen, and that the industries conducted by the aid of Provincial prisoners do not compete injuriously with any trade outside. As a matter of fact they do compete unfairly, the woodwork turned out in the Central Prison, for instance, competing most disastrously with rival factories conducted by honest men.

But these apologists avoid the real point of the contention. The main and grievous complaint against the competition of prison labor is its unfairness. The prison work is cheaper, and, therefore, prison products can undersell those of honest men who wish to earn a living. The workingman who does not qualify himself for gaol has not only to support himself and his family, but also to contribute towards the feeding and clothing of the prisoner at the cost of the people. The prisoner being fed and clothed by honest men is not a fair competitor in the market with those who have to help maintain him as well as maintaining themselves. Mr. Mowat could, and did, let the prisoner's labor at a rate that would not afford a living to the honest man, and sent the cheap product out to depress the market for the honest man's goods, a manifest injustice. The attempt to find some article not produced by honest labor, and as to which prison competition would not be injurious, can hardly succeed; the only safe course is not to allow prison products to go outside into the general market.

Does it necessarily follow that prisoners should live in idleness and at the cost of honest men? This would be an incentive to crime among the predisposed to it, and an injustice to those who are not criminals. But, with a little careful planning and management, it is not necessary. The criminal and idle should be compelled as far as possible to work for their living and to supply their own wants. Their being in prison should not release them from this duty. By a well-devised division of labor they might largely supply their own requirements, without cut-throat competition outside the prison with honest workingmen, who would at the same time be relieved of much of the burden of expenditure on prisons. The writer once saw in France when visiting an ancient castle which had been converted into a prison, the old knights' hall filled with busy looms. Here was being manufactured the material for prison clothing, which was made up by female prisoners, and the surplus distributed to other prisons. Elsewhere shoes were being made and so forth, the prisoners thus supplying a large part of their own requirements and reducing the cost of their maintenance by honest people to a small amount. Cannot our authorities do the same by the exercise of a little ingenuity and judicious management? If some experts are right in considering the treadmill valuable both as a deterrent and as healthful though unpleasant exercise, the power need not be wasted but might be utilized. The suggestion that it could be used for electric lighting is worth consideration for instance. An idle or insubordinate prisoner might be punished by an extra spell on the wheel. Those who worked diligently and behaved well might on the other hand be credited with some portion of the value of their labor to give them a fresh start on their release. By such a plan the prisoners could supply much of their own requirements, and indeed, nearly all if they could produce their own food on a prison farm, which some advocate and which should be found practicable. It must be remembered, too, that no part of the prisoners' labor would go to finding money for middlemen's profits, for luxuries, amusements, intoxicants, tobacco, etc., and this saving would go towards necessary purchases and other expenses. By working out such a plan in detail it surely cannot be impossible to make criminals self supporting without burdening honest men or underselling honest labour.

"Home, Sweet Home," has always been a a favorite song, touching the hearts of all hearers. The interest felt in it by all English speaking people will be increased now that the disputed authorship is definitely settled, it being proved that the melody is the work of Sir Henry Bishop, the celebrated British composer, while the author of the words was Mr. Howard Payne, a United States poet. Thus this favorite song of both these great nations links them together as being a joint composition. The people of each will feel more at home under the flag of the other as they hear the welcome sound of "Home, Sweet Home," and call to mind the share each has had in producing it.

A TERRIBLE FALL.

ONTARIO LEGISLATURE

THE FIRST SESSION OF THE SIXTH PROVINCIAL PARLIAMENT.

Manhood Suffrage Under Consideration —A Stipendiary Magistrate who Tries No Cases—Bills Pushed Through.

FRIDAY, April 1.—Bills were introduced and others read the third time.

MANHOOD SUFFRAGE.

Mr. MOWAT, in reply to Mr. Nairn, said it was the intention of the Government to introduce a measure simplifying the voters' list and practically establishing manhood suffrage, with restrictions as to residence. It would not, however, be introduced this session.

CHANCERY DIVISION CASES.

Mr. MOWAT, in reply to questions by Mr. Monk, said that before the Judicature Act the Court of Chancery practice had been different from that in law. All cases for the Court of Chancery was set down seven days before term or otherwise they were not heard. The custom in law had been to give notice four days before term. The practice had been preserved by the Court of Chancery and had not been found to work any injustice. An effort would be made to secure uniformity in the three divisions.

AN UNNECESSARY APHOINTMENT.

Mr. CREIGHTON moved for a return showing the number of cases brought before E. B. Borron, Stipendiary Magistrate for Northern Nipissing, for adjudication during each year since his appointment.

Mr. MOWAT said that Mr. Borron's services as surveyor had been availed of, and he had furnished several reports to the Government, who had thought it well to have a representative in the disputed territory.

Mr. MEREDITH said that Mr. Borron had received $1,200 a year for eight years, and had done almost nothing in return. He protested against the people's money being used to reward political friends of the Government.

Mr. HARDY said that Mr. Borron's retention in office was justified as a step in resisting the encroachments of the Dominion.

Mr. CREIGHTON said that so far from maintaining the position of the Province, Mr. Borron had not attempted to exercise jurisdiction because the territory was disputed.

The motion was amended by the Attorney-General to include particulars of other services performed by Mr. Borron, and was then passed.

PUBLIC BILLS.

Mr. Wood's (Hastings) bill to amend the Railway Act of Ontario was passed through committee of the whole.

Mr. Leys' bill respecting building societies, providing that transfers of debenture stock may be made at any agency, that these societies may hold real estate to the value of $10,000, was read the second time and referred to a special committee.

Mr. Bronson's bill to amend the Municipal Act was referred to the Municipal Committee.

Mr. Gibson's (Hamilton) bill to amend the Ontario Medical Act was read a second time and referred to a special committee.

Mr. Clancy's bill to amend the Registry Act by declaring that no agreement to give powers of sale of property to an agent shall be registered as a lien against the property, was read the second time and referred to a special committee.

Several private bills were passed through committee, and the House adjourned at 6.10 p. m.

FIDELITY TO PARTY.

At a public meeting held in the County of Wellington the other day an old resident said "he gloried in the fact that he had never voted otherwise than Liberal since he first began voting in the year of the Mackenzie rebellion." The local chronicler adds that this boast was received with great cheering. In Quebec County, on the very same day, a French-Canadian notary—the notary ranks next to the cure as a man of light and leading—was cheered to the echo for stating that "he was proud to know that his family had always been true to Conservative principles," and the cheering appears to have become frantic when he added that "nothing in the world, except the voice of his bishop, could induce him to vote red." But what does this extreme loyalty to party imply? It implies that in the belief of these two gentlemen their party is infallible, for we are not going to suppose that they ever voted for what they knew to be wrong. Herbert Spencer calls this belief one of the great superstitions of the age. In times past the great superstition was the divine right of kings. The theologians taught that kings were gods, sharing in a manner the divine attributes, and the Tory party in England believed that the monarch was the delegate of heaven. Given this premise, the conclusion that the king could do no wrong was inevitable. But, as Mr. Spencer says, no such warrant exists for the modern belief. The party makes no pretensions to divine descent, nor does its leader assert that he owes his position to divine appointment; hence such unlimited faith in the leader and in the party as we have just recorded lacks the consistency of the old superstition about the king, and for that reason is a more monstrous, absurd and mischievous delusion.

It is astonishing what a large number of persons in Canada vote Tory or Reform because their fathers did it, or because they themselves have always so voted, or because they could not stand the disloyalty of the Reformers in Mackenzie's time, or because they were tired of the Family Compact, or because they think the Reform party tried to wreck Confederation, or because they condemned the double shuffle, and so on. This large class is living entirely in the past, swayed by shibboleths and watchwords which to-day are meaningless and inapplicable. In dealing with current issues, they make no use of their intelligence or conscience, but vote blindly; and, having thus shirked their duty to themselves and to society, turn round and ask us to admire their fidelity to principle. Such fidelity, however, is very near akin to that high crime against truth which the old schoolmen called wilful obstinacy; and, instead of being applauded, it should be rebuked by every man having the welfare of the country at heart.—Toronto Mail.

A Veteran Association.

WINNIPEG, Man., April 1.—The survivors of the first Red river expedition met here last night and organized a permanent association to be known as the "Wolseley Red River expeditionary force." Colonel Scott, ex-M. P. was elected chairman. All the survivors of the expedition, no matter where they reside, are eligible for membership. They decided to present an address signed by all the survivors of the expedition to Lord Wolseley.

Books at his Tongue's End.

"I can't understand," remarked a reporter to a gay young society friend, "how it is that while I never saw you with a book in your hand in my life, except 'Don't,' that at Miss Blank's party the other evening, I overheard you in high literary conversation with Mrs. A. U. Thoress; why, you seem to be conversant with every work of all the prominent authors, even some I never heard of myself."

"If you won't give it away I'll put you on," rejoined the social success, drawing the reporter into a corner and producing a "Seaside Catalogue" from his pocket. "Now name any author you find marked."

The reporter selected Black, when the lot, rattled off like a schoolboy, "Princess of Thule," "Daughter of Thule," "Daughter of Heth," "Madcap Violet," "Yolande," "Judith," "Shakespeare," "Macleod of Dare," etc. It was just the same with most of the other authors.

"And don't you ever get beyond the titles?" inquired the reporter.

"Not myself; they'd all rather give their opinions of a book than hear one, and when I get in a tight place I just switch off upon another author or title. It took some time to learn what I wanted to know of the list so as not to mix it up, but it's a heap sight easier than reading them all and answers well enough for any ordinary literary conversation. But don't give it away or you'll spoil the scheme."

A Tragedy or Trick.

ST. THOMAS, Ont., April 2.—An unclaimed corpse lies at the American Express office here, addressed to P. D. McKellar. It arrived by express from the States yesterday in bond. No such person as P. D. McKellar is known in this city, and the authorities are becoming suspicious of foul play.

A Fatal Fall.

OTTAWA, April 1.—John Murphy, laborer, aged 62, met with his death yesterday afternoon, by falling down the flight of steps leading from the ground floor to the basement of the Normal school.

Mary had a little lamb,
With which she used to play
She bought her boots at Kidd's new store
And was happy every day.

ENNISMORE.

COLD DIP CONTINUED.—At sunrise on Thursday morning, the 31st of March, the thermometer indicated 10 deg. below zero, and on Friday morning, 1st of April, 2 deg. below zero.

MIDLAND.

FATAL ACCIENT.—A fifteen year old daughter of Mr. Lacey fell down stairs about a week ago and a scissors which she had in her hand entered her body. Medical aid was called in, but on Tuesday last she succumbed to the effects of the wound.

DROWNED.—The colored child adopted by Mrs. James Brown some years ago was drowned in a spring on Saturday afternoon. The child went to the spring for a pail that had been left there, and in reaching up to get it off a pole, she must have slipped, falling in head foremost. The hole was only large enough to admit a pail and there was not more than about a foot of water. The child was found about ten minutes after she left the house to go to the spring, but life was extinct.—Free Press.

SELWYN.

HONOR ROLL.—The following is the standing of the pupils in School Section No. 7, North Smith, of which Mr. E. Elliot is teacher, for the month ending March the 31st:—

Senior Fourth—1st Walter Roxborough, 2nd Fred. Fanning.

Junior Fourth—1st Sidney Preston, 2nd Essie Blewett, 3rd Emma Blewett.

Third Class—1st Maggie Sage, 2nd Alexander Preston, 3rd James Blewett.

Second Class—1st William Hatton, 2nd Isaac Sage, 3rd Bertie Manning.

2nd Part—1st Bruce Preston, 2nd Edward Graham, 3rd Stewart Trennum.

1st Part—1st Stewart Sanderson, 2nd Bruce Fitzgerald.

Average attendance, 29.

GALWAY.

FIRE.—Mr. Thomas White, of Silver Lake, had the misfortune to have his premises burnt on Friday morning. He was away from home at the time, collecting the taxes, and Mrs. White was alone. Shortly after getting up, Mrs. White discovered the roof to be on fire. At first she started to run for the nearest neighbor, but considering that she could not get back in time to do any good, she returned and tried to save some of the things. The building, however, went like a brush heap in mid-summer, and she could only get out the bed clothes. Everything else was destroyed, including a top buggy and a good cutter. A neighbour was in sight but they were not awake, and when they got up the fire was over. Mr. White places his loss at over $300, and has no insurance.—Bobcaygeon Independent.

BOBCAYGEON.

ICE.—The ice in the lakes is the thickest known for many years. It is expected that the opening of navigation will be unusally late.

ICELANDERS.—We learn from a Winnipeg paper that the Icelanders living in the vicinity of lake Winnipeg and Selkirk have organized a fishing and game protection society, and elected Capt. S. Jonasson, of Selkirk, president, J. Stevenson of Gimli, vice-president; John Johnson, of Winnipeg, secretary-treasurer. These are the Icelanders who were located some years ago, at Kinmount, and worked on the construction of the Victoria railway. They removed to Gimli, on Lake Winnipeg. Those who survived the severe trials in forming their new homes, are doing fairly well. The journey from their native place to this point was a hard test, but the second journey to Gimli was worse. In making the voyage up Lake Winnipeg in boats, several were drowned, and shortly after their location they were decimated by a terrible scourge of small-pox. The reports from Gimli are now of a favourable character.—Independent.

FENELON FALLS.

THE LOCK GATES.—Mr. Charles Wynn, of Peterborough, who has the contract for the lock gates in this village, arrived here a few days ago and has already resumed work, which will be continued until the gates are finished and put up.

ANOTHER LIVE DEER.—While Mr Joseph McArthur and Mr. E. R. Edwards were driving near the Irwin settlement in Fenelon, they saw a young deer floundering in the deep snow near the road, and Mr. McArthur, jumping from the sleigh, soon overtook the animal, which he mastered after a short but sharp struggle. A box having been procured from a farmer's house, the captive—which is a fast year's buck, large for its age—was placed therein, brought to the Falls, and turned into the paddock in the park with the five mentioned in the Gazette of March 19th. The deer are all doing well, and some of them are already so tame that they will come to meet their keeper when he takes them their food.—Gazette.

OTONABEE.

SCHOOL REPORT.—The following is the report of S. S. No. 16, Otonabee, of which Mr. Ivison Wilson is teacher, for the month of March, 1887:—

Fifth Class—Annie Stewart.

Fourth Class—1 Charles Frost, 2 George Frost, 3 Emma Welch.

Third Sr.—1 Mary Guthrie, 2 Minnie Rose, 3 Mary Hanbidge.

Third Jr.—1 John Rose, 2 Agnes Guthrie, 3 Willie Welch.

Second Class—1 Stanley Matchett, 2 Marvin Kennedy, 3 Fred Erskine.

First Sr.—1 Nettie Stewart, 2 Ada Rose, 3 Annie Guthrie.

First Jr.—1 Felix Lynch, 2 Ernest Welch, 3 Harry Pope.

SCHOOL REPORT.—The following is the report for S. S. No. 5, Otonabee, of which Miss M. A. Nicholl is teacher, for March:—

Fourth Class—1st Lizzie Lang, 2nd Annie Renwick, 3rd Belle Knox.

Third Class—1st Sophia Stark, 2nd Mary Knox and Jas. Davidson, 3rd Christie Shearer.

Second Class—1st Andrew Shearer, 2nd Alex. Plunkett, 3rd Mary Andrews.

HINTS TO CHEESE MAKERS.

By James Whitton, Cheese Instructor, Eastern Ontario.

In the spring months, when your cheese is required to cure in from 15 to 20 days, or even less, use rennet enough to induce coagulation in from 8 to 12 minutes. To produce this result the condition of the milk must be considered.

Milk well matured will coagulate with less rennet than when sweet and new, but this should make no difference in the quantity used, as the curing of the cheese must be considered.

Always time the process of setting and stir from three to five minutes, so as to thoroughly incorporate the rennet with the milk.

As to the time for cutting the curd I have found that four times the time consumed in coagulation is a good rule. For example, if the time consumed in coagulation is ten minutes, then 40 minutes from the time the rennet is added will be the time to commence cutting. In cutting, great care should be taken not to bruise the curd. At this point it depends greatly on the gentle handling for the yield. I cut lengthwise and then cross with perpendicular knife; then lengthwise with horizontal knife, cutting the curd carefully into cubes. I regard the horizontal knife as indispensable, as it avoids brushing up by too much slashing with the perpendicular knife.

As I have stated above to use more rennet in spring, it also requires less salt, say from 1½ to 2 lbs. The action of the rennet will hasten the ripening process, which will go on more rapidly by using less salt.

Heating should proceed slowly at first. When your milk is heated at a temp. of 86 deg. go according to the condition of the milk and temperature of the weather. When the whole mass is heated to the above temperature we take a cup holding 4 oz. of mill and into this we introduce a teaspoonful of rennet of known strength and note the time employed in coagulation. If coagulation begins in 20 sec. add the rennet immediately. If in 30 sec. then it is evident that the process of maturing ought to be carried forward to the given point first mentioned, always taking care not to mature too far.

Sudden coagulation indicates the presence of the milk souring, while that which takes longer requires to be matured to a given point.

If coloring is to be used it should be added before the rennet and thoroughly mixed for at least five minutes.

Heating should proceed slowly but gradually increase as the whey separates. 98 degrees is the usual temperature for cooking in spring and summer, but in fall, when milk is richer, I have found it necessary to go as high as 100 to 102 deg.

To determine the question whether the curd is properly cooked or not I use the hot iron. The moment the curd will show the least sign of draw I seperate it from the whey at once. Right here lies one of the great secrets of success of the cheese-maker, the absolute separation of the whey at the nick of time when acidity is known to be near, and yet has not appeared. For spring cheese ¼ to ¼ inch draw on hot iron is all that is required in general run of factories before salting. After salting I recommend piling the curd so that it will sweat and become mellow before putting to press by occasionally turning it over.

PRESSING.

Not much need be said on this subject more than to hoop rapidly, never allowing a full hoop to stand exposed to the atmosphere, as by so doing the curd becomes seared over and a defective rind is the result.

To avoid cracks the press cloths should be kept perfectly sweet and clean, not allowing them to become sour, as the acid causes the ends of the cheese to crack.

CURING.

Curing is a process in which we cannot use too much caution. In spring the curing room must be kept at 70 or 80 degrees day and night, and in summer 65 to 70 will give the best results.

It is doubtless a fact that many cheese are spoiled after reaching the curing room through neglect.

Many cheese makers seem to suppose that as soon as the cheese are on the shelves they are out of harm's way and need do further care or attention from them, and the care of this part of the work is given over to boys.

In conclusion I would say that some of our best cheese makers are working against tide, as it were, on account of the proprietors of factories not furnishing them with anything like the proper place to cure their cheese after having exhausted all the skill which lay in the power of any mechanic. As I have already stated it is impossible to make anything like fancy cheese where the curing room is subject to all the changes of the atmosphere. A great many of our oldest and wealthiest factories are just in that condition. For instance, take Springbrook, Rawdon, and Elzevir at Queensboro, where I know they have as good skill as they have in the Dominion, all that is wanted is this point remedied.

Astonishing Success

It is the duty of every person who has used Boschee's German Syrup to let its wonderful qualities be known to their friends in curing Consumption, severe Coughs, Croup, Asthma, Pneumonia, and in fact all throat and lung diseases. No person can use it without immediate relief. Three doses will relieve any case, and we consider it the duty of all Druggists to recommend it to the poor, dying consumptive at least to try one bottle, as 70,000 dozen bottes were sold last year, and no one case where it failed was reported. Such a medicine as the German Syrup cannot be too widely known. Ask your druggist about it Sample bottles to try, sold at 10 cents. Regular size, 75 cents. Sold by all Druggists and Dealers, in the United States and Canada. d90

The Finance Committee of the Montreal city council have authorized a temporary loan of $500,000 to meet pressing liabilities, and have decided to advertise for another permanent loan of $500,000 at 4 per cent. interest.

The Home Mission Committee of the Presbyterian Church concluded its half-yearly meeting on Friday night, the whole day having been devoted to the consideration of the administration of mission work in Manitoba and the Northwest.

Ladies, See those lovely Dress Goods exhibited in the show windows of Rowse's Trade Palace. Leading Novelties opening up daily.

Advice to Mothers.

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup should always be used when children are cutting teeth. It relieves the little sufferer at once; it produces natural, quiet sleep by relieving the child from pain, and the little cherub awakes "as bright as a button." It is very pleasant to taste. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain, relieves wind, regulates the bowels, and is the best known remedy for diarrhœa, whether arising from teething or other causes. 25 cents a bottle. Be sure and ask for "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup," and take no other kind.

EPPS'S COCOA

BREAKFAST.

"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected Cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there was a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished frame."—Civil Service Gazette.

The Daily Review.

MONDAY, APRIL 4, 1887.

THE CITY AND SUBURBS

Accident.

While Mr. John Tagney, of the REVIEW press room, was in attendance at one of the presses, on Saturday, to get his hand caught between one of the tapes and the cylinder. His hand was badly bruised.

Rink Closed.

It is quite likely that there will be no more curling this season. The curling rinks are covered with water to-day. Those who have skates at the rink will find Mr. Cousins there to-morrow to hand them out.

Gent's White Shirts only $1 at Rowse's Trade Palace.

Sheppard

Opens his store on Saturday, April 2nd, the first door south of Arcade, George street—Dry Goods, Clothing and Hats and Caps. Many lines have been bought at a rate of 60 cents on the dollar to clear. These goods will be slaughtered. It will pay you to look through.

Cobourg's First Daily Paper.

The first daily paper published in Cobourg has made its appearance. It first saw the light—or shed light—on April 1st, but it is not a "fool." It is the Sentinel-Star, and is a four page, twenty column paper, fairly well supplied with general news, but local items appear to be its specialty. Our best wishes for the prosperity of the new daily.

Baseball.

The Cobourg Sentinel-Star says:—"The Mail says Peterborough proposes to put a good nine in the field this season. We would like to be sure of that, for Peterborough is a likely town, and a club properly managed should do well. Let the baseball people out there consult Mr. W. Sailsbury, and they will learn how to get a successful club." The Sentinel's good advice was acted on before it was given.

FINE shell cordovan shoes at Kidd's new store for $4.00 per pair. Hand made.

Pushing Trade.

Mr. Charles Porter, of the firm of Porter Bros., has returned to town after having finished an extended trip to Eastern Canada in the interest of the O. B. & S. road cart and carriage tops. Mr. Porter reports having done a good business. He left on a tour through Western Ontario today. Messrs. Porter Bros'. business has increased very much during the last six months. The new road carts are being shipped at the rate of from six to a dozen a day, and there also a boom in carriage tops. New spring goods will be ready for exhibition in a few days.

A Handsome Business House.

Sheppard, the new dry goods man, has opened out his new stock in the store south of the arcade, Gough's old stand. The place has been thoroughly renovated, improved and enlarged. A new plate glass front has been put in, new counters, new shelving, and it is now one of the most conveniently arranged stores in town. The cellar has been fitted up as a carpet room. The walls and ceiling are ribbed with varnished wood, and a new flight of stairs has been put in leading from the store to this department. The dry goods and carpet departments are both furnished with electric lamps.

EVERY lady should see these new Jersey Corsets TURNBULL is introducing.

TWO LARGE GATHERINGS.

The Opera House Crowded at the Temperance Meetings on Sunday.

On Sunday afternoon the Opera House was filled to overflowing, the occasion being one of the series of Gospel temperance meetings. From half past three o'clock until the hour for commencing (four o'clock) the people streamed into the hall and filled every corner. The stage was occupied by the Rev. J. Judd White, the Rev. Mr. Johnston, of London, and the choir. Instrumental music was produced from a piano and Mr. White's guitar.

Mr. WHITE, after the opening devotional exercises, took up the thread of his discourse to children on habits where he had left off on the previous Sunday afternoon, and enforced, by further object lessons, the strong hold which habits take on a person, multiplying their coils, which at first are weak, but which became so strong they exercise control.

Mr. JOHNSTON gave a brief address, during which he related a pethic story regarding a child's prayer, illustrating the efficacy of prayer and the work which even a child can do.

Mr. White sang "Papa, What Would You Take for Me?" which appropriately followed after Mr. Johnston's address. It was sung with such effect that at the conclusion there was a burst of applause, the only time such a sign of approval was indulged in during the Sunday meetings.

THE EVENING MEETING.

In the evening, at 8.30 o'clock, another meeting was held, and again the Opera House was filled. The singing was animated and cheering, one religious song by Mr. White, "A Thousand Years," being especially worthy of particular mention. After the opening, Mr. White called on Mr. Bannell Sawyer, Principal of the Business College, for an address.

Mr. SAWYER said he had consented to speak for five or ten minutes, and proceeded to give a very good address. He said that hotel-keepers admitted the benefits of temperance, and one hotel-keeper he had conversed with inferentially admitted the benefits of total abstinence by boasting that his sons were total abstainers. He had no hard words for the hotel keepers, and argued that the electors who authorized, by their action at the ballot box, the sale of liquor, were equally responsible for the evil effects of the traffic. He emphasized the danger of moderate drinking, instancing men of great intellects whose usefulness had been impaired by the habit of drinking. He set before the audience, especially young men, self-denial as the highest type of manhood.

The Rev. Mr. JOHNSTON, who was again present, urged the necessity of Divine aid in giving out drinking or other evil habits. He advised all not to drink—to sign the pledge and to ask Christ to aid them to keep it.

The Rev. Mr. WHITE followed with a brief speech, dwelling on the need of the formation of a Christ-like character to enable one to give up bad habits and to live good and noble lives.

The meeting closed with singing and the benediction.

This evening another meeting will be held in the Opera House. The Rev. Mr. Johnston, of London, will give an address, and others will probably take part. The indications are that the meetings this week will be even more popular than they were last week.

Why, Maggie, where did you get your beautiful dress? I got it at Rowse's. We buy all our Dress Goods at the Trade Palace. They are so cheap.

Sheppard

Opens on Saturday, note the address, 1st door south of Arcade, George street. Good goods cheap.

Church Sale.

The ladies of St. Andrew's Church intend holding a sale of useful and fancy articles on the 21st inst. in St. Andrew's school room. Particulars later.

Social.

A social under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid Society of St. Paul's Church, will be held in the Sunday School room, on Thursday evening, April 7th, at 7.30 o'clock. Refreshments will be served during the evening, and a very good musical programme provided. Admission 25c.

Children's Button Boots for 80 cents at Kidd's are really good.

Accident.

At one o'clock this afternoon Wm. Foster, engineer at the Central Iron Works, met with a painful accident. He was rubbing down the frame of the engine when the crank came around and struck him on the right hand. The back of the hand was severely bruised and some of the skin and flesh was torn off. Dr. Kincaid dressed the wound.

Colored Jubilee Singers.

The New Orleans Jubilee Singers, who have just come from Toronto, where they sang to audiences of 2,000 and 3,000, will be in Peterborough on Easter Monday. As the Opera House had been previously engaged, by the kind permission of the pastor and trustees, they will sing in the George Street Methodist Church. Admission, 25c.

Scott Act.

At the Police Court this morning the following Scott Act cases was brought before the court:—Queen vs. Garlick, Queen vs. Curtin, Queen vs. (Mrs.) Carr, Queen vs. Brault, Queen vs. (J.) Clancy, Queen vs. Leahy and Queen vs. (T.) Dunn. Pleas of guilty having been entered in each case except the last a fine of $50 and costs was imposed in each case. The Queen vs. Dunn case was adjourned until to-morrow.

Heavy White Quilts only $1 at Rowse's Trade Palace.

Council Meeting.

A regular meeting of the Town Council will be held this evening.

Board of Education.

A regular meeting of the Board of Education will be held to-morrow evening.

Silks, Satins and Plushes at very low figures at Rowse's.

Removal.

Mr. John Craig, confectioner, has removed his stock two doors north of his old stand to more commodious premises.

Heavy Receipts.

The Police Court record shows that during the past two months the sum of $1,900 has been received in fines on the Scott Act account.

English Literature Class.

The English Literature Class will meet in the Y. M. C. A. rooms to-night at 8 o'clock. All are invited. Subject: Tennyson's Princess.

Boating Club.

The annual meeting of the Boating Club will be held this evening when the election of officers and other business will be transacted.

Ladies do not pay $1.00 for everyday boots. You can get them for 65 cents at Kidd's.

We May Expect.

—To see sorrowful curlers.
—Spring showers.
—Some business to be transacted at the Council meeting to-night.
—Interest in boating to wake up.
—And a large number at the meeting to-night.
—McDowell's company.
—"Peril" to draw a house.
—Agitation among the milliners.
—And the show rooms to burst into efflorescence soon.

Personal.

Mr. Wm. Cumming, collector, has been indisposed for the past week. He will be about in a day or two.

Mr. John Craig, of the Fergus News-Record, was in town on Sunday attending the funeral of his father-in-law, the late Jason Lundy.

The Ontario Gazette of Saturday contains the appointment of Mr. Louis Martin Hayes, Solicitor, of Peterborough, to be a Notary Public for Ontario.

"Peril."

The McDowell Comedy Company will again visit Peterborough on Saturday, April 9th, when the great drama of Peril will be presented. The following is taken from the Duluth, Minn., Daily News: "In the evening Victorien Sardou's great drama of "Peril" was produced, and the McDowells added to their already well established repuation as artists. The Lady Ormond of Miss Reeves was superb, and her delineation of the passion swayed woman's triumphal victory over dishonor was fully equal to that of Mrs. Langtry. E. A. McDowell branched off in a new character, that of Dr. Thornton, and the cynical doctor, whose pure disinterested friendship and delicate finesse brought about the happy denouement, was intensely interesting. Sir Woodbine Grafton gave Mr. Kenneth Lee a better part than any he has appeared in here, and his acting as the fussy, meddling East Indian was very funny. Edward Bell, as Captain Thornton, added to his laurels as an actor, although his character was the too-often abused one—a friend of the family. Mr. Barry, as Sir George Ormond, the husband whose ruling passion was his carnation beds and whose greatest fault was his kindness to friends, was by far the best character he has assumed here. The remaining characters were all well sustained and the entire play was a brilliant success."

Mr. Cargill Elected in East Bruce.

WALKERTON, April 2.—Mr. Henry Cargill Conservative, was elected for East Bruce to-day by 150 majority.

Prescott's New Sheriff.

TORONTO, April 1.—Mr. Albert Hagar, ex-M. P., of Plantagenet, has been appointed sheriff of Prescott county, vice Mr. Merrick, deceased.

An English Editor's Visit.

WASHINGTON, D. C., April 1.—Mr. Yates Thompson, proprietor and editor of the London Pall Mall Gazette, has arrived here.

Another Election in South Victoria.

LINDSAY, Ont., April 1.—Mr. Adam Hudspeth, M. P. for South Victoria, has resigned, owing to being disqualified as revising officer for North Victoria. Writs are issued for the nomination on April 13. Polling will take place on April 20.

Murderous Robbers.

CHICAGO, April 1.—Mr. M. Manheimer, a sixty year old merchant, was assaulted on Twenty-second street bridge last night by two roughs, who robbed him of $40 and his watch, and then pushed him over the railing into the river. The old man was fished out unconscious, and will probably die. His assailants escaped.

Gabriel Dumont's Big Talk.

ST. PAUL, April 2.—Gabriel Dumont, the military genius of the Riel rebellion, who is now in this city, says that Big Bear's son has written him from Sun River, asking his advice regarding an invasion of Canadian territory, and claiming that ponies and everything necessary were at his disposal.

Terrible Suffering

PORT ASSINIBOINE, Mont., April 2.—On March 13th James Waldon, Stephen Owens and Joe McCuig, left Lethbridge, N.W.T. for this place and arrived yesterday. Owing to the heavy snow their horses were abandoned and their sufferings for want of food and from intense cold were terrible. Owens will die; Waldon and McCuig may recover with the loss of both their feet. They claim to be deserters from the North-West Mounted Police.

Only 80 cents for a pair of ladies' fine button boots at Kidd's.

Defeat for the Prohibitionists.

NEW YORK, April 2.—The World has a special despach from Lincoln, Nebraska, which says that the Legislature adjourned after refusing by an overwhelming vote to submit the question of prohibition to the people.

John G. Saxe Dead.

ALBANY, Vt., April 1.—John Godfrey Saxe, the poet, died here yesterday. The burial will take place in Brooklyn. For the past ten years or more he has lived in seclusion in Albany, and for several years has been in very poor health.

A Cable Break.

NEW YORK, March 31.—Both the ocean cable lines of the Mackay-Bennett Commercial Cable Company are broken, and the company is not receiving any business this morning. The break is close to the shore of Nova Scotia. Repairs will be effected probably in a few days.

Open Two-thirds in 1888.

NEW ORLEANS, April 1.—Mr. Charles De Lesseps, son of the French engineer, has just come from an inspection of the Panama Canal. He says he thinks that by the beginning of 1888 two-thirds of the canal will be navigable to small vessels, and that everything is progressing finely.

A Canadian Dies Unknown.

PHILADELPHIA, April 2.—Rev. John Dennis, of this city, who is a Canadian, went to Bristol yesterday for the purpose of identifying the body of a well dressed man, who was found in a dying condition near Andalusia on Wednesday. He feels positive the body is that of a well known sporting man of Toronto, but whose name he does not remember. Further examination will be made by the coroner's physician to-morrow.

Terrible Railway Collision.

ST. THOMAS Ont., April 2.—This morning on the Michigan Central between Springfield and here a terrible collision occurred, resulting in the instant death of a brakeman. An operator who failed to put out his signal seems to be at fault. The oldest railway men say they never saw a wreck that could equal this one. Twenty-six cars and two engines are broken into splinters and piled up on the track forty-five feet high.

GRASS linens, table linens, table napkins, linen handkerchiefs, etc., fresh from the loom in Belfast, Ireland, now opened out at TURNBULL'S. Grand value. See them.

The New Dry Goods Firm

—OF—

SHEEHY & CO.

We take pleasure in announcing that we have formally taken possession of the dry goods business carried on for the past twenty years by

T. DOLAN & CO.

In this, our first announcement, to the public, we wish to say that it is our intention to follow in the footsteps of our predecessors, MESSRS. T. DOLAN & CO. In the first place we intend to keep up the good reputation of our establishment by keeping on our shelves at all seasons at prices that will compete effectually with any house in Central Ontario the newest and best in all lines of Staple and Fancy Dry Goods.

In the second place we intend to adhere to the strictest principle of the firm, by advertising nothing but what we intend doing, and doing everything that we advertise.

Therefore as we wish to make some changes to beautify our store, we offer our new stock from now until MAY 31st, at such figures as will attract the attention of buyers.

Remember everything at reduced prices at

TUESDAY, APRIL 5, 1887.

GENERAL.

The largest library in the world is in Paris. It contains 2,000,000 volumes.

It is all very well to talk about mindreading, but the thing that should be encouraged is newspaper reading.

It is estimated that the beggars of Rome received $2,000,000 a year in alms, and that 500 of them are worth from $15,000 to $25,000 each.

Germany proposes to build strategic military railways on her southern frontier.

The throat complaint from which Crown Prince Frederick William is suffering is worse.

Since the Scott Act became law in Northumberland and Durham thirty-one convictions for violations of the Act have been secured and fines amounting to $1,850 have been imposed.

Great alarm was caused on Saturday night by a report that the Cunard steamer Scythia was wrecked on the coast of Massachusetts, but the report happily proved to be untrue.

The Maritime Provinces and New England were visited on Saturday by the severest storm of the season. Heavy gales prevailed along the coast, and the snow fell to a considerable depth. The railways are blocked in New Brunswick. It is feared that the loss of life and property at sea was extensive.

KIDD keeps Cowhide, Kip, Cordovan and Kidd Boots that caps the climax. Prices low.

Premier Smythe's Funeral.

VICTORIA, B.C., April 1.—The Hon. Mr. Smythe was buried yesterday. The funeral was a public one, a half holiday being observed in the city. The obsequies were very imposing, and the procession the longest ever seen in the Province, extending about a mile in length. The remains were taken to Somenos for interment, by train, a large number of citizens accompanying them. Attorney-General Davie is forming a new Government. He will be Premier; John Robson, Secretary; J. H. Turner, Treasurer; G. B. Martin, Commissioner of Land and Works; and D. W. Higgins, President of the Council. The House meets again to-day.

Blaine's Wishes.

NEW YORK, April 4.—During Mr. Blain's recent visit to this city he said to Senator Hiscock regarding his wishes for 1888: "I am for the man who will carry New York or the man on whom the New York delegates shall unite." He thought that as New York would be the pivotal state in the next campaign, as it was in the last, it was only right that she should name the Republicans candidate, provided her delegates could agree upon one man. Mr. Blaine also said he was only interested in the welfare and success of the Republican party, and the wish to see that party restored to power in 1888 was stronger than any personal ambition that he had ever entertained.

Astonishing Success

It is the duty of every person who has used Boschee's German Syrup to let its wonderful qualities be known to their friends in curing Consumption, severe Coughs, Croup, Asthma, Pneumonia, and in fact all throat and lung diseases. No person can use it without immediate relief. Three doses will relieve any case, and we consider it the duty of all Druggists to recommend it to the poor, dying consumptive at least to try one bottle, as 70,000 dozen bottes were sold last year, and no one case where it failed was reported. Such a medicine as the German Syrup cannot be too widely known. Ask your druggist about it Sample bottles to try, sold at 10 cents. Regular size, 75 cents. Sold by all Druggists and Dealers, in the United States and Canada. d90

AFTER THE USURERS.

TANGIER, April 4.—An expedition furnished with documents from the Sultan's Minister and Mr. Lewis, the American Consul, has started on the work of arresting the usurers complained of in the Ion Predicaris case, and the release of the persons detained in the Larnich advance for debt on alleged American claims.

Open Late—In order to accommodate their customers, Rowse's Trade Palace will keep open every evening this week.

THE CONFERENCE OPENED.

The Colonial Delegates Welcomed by Lord Salisbury.

LONDON, April 4.—The Colonial conference opened at the foreign office to-day. Lord Salisbury welcomed the delegates, who, he said, were engaged in the work of originating a great movement toward Imperial federation. The question of actual federation was one, perhaps, more for future discussion than for present, the most important question pressing upon the attention of the whole empire being in his opinion, the common interest the colonies had with the mother country in Imperial defence. The premier, continuing, said he was opposed to the ambitious scheme of making a constitution for the whole empire. In opposing this, however, he did not wish it to be understood as casting and slur upon the aspiration of imperial federation, although he was free to say he thought he the scheme of hasty and doubtful character. Still it contains materials out of which practical results might be obtained. England's policy was, however, essentially pacific, but the danger of war arising from the policy of some other country should induce the colonists to make their defences efficient. Distant parts of the empire were within the sphere of possible aggression.

Big Business—Last Saturday's sales at Rowse's Trade Palace were the largest since January. Cheap Goods draw the crowds.

SWEPT BY FLOODS

House Carried Away at Ingersoll—Five Persons Drowned.

INGERSOLL, Ont., April 4.—The Kingsmill dam was carried away by the spring freshet this morning. The floods swept with terrific force, carrying a tenement house, occupied by four families, three hundred yards down the stream, and leaving it a perfect wreck. John Bowman and his daughter, a young man named John MacLean and a child, name unknown, were drowned. A man named Laird and his daughter are now missing, and it is supposed that they have perished in the flood. The damage to property is very large.

FURTHER PARTICULARS.

HAMILTON, Ont., March 4.—This morning at ten minutes past seven, the dam at Laing's mill gave way and the water came down with a rush. The dam is situated on a small creek which empties into the Thames River, and the dam was located about an eighth of a mile up the creek from the river. The water rushed through the mill yard and engine-house of the mill across Laing street, on which was located a frame terrace, containing four tenements, three of which were occupied. This row of houses momentarily stopped the water, but it soon gave away from its foundation and was carried bodily down the stream with its living freight, when it broke in two parts, one being demolished to fragments and the other being carried on down and lodged on the main track of the Canadian Pacific Railway. One of the tenements was occupied by John Bowman, his wife and three children and his father, and of the six Mr. and Mrs. Bowman, one child and Mr. Bowman were saved, one girl, about five years of age, was and a boy fourteen years old, is missing. The next part of the row was occupied by Mr. McLean, a cooper, and his son, about eighteen years old. The son was found dead on a pile of railway ties and cordwood, which had been washed up to the side of the stream. The father was rescued. The third portion of the house was occupied by Mr. Laird, his wife and two children. One of the children has been found in the water, caught in a coil of wire fencing. Mr. Laird and another child are still missing. Mrs. Laird was carried across the river by the force of the water. She clung to her child most of the way across, but on reaching the opposite bank she slipped and the child was forced from her arms, but she was saved. Both Mrs. Bowman and Mrs. Laird are very low, and there is doubt as to their surviving the shock, and the terrible ordeal through which they have passed. About a thousand yards of the main line of the Canadian Pacific railway is displaced and washed out, and about five hundred yards of the track running into the mills is completely gone.

FOUND DROWNED,

FIVE DROWNED,

Five persons are known to have been drowned so far. They are: Mr. Laird and one child, Mr. McLean and two children named Bowman. It is feared that others have been lost. Part of the Credit Valley Railway track has been washed away.

GENTLEMEN'S beautiful fine shoes at KIDD'S for $1.50 a pair.

More Victims.

BUFFALO, April 3.—Yesterday brought forth three ghastly reminders of the Richmond hotel disaster, in the shape of three charred bodies dug out of the ruins, one, that of Lizzie Welch, a servant girl, the other without much doubt that of Robert S. Boyd, of Boston, and the third thought to be that of Katie Kent, a servant. The bodies are so badly charred and disfigured that identification can only be partial.

A SLIPPER party! 50 different kinds at KIDD'S; 30 cents a pair up.

At Liberty.

Jacob Herstine, who was arrested at Kingston by the customs authorities for attempting to smuggle goods into Canada, was tried on Friday afternoon. The customs officials haded Herstine over to the Kingston police, who held a warrant issued by S. G. Retallack, of this city, in which he was charged with embezzlement. Mr. Retallack and Herstine effected a settlement yesterday, when the case was withdrawn. C. H. Vermilyea, who had also been victimized by Herstine, served a warrant on him as soon as released and proceeded with the trial. He was unable to sustain the charge and Herstine was dismissed.—Belleville Intelligencer.

LATEST CABLE NEWS!

THE RUSSIAN NIHILISTS.

VIENNA, April 4.—Nihilist arrested in Russia show that the Russian Nihilist communicate with their foreign comrades by sea. English vessels are especially suspected of carrying Nihilist letters and money. The Russian Government has placed extra cruisers at the disposal of the Custom House authorities to enable them to overhaul ships and examine them with extreme care.

FORTY KILLED AND INJURED.

LONDON, April 4.—The roof of a church at Linguagiossa, fell without warning during the services yesterday, burying beneath it one hundred persons, forty of whom were killed and injured.

A WAGNER COLLECTION.

VIENNA, April 4.—A private collector of relics of the late Richard Wagner opened a Wagner museum in this city on Sunday. The collection on exhibition comprises authograph documents, scores, etc., left by the composer at Bayreuth, together with a large number of personal souvenirs, busts, portraits, etc. The exhibition attracted several thousand spectators during the day.

DOMICILIARY VISITS.

PARIS, April 4.—German akents are making domiciliary visits in the Reichsland, with the object of discovering any documents that would show their possessor's connection with the French Patriotic League. Orders hade been given by the German authorities to destroy the French tri-color flags preserved in the provincial Mairies.

WILL NOT RESIGN.

PARIS, April 4.—There is no truth in the rumours that Gen. Boulanger, the French War Minister, will resign.

EXPULSIONS CONTINUE.

BERLIN, April 4.—The expulsions from Alsace-Lorraiee continue. The Emperor has granted to the Stattholder, Prince Hohenlohe, an increase of his power.

M. ANTOINE'S EXPULSION.

PARIS, April 4.—Mr. Antoine, the protester delegate to the Reichstag, who was expelled from Germany, has arrived at Pagny. In an interview he said: "I was sitting in the Cafe Turc, at Metz, as is my custom, at 10 o'clock at night, when a detective entered, glanced around, and departed. Then a sub-inspector of police entered, placed me under arrest and informed me that I must leave the country immediately. The police accompanied me to my home, where I bade adieu to my wife and family, and did not leave me until I was over the frontier."

THE AMEER IN TROUBLE.

LONDON, April 4.—A despatch from Lahore announces that the Ameer of Afghanistan is seriously alarmed over the discovery that a number of native tribes are combining against him, and he has appealed to the Indian authorities for help and advice. The Afghans declare that the country has been secretly sold to the British, and that the railway to Candahar has been sanctioned by the Ameer to facilitate their advance. The fanatical element of the people is rampant against the Ameer, who has removed his treasure to Tysabad, whither he will retire himself if he is defeated by his dissatisfied subjects. Other accounts say the Ghilzas are restless under the Ameer's tyranny, and have asked the Indian authorities to depose him. It is also asserted that Lord Dufferin, the British Viceroy, received disquieting news from Afghanistan while at Allahabad recently.

SHARP ARTICLES.

BERLIN, April 4.—Diplomatic circles here are greatly disquieted by the sharp articles against France in the Norddeusche Allgemeine, the Cologne Gazette and the Berlin Post. It is believed that Germany will send a sharp note to Paris, unless the French press entirely change its tone regarding Alsace-Lorraine.

MEETING OF WORKINGMEN.

VIENNA, April 4.—An immense meeting of workmen was held to-night to discuss the political rights of the people. All the speeches made were strongly Socialistic, and the Government officials present were often obliged to stop the speakers, causing several exciting scenes. Resolutions were passed in favour of universal suffrage, the liberty of the press, freedom of meeting and association, and the abolition of exceptional laws against the Socialists.

DE GRIERS TRIUMPHANT.

ST. PETERSBURG, April 3.—The Czar has assured M. De Giers, the Russian Minister of Foreign Affairs, that he retains the Czar's fullest confidence. M. de Giers will remain in the Foreign Office. The Czar has censured M. Katkoff, the editor of the Moscow Gazette.

SUSPECTING THE PRESS.

MADRID, April 4.—In consequence of the finding of a case of gunpowder with cartridges and fuse attached in the doorway of his bureau, the President of the Cortes has cancelled all cards of admission to the Parliament buildings held by journalists of both foreign and native press.

THE CRIMES BILL.

LONDON, April 4.—Mr. W. H. Smith, replying to a question in the House of Commons this afternoon, said that, under the proposed Irish Crimes Amentment bill, one of the two magistrates exercising summary jurisdiction must have sufficient knowledge of the law. He (Mr. Smith) would not agree to such a drastic proposal as the removal of all Irish magistrates lacking legal education.

A Vessel Sunk.

NEW YORK, April 4.—The captain of the English steamer Ptolemy reports that yesterday an unknown schooner suddenly sunk at sea, apparently will all on board. The Ptolemy steamed to the spot where the vessel went down, but could find nothing but wreckage. Another vessel was in the neighborhood and may have picked up the crew.

OUR JUDGES.

THE Brockville Recorder says that we "insinuate" that it slanders the judiciary. We are not in the habit of insinuating, and in this case we do not insinuate but regret to have to state plainly that the Recorder, both on the former and the present occasion, slandered judges because it did not like their manner of applying the law of the land. It says that the judges of Haldimand and Algoma were guilty of high-handed partisan conduct which we condone. We have condoned nothing for we are not even aware that there is any wrongdoing on their part that could be condoned. If they have done wrong in carrying out their duty of administering the law of the land, there are means of correcting their mistakes or punishing wilful misconduct. We believe that the "Judge" or Stipendary Magistrate of Algoma is a Reformer, appointed by Mr. Mowat, but we must decline the Recorder's invitation to sit in judgment upon him. Our contemporary is also aggrieved because the system of preparing the voters' lists has "smirched the ermine of the bench with the mud of political partizanship." We regret that the Recorder should throw this partizan mud at the ermine, but we do not see how we can prevent it. We are not aware that any judge deserved a speck of it. In our own Riding the lists were prepared by the revising officers' clerk, who was the Sheriff, a Reformer appointed by Mr. Mowat, they were taken by him from the assessor's rolls, and were revised by the County Judge, who also revised the Provincial voters' lists under Mr. Mowat's legislation. We cannot see the wrong in this, everyone seemed satisfied with the fairness of the proceedings, and we noticed that in other Revision Courts the representatives of both parties expressed themselves equally satisfied. Still Reform journals will persist in throwing mud at judges in other places, not at home where the facts are known.

We do not deny the right of the Recorder to criticise even judges, but it is a right that should be very sparingly and carefully used. If judges misconduct themselves there are means of bringing them to account. If these means are not adopted, but mud throwing is used instead, the natural conclusion is that the attack proceeds from the antipathy felt by persons whom the judges have to condemn, or by the friends of those persons. If any individual judge has done wrong, the means provided by law should be used to remove him, but general abuse of the judiciary must have an injurious tendency to bring into contempt the Bench of which Canada is justly proud, and those using it evidently cannot be actuated by a desire for the public good.

It will not do for Reformers to say that the insults to the bench are caused by their being employed in matters which have a political bearing. Under Mr. Mowat's legislation, in which Reformers can see no flaw, judges revise on Provincial voters' lists, and adjudicate our disputed Provincial elections, yet Conservatives do not deem it incumbent upon them to bespatter the judiciary with accusations of partiality if matters do not go exactly to their liking. It is true the abuse of the judges in regard to Dominion elections springs from partizan animosity, but it is not justified, as it springs from the disreputable practice, which Reformers have reduced to a system of slandering all who differ from them where there is a question of politics. Respectable journals should not place themselves on a level with the criminal who throws an inkstand at the judge's head because he does not like the law or its administration.

JOBBING HIS PATRONAGE.

PUBLIC patronage, according to the system in this country, is administered as a reward for services to a party, which politicians rather naturally assume to be services to the community.

Even taking this system for granted, however, there are obvious restrictions. The services should be of a nature to show fitness for the position and they should be honest ones.

In Ottawa Mr. Mowat totally disregarded these simple rules. Though there were at first several candidates for the Carleton registrarship, there only remained two in the field, Mr. Waller and Mr. Coffey. As regards personal qualifications for the position, Mr. Waller had for more than a year filled the office so admirably that Mr. Mowat declared that the public interests had not suffered in the least. Mr. Coffey was a very young man altogether untried. Yet Mr. Mowat chose Mr. Coffey. As regards party services neither had a personal claim, but Mr. Waller was the son of a man who had secured the office because his zealous political services had prevented him from providing for his own future and that of his family, and who enjoyed it for only four years, so that the continuance in the position of his son, who had been his deputy and his efficient acting successor, would have accomplished the object of compensating the late Mr. Waller's family, while serving the interests of the public. Mr. Coffey similarly only claimed by relationship, his claim being that he was the brother of the editor of a Roman Catholic journal, who bargained for the substitution of his brother for another Roman Catholic then in charge of the office, his service in return being the bitter opposition of his journal to Conservative Roman Catholic candidates. So Mr. Mowat preferred Mr. Coffey to Mr. Waller. As for local party opinion, the representative Reformers of Ottawa, without distinction of race or creed, strongly supported the claims of Mr. Waller against Mr. Coffey. Yet Mr. Mowat, in the teeth of their authoritative recommendation, set them at defiance, and chose Mr. Coffey.

Mr. Mowat has by his acts admitted his own disgrace. For three months after he had perpetrated this iniquitous job, he dared not confess it. For three months after making this appointment by commission he concealed the disgraceful fact, and even went so far as to maintain the falsehood that he had not yet made his choice.

Mr. Mowat has evidently some scruples left, but they have not sufficient weight with him to induce him to act honestly.

MANHOOD SUFFRAGE

EVEN with a Premier so obstinate and averse to practical reforms as Mr. Mowat, an Opposition under an efficient and progressive leader like Meredith is able to make its mark upon the statute book in beneficial legislation. Repeatedly have Mr. Meredith and his supporters in the House moved in favor of manhood suffrage. Each time Mr. Mowat in his dictatorial and stubborn manner refused to accept the motion and he and his supporters voted it down. Now, however, Mr. Mowat dares no longer stand in the way of this reform, he finds that the people favour Mr. Meredith's course, not his, and he has given way, promising reluctantly to yield manhood suffrage before the next general election. Once more, as so often before, the people of Ontario have to thank the Opposition for progressive and liberal legislation in their interests. This is not a case of an administration waiting till time and circumstances are ripe for a beneficial change. There was not one reason why Mr. Mowat might not as well have adopted Mr. Meredith's suggestion before the last general election, as before the next appeal to the constituencies. He only yields now because he dares no longer refuse, and he only refused so obstinately on previous occasions because he could not overcome the reluctance he always feels to submit himself freely to the verdict of the people.

THE WINTER WHEAT CROP.

Weekly Report of the Chicago "Farmer's Review" on its Condition.

CHICAGO, April 3.—The following is the Farmer's Review crop report for this week:—The reports from the winter wheat growing States are still of a favorable tenor, the majority of the returns indicating that the fall sown grain is in the full average of condition. The weather continues dry in Missouri and Kansas, and there is great lack of moisture, particularly in the last named State, but as yet the crop has not been seriously injured on that account over any widly distributed area. In Michigan and Wisconsin large portions of the State are still under snow, and in Grand Traverse County the wheat fields are covered with two feet of snow. Returns from twenty-six counties in Illinois report winter wheat as looking fair to good, while in four counties the crop is looking badly. Freezing winds during the week had a bad effect on wheat throughout the State. Fifteen Indiana counties make favourable returns, and in two counties—Adams and Dekalb—the situation is described as bad. The general tenor of the reports from Kansas are more encouraging. The prospect of a fair to good yield is reported in 18 counties, but complaints of dry weather are made by all correspondents. In Mitchell county the crop prospect is poor. Favourable reports are made from 14 Missouri counties, and the outlook is described as discouraging in only one, Benton. Of those reporting this week, 14 Ohio counties make favourable returns, while seven counties describe the crop as looking poorly.

BURIED ALIVE.—A sad accident occurred near Tyrone on Thursday afternoon. While a number of men were trying to detach a mass of frozen earth overhanging a sand pit, Albert Maroney, a very promising young man, entered the pit to get a crowbar. While in the act of stooping to pick it up, the overhanging mass, which had proved before to be too solid to be broken, fell and killed him instantly, mangling his body in a terrible manner.—Sentinel Star.

COUNCIL MEETING.—The Council met on Monday, March 28th. All the members present. The minutes of the last meeting were read and confirmed. A By-law to provide for the appropriation and expenditure of $1800 in the general repairs of the Roads and Bridges within the Township, and to appoint Commissioners to superintend the expenditure of the same, passed its several readings and was signed and sealed. The Clerk was authorized to notify the following parties to remove their fences off the road allowance, namely: Stephen Nichols, John Trenium, Josiah Blewett, and to notify William Armstrong that the fence of lot 27, con 17, belonging to the A. T. H. Williams estate, must be removed this spring, as the Reeve has been instructed to take legal proceedings to have the road opened to the full width. The Council then adjourned to meet on the 30th of May as a Court of Revision.

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS

THE BOGUS NEWS FACTORY.

Somebody in the Dominion is engaged in the business of manufactoring news. At one time it will be starvation among the Labrador fishermen; at another time a new treaty between the United States and Great Britain; now a scheme for arbitration, and again a story of the imaginary murder of a fictitious family. If necessity is the mother of invention in Canada she is as prolific as a rabbit.—Detroit Journal.

WICKED BUT CUTE.

The Detroit Journal has discovered at last that lying despatches are often sent from Canada to the United States press. True, but the United States press accepts, publishes, editorially comments upon and pays for these lies, often knowing them to be such. Of the two the Canadian liar shows the most sense.—Toronto World (Indep.).

STARTLING CHARGES.

Already the Liberal Premier of Quebec, Hon. Mr. Mercier, is wavering in his opinions political as compared to oft-repeated views while in opposition. He has made large concessions in relation to the school question,—and what he regarded as a political evil on the part of his oponents he now seems ready to personally practice as an honest virtue; and he does it, too, at the sacrifice of avouched principles for the sake of maintaining place and power. Quebec is now in debt about $22 000,000. Mr. Mercier wants money; but instead of making the parishes pay what the municipalities in Ontario assume, he wants to increase the Provincial subsidy of the Dominion—to the fund of which Ontario contributes very much more, proportionately, that Quebec,—while the Globe, unlike when controlled by the Browns, is now disposed to fall in with Mr. Mercier's proposition.—Newmarket Era (Ref.).

The Boss Blacksmith.

A Chicago despatch says: All previous records of rapid construction of horse shoes was beaten last night by John Tunney, of this city, on a match with Mark Walsh, also of Chicago. The best previous record was that of Dun at Detroit, 100 shoes in on hour and forty-seven minutes. Tunney made his hundred shoes last night in one hour, twelve minutes and fifteen seconds. The first shoe was complete in twenty-two seconds.

Some startling facts have been elicited by the investigation now being held into the charges brought against members of the Montreal Police force, the evidence of Police Magistrate Dugas being particularly damaging.

PROTESTANT HOME.

A Committee representing the lady managers of the Protestant Home waited on the Council to obtain a grant toward aiding the Protestant Home.

The Mayor read the following petition addressed to the Council:—

"The petition of the Managing Committee of the Peterborough Protestant Home respectfully showeth as follows:—

That for some years past the accommodation afforded by the Protestant Home has been found inadequate to meet the requirements of the town.

In accordance with the suggestions of some members of your Honorable Body, Messrs. Robert Rowe and Andrew Douglass were requested to inspect the premises with the view to advising us as to the cheapest and best way of adding to said accommodation.

Messrs. Rowe and Douglass report that the cost of adding another story to the present building would be greater than the advantages to be derived thereupon but they suggest that the attic of said building could be converted into five additional rooms at the cost of about $200 in accordance with accompanying plan.

Your petitioners have also had an offer to heat the present building and the proposed additional rooms with hot water for about $550, it having been found impracticable to heat the same with hot air.

Your petitioners therefore pray your Honorable Body to grant them a sum sufficient to have the above much required improvements made.

And your petitioners will ever pray,

M. J. Weller, Mrs. Vernon,
E. Gilmour, E. B. Smith,
B. McWilliams, J. G. Hall,
E. S. Dunlop, M. Cox,
M. Hazlitt.

Mrs. VERNON briefly addressed the Council, asking aid for the purposes set forth above. They were in need of two wards—one for men and one for women.

The petition was, on motion, referred to the Finance Committee.

THE JUBILEE.

A deputation from the Sons of England waited on the Council with reference to the celebration of the Queen's Jubilee.

Mr. W. BRUNDRETT spoke, suggesting the opening of a public park in commemoration of the event, and a general celebration on the day set apart for celebrating Her Majesty's Jubilee. It was the feeling of many citizens that the town should do something to commemorate the event in some way.

Councillor KENDRY was glad that this matter was brought up. The town was no doubt behind the age in the matter of public parks. He knew of no place better suitable than the Dennistoun property, which, he was informed, was now in the market. There was about 13 acres in it, it was well wooded, and was situated on the river shore. He would suggest that if the property could be bought that the Council should buy it and set it apart for a park.

Councillor HARTLEY thought that this was about the best place they could pick for a park. He did not know what the cost would be, but he presumed it could be bought at a reasonable figure.

The MAYOR said that Peterborough was not behind the age in respect to public parks. He pointed to the Horticultural Gardens.

Councillor MENZIES said a gentleman from New York said he would not compare it to Lincoln Park. (Laughter.) In his own opinion there was nothing outside of Paris that could beat our Horticultural Gardens. (Laughter and applause.)

Councillor MENZIES moved, seconded by Councillor KENDRY,—That the matter of the purchase of the Dennistoun property be referred to the Property Committee.

HORTICULTURAL.

A deputation from the Horticultural Society waited on the Council.

Mr. ROPER was pleased to appear before the Council to ask for a third annual grant to be devoted to keeping the Horticultural Gardens in order. It was necessary to hire landscape gardener and to spend considerable on the grounds. He asked $400 for this year. He urged that the cow by-law be rigidly enforced.

Mr. DUMBLE said that there had been no expenditure made in Peterborough that had given more satisfaction than that spent on the Horticultural Gardens. It was the people's garden. It was a credit to the town and a great pleasure to the people. The Central Park as it now was was a standing disgrace. He advocated putting the public grounds in the hands of a Walks and Garden Committee. He said that the council—as a public body—should be ashamed of themselves for the little interest they have taken in the preservation and improvement of public grounds. He thought that a large piece of ground should be bought for a public park at the outskirts of the town. Great credit was due to the Horticultural society for their labors during the past three years.

The MAYOR said that he would not give the Horticultural Society credit for the state of the gardens. He could never find the Society when he wanted them. He had spent his time and his money to make the Gardens what they were. It cost him $900. He had sent his teams to work and he had driven cows off at nine o'clock at night. But he wasn't going to be here much this summer and hoped Mr. Roper would do a little more work this summer. He wasn't going to fight any longer. The Council and Horticultural Society had both to take hold of it. As far as the Society was concerned they took his money and paid their debts with it.

Messrs. Dumble and Roper both acknowledged what Mr. Stevenson had done. The latter proposed a vote of thanks but the latter refused to accept. He claimed the credit but he wanted no thanks for it.

Councillor MCNEIL moved, seconded by Councillor KELLY,—That the sum of $500 be granted to the Horticultural Society for the purpose of beautifying the Court House Park.

Councillor MCNAUGHTON opposed the motion. The poor man who had his taxes to pay and had hard work to pay them wanted them kept low.

Councillor HARTLEY supported the motion. All classes alike benefitted by the park, and no one begrudged the small amount spent on it. He thought Mr. McNaughton was aiming at trying to get the Gardens shut up to make pasture for the poor man's cow.

Councillor KENDRY supported the motion. It was the poor man who was benefitted.

Councillor DOUGLASS opposed the motion. The grants each year were getting larger, instead of smaller. $200 was the first grant asked for, then $300, and now $500 was the sum.

Councillor CAHILL moved, seconded by Councillor DAVIDSON,—That this Council, while desirous of beautifying the town in every possible way, deem it advisable not to spend any further sum for such purpose until steps are taken to place the town in a better sanitary condition, more particularly until something is done with Spaulding's Bay.

Councillor CAHILL thought, with Councillor McNiel, that the filling up of Spauldings Bay would be a good way to celebrate the Queen's jubilee. Her Majesty required healthy soldiers to fight her battles and healthy soldiers could not be drawn from an unhealthy place. It was a shame that when the town was given the money to fill in this bay 25 years ago that nothing had been done yet. He would not oppose beautifying the parks but he did not like people to be narrow in their views. He would like the council to act in a liberal spirit for providing for the beauty of the town. It was more than a shame that this town should have received enough money from the lands given to it by Government for the express purpose of providing means to fill the bad and that not a dollar had been spent for the purpose for which it was intended. The money got for this purpose had been spent on fine engines and other such things any he thought it only fair that the council should take hold of the work.

Councillor YELLAND remarked that if councillor Davidson and Cahill were samples of what No. 1 ward could produce, it must be a healthy place. As to good soldiers they were both good at fighting—at least as far as this Spaulding's Bay was concerned.

Councillor MCNEIL's motion was put and carried.

Councillor CAHILL did not ask for a vote on his.

SCOTT ACT FINES.

Councillor CAHILL moved, seconded by councillor MOORE,—That this council pay over to the County Council any money they are entitled to for Scott Act fines so soon as they get the Order-in-Council changed, so as to give this council a legal discharge from the custody of said moneys.—Carried.

FINANCE.

Councillor DAVIDSON read the following report:—

To the Mayor and Councillors of the Town of Peterborough:

GENTLEMEN,—Your Finance Committee beg leave to report and recommend the payment of the following accounts:—

Your Committee would recommend that Thos. Cahill be appointed arbitrator for the Town of Peterborough.

Also that the Clerk be instructed to write Chas. E. Thorne that the Corporation are anxious to encourage manufacturers and that they will exempt from taxation any bona fide concern for a term of ten years.

With reference to the application of the Scott Act Association your Committee are of the opinion that as various questions relating to the Scott Act are now under consideration your Committee would not make any recommendation for the present.

Your committee would recommend that each of the Constables give either a guarantee or bond for $400 or their separate bond for $400 and sureties for $200 each and that the Solicitor prepare the necessary by-law for this purpose.

All of which is respectfully submitted,

R. S. DAVIDSON,
Chairman.

Councillor KENDRY took objection to the police security clause.

Councillor YELLAND condemned the committee for not recommending a grant to the Scott Act Association. the Association were entitled to it.

Councillor KENDRY said that the Scott Act fines could be used for no other purposes than the enforcement of the Scott Act if anyone objected to it.

Councillor KENDRY moved, seconded by Councillor HARTDEY,—That the police security clause be struck out.—Lost.

The report was adopted.

COURT OF REVISION.

Councillor MOORE read the following report:—

To the Mayor and Council:

For "worn-out," "run-down," debilitated school teachers, milliners, seamstresses, housekeepers, and over-worked women generally, Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is the best of all restorative tonics. It is not a "Cure-all," but admirably fulfills a singleness of purpose, being a most potent Specific for all those Chronic Weaknesses and Diseases peculiar to women. It is a powerful, general as well as uterine, tonic and nervine, and imparts vigor and strength to the whole system. It promptly cures weakness of stomach, indigestion, bloating, weak back, nervous prostration, debility and sleeplessness, in either sex. Favorite Prescription is sold by druggists under our positive guarantee. See wrapper around bottle. Price $1.00, or six bottles for $5.00.

A large treatise on Diseases of Women, profusely illustrated with colored plates and numerous wood-cuts, sent for 10 cents in stamps. Address, WORLD'S DISPENSARY MEDICAL ASSOCIATION, 663 Main Street, Buffalo, N. Y.

EPPS'S COCOA

BREAKFAST.

"By a thorough knowlede of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected Cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there was a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished frame."—"Civil Service Gazette."

A FUSS ABOUT FINES.

The County Claims its Share—How it is to be Settled.

For a good while back there has been a contest between the Town and County in regard to the disposal of Scott Act fines. Each party, no doubt, was anxious to get just its own and no more, but peculiarly enough the advantage has gone first to one side and then to the other.

In the first place the prosecutor was by law entitled to half of the fines inflicted in Scott Act cases. With this thought in their heads the Scott Act Association waged a great fight with the hotel keepers when the Scott Act was first introduced. After having made up quite a bill of expense an Order-in-Council was passed setting forth that all fines inflicted in Scott Act cases within any county where the Scott Act was in force should go to such county or city for enforcement purposes. Here was a pretty mess! The Scott Act Association were "out" and so was the town. To set matters right in behalf of the town Mayor Stevenson and Councillor Moore went off to Ottawa. They explained that the County and Town were separated for municipal purposes; that the county was getting more than its share; that the Town had a right to get all fines inflicted in town, the same as with the cities. This explanation brought forth another Order-in-Council setting forth that all fines imposed in any incorporated town separated from the county in which it is situated for municipal purposes shall go to such town for enforcement purposes.

While all this was going on the Police Magistrate was handing over the fines to the Clerk of the court, who is also Treasurer of the Town, and these fines were, as a matter of course, deposited in the bank to the credit of the town.

When the new Order-in-Council came up it was found that by law the Town was entitled to all the fines except such as were imposed by the Magistrate while outside of Peterborough. It was now the County's turn to kick. Instead of the County receiving all the fines they were actually to receive none.

Negociation has been going on for some time to get matters arranged. Some members of the council think that the Town in addition to getting the fines in the Town cases, should get a share of the fines in the County cases. These members argue thus:

The county use our Magistrate, our court room, our Policemen, and all our court apparatus. Why shouldn't they pay something for it?

Magistrate Dumble answers that contention in this way: I am the County Magistrate as well as the Town Magistrate in relation to the Scott Act. If I were not the County Magistrate I wouldn't try one of the County cases. As for the Court apparatus, there are nearly always a number of Town cases on the docket when the County cases come up. If the policemen are used they get their fees for it. I believe that these cases have not cost the town a dollar and if I thought there was going to be this fuss over it I would have gone over into Ashburnham to try the County cases.

Some members of the Council, though inclined to give the County its own, agree that if the Town were in the same fix the County would not act so generously.

The Mayor thinks that the spirit of the Order-in-Council was to give the County fines to the County and the Town fines to the Town. No doubt if the County went to the trouble they could soon have the Order-in-Council changed. He was in favor of giving the County what he considered they were justly entitled to.

The matter was settled by the Town agreeing to hand over the County's share as soon as the Order-in-Council is changed, so as to allow it to be done legally.

The Collegiate Institute.

The average daily attendance for March at the Collegiate Institute was 163.

DON'T fail to see TURNBULL'S display of Millinery and Fancy Dress Goods on Wednesday and Thursday of this week.

Sale.

To-morrow, on the market square, at half-past ten o'clock, Mr. Charles Stapleton will sell one brown mare, one grey horse, a double set of harness and a long sleigh.

Coming.

Mr. Joseph Gibson, of Ingersoll, ex-Mayor of that town and a well known speaker, who took part in the famous Dunkin Act campaign here, will deliver two lectures in Peterborough shortly.

A Political Contest.

The ice in the rink is in curling condition again. Curlers are on the fly and a match has been arranged to take place this evening commencing at 7.15, five rinks aside, Grit vs. Tory. An admission fee of 10 cents will be charged to curlers participating in the game to pay for electric light, &c. A "roaring game" will no doubt be the result.

The Style—Every Lady should see the Grand Attractions at the Trade Palace this week.

Meeting of Midlanders.

The Lindsay Warder says:—"To an estimable Midlander officer from Peterborough do we owe the suggestion that it would be desirable to have an annual district dinner or meeting of the officers of the various corps. The place of meeting might change annually. This year the 40th, Northumberland, officers had a dinner. Every year the 45th have an annual meeting. But would it not be well to enlarge the sphere of action and have regular district meetings. There is no opportunity at the annual camps; and, in any event, only half the rural corps and none from the cities are then present, to discuss matters and meet in social converse. What do our militia officers say to the idea?"

PETERBOROUGH BOATING CLUB.

Proposed Re-organization—A Canoe Club and a Rowing Club.

The annual meeting of the Peterborough Boating Club was held at the Club House on Monday evening, with Mr. R. E. Wood, President, in the chair.

The accounts showed a balance after meeting the year's expenditures. They were referred to auditors to report at next meeting.

An offer of the proposed Peterborough Boating Club to purchase the boats of the P. B C., except the shell, and rent a portion of the premises, was accepted.

An offer was made for the shell, to remain open for a week.

Notice of motion was given to change the title of the Peterborough Boating Club to Peterborough Canoe Club, and make the consequent alterations in the rules.

The election of officers was postponed to the next meeting.

The meeting then adjourned.

A Midnight March.

After the Council meeting on Monday night His Worship Mayor Stevenson invited the Councillors and reporters to lunch with him at Chamberlain's restaurant, and two by two they went around the block. The Mayor had previously arranged the affair and everything was in readiness. After the collation was despatched a few short speeches followed and the party adjourned just as the clock struck twelve.

High Praise.

Competemt critics testify that the New Orleans' University singers are the best jubilee singers in America. The Rev. T. DeWitt Talmage says: "They gave several concerts in Brooklyn Tabernacle to large and enthusiastic audiences. They completely captivated the people by their quaint rendering of plantation songs." They will be here on Easter Monday. Tickets, to be obtained at any of the book stores, only 25 cents.

County Court.

His Honor Judge Weller held his April sitting of the County Court at the Court House to-day. The following cases were entered and heard;—Rush vs. Fitzgerald, an action on an account. Case settled between parties before trial. Mr. W. C. Sawers for plaintiff, Mr. E. B. Edwards for defendant. McMaster vs. Hayes, an action brought to enforce a mechanic's lien for $144.00; order granted in favor of notice of motion. Mr. C. W. Sawers for plaintiff.

Still Booming.

Large audience assembled in the Opera House on Monday evening at the temperance meeting. Adresses were given by the Rev. J. Judd White, the Rev. Mr. Johnston, of London, the Rev. I. Tovell and others. The singing continues to be an attraction. This evening, in the Opera House, in addition to Mr. White, the Rev. E. F. Torrence, M. A., the Rev. J. C. Wilson and the Rev. I. Tovell are expected to be present and a meeting of unusual interest is looked for.

Howden's Meat Market.

Mr. J. J. Howden moved into his new meat market to-day. The place is one of the finest meat markets in the Province, considered both as to appearance and utility. It is a well built two story building, having a frontage of about thirty feet and a depth of about sixty feet. A plate glass front with sliding half pane plate glass windows, is enclosed in neatly finished iron frame work. The inside is copiously furnished with mottled marble, and the window recesses are floored with it. The market is finished inside with oiled ash ornamented with walnut cornices. One of the most valuable appointments of the market is the large refrigerator. It occupies a space of about 15 square feet. For meats it has two compartments in the rear, one for body meats and in the front one for small meats. The latter has a glass front. The ice receptacle is capable of holding more than ten tons of ice. A cosy office completes the list of apartments. The sight of the meats from the street is very pretty. The quarters of different sizes are all ranged on hooks in a horseshoe shape. The attendants at the counter are obliging, the meats as usual, prime, and Howden's meat market from this time should go on and prosper.

WHO is the queerest kid in town? Why the KIDD who sells good boots at the lowest price. Men's Long Boots at $1.45, Ladies' Lace Boots 60 cents only.

The New Dry Goods Firm

—OF—

SHEEHY & CO.

We take pleasure in announcing that we have formally taken possession of the dry goods business carried on for the past twenty years by

T. DOLAN & CO.

In this, our first announcement, to the public, we wish to say that it is our intention to follow in the footsteps of our predecessors, MESSRS. T. DOLAN & CO. In the first place we intend to keep up the good reputation of our establishment by keeping on our shelves at all seasons at prices that will compete effectually with any house in Central Ontario the newest and best in all lines of Staple and Fancy Dry Goods.

In the second place we intend to adhere to the strictest principle of the firm, by advertising nothing but what we intend doing, and doing everything that we advertise.

Therefore as we wish to make some changes to beautify our store, we offer our new stock from now until MAY 31st, at such figures as will attract the attention of buyers.

Remember everything at reduced prices at

The Daily Review.

THURSDAY, APRIL 7, 1887.

AT the last meeting of the Board of Education some of the trustees spoke of the Church of England as using only selections from the Bible in her services. If it was intended to convey the idea that some portions of Scripture are selected and others omitted this is an error. The readings are from the Sacred Volume itself, and though there are appointed seasons for each portion they are so appointed that the whole Bible without omission shall be read within twelve months, the four Gospels and other parts of Scripture several times in the year and the Psalms twelve times. If the Church of England is used as an illustration its teaching and practice should be truthfully described.

THE BIBLE.

To the Editor of the Review.

SIR,—I see by your issue of yesterday that the precious "Ross Bible" was discussed at the School Board and that the Trustees were unable to decide whether they would retain it in the school or not. I hope the matter will be considered again and that there will be found enough Protestants on the Board to reinstate the Bible in its proper position. I am surprised that worthy brothers of the Orange order (an order which only exists as a protest against Popery) should adopt a Popish argument against the Bible, namely, that it is dangerous to be read by the common people, lest they should be impaired thereby. Why does not Mr. McWilliams propose that the Bible be read in Latin in the Collegiate Institute. I offer him that suggestion. I notice also that one member of the Board refers to the use of the Church of England in regard to the Bible. Now he knows as much about the Church of England as a cow does of playing the organ. The chapter in Genesis referred to was read this year to every congregation of the Church of England the world over on the third Sunday in lent, and as a matter of fact the Bible is read through every year in the services of the Church. Mr. Dumble thinks that chaper improper and not fit to be read before children, Well, we do not send the children out of church before it is read. Mr. Dumble's modesty appears to be similar to that of Sam Slick's fellow citizens, who, when he imported some statuary for the museum of his native town, had to have them properly clothed in pants and dresses so that the nerves of the public might not be shocked. I hope Mr. Dumble and those who think with him keep the Bible in their homes under lock and key so that their children will not contaminate their minds with it. "Evil be to them who evil think." Yours,

ANGLICAN.

Canadian Horses.

HALIFAX, N. S. April 6.—Adjutant-General Goldie has left for the upper Provinces to make the first purchases of Canadian horses to be sent to England for use in the army. The first shipment will be made from Montreal in June, and the Adjutant-General thinks he will be able to obtain all the animals for this lot in Ontario and Quebec. Afterwards he will proceed to Manitoba and the North-West to make purchase for the second lot to be sent from Montreal in October.

Sale of a Railway.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, April 6.—An official order of sale of the New York, Chicago & St. Louis Railway was placed on record in the Common Pleas Court here, yesterday. Mr. W. Caldwell, received of the road, is appointed master commissioner to conduct the sale. The property will be sold, after thirty days notice has been given, for not less than $16,000,000.

A Severe Punishment.

CHICAGO, April 6.—Forty prisoners at the Bridewell rebelled on Monday morning and refused to perform the tasks assigned to them. They were all handcuffed to their doors and compelled to stand through the night with their hands outside their cell doors. This brought them to terms.

A Coal Shaft Burned

OSKALOOSA, Iowa, April 6.—Coal shaft No. 2 was burned yesterday. Superintendent Story was badly hurt, but the miners escaped. The loss was $20,000.

Open Late—In order to accommodate their customers, Rowse's Trade Palace will keep open every evening this week.

MARITIME BANK FAILURE.

Startling Discovery in Connection with the Affair.

ST. JOHN, N. B., April 5.—In connection with the recent failure of the Maritime Bank, it is reported that Bills of exchange which passed between the Stewart firm, Guy, Bevan & Co. and the bank, were endorsed by boys under age in the employ of the three concerns. The last English mail brought notices to several of the boys that bills bearing their names had been dishonored, and asked them to provide for them. About a dozen boys were used for this purpose. The operations have been going on for some time, the bankers who accepted the bills thinking that the endorsers were responsible parties. One lad stated that when these firms and the Maritime Bank began handling the bills of exchange together no endorser was required save the party in whose name it was drawn, but as time past and the paper became known in the New York and Canadian markets some of the bankers demanded that in future it should bear more than one name. Then the boys were called into requisition. The lads say that they were never show the face of the bills, and until they received the notice they did not know the amounts that were contained in them. Some of the lads have endorsed to the extent of £4,000 sterling. Further developments are looked for.

CANADA IN ENGLAND.

Sir Geo. Stephen Gives His Views on Some Important Questions.

Sir George Stephen, Bart, was at his office bright and early this morning, and, when seen by a representative of the Star, was busily engaged with his voluminous correspondence. "I am unable," said the Baronet, "to give you any definite information regarding our Imperial mail subsidies, everything in that connection is hanging in mid-air, the Ministers, and in fact everyone in England, is so much occupied with the Irish question, which monopolizes everything else, that it is almost impossible to get anything done. I am confident, however, that in a short time the mail subsidy question to China and Japan over the C. P. R. will be granted."

"Has anything new transpired regarding the improved service on the Atlantic which has been so much discussed recently?"

"Nothing beyond the fact that everyone seems to realize that it must be improved, and must be able to compete with New York."

"It is stated that some Scottish capitalists intend tendering."

"I am confident tenders will be put in for a good service, but whether the Government will grant a sufficient subsidy to make such a service pay I cannot say. I know that certain parties contemplate tendering for a service which will be able to compete with the steamers sailing for New York and who realize that the only way to make it pay is by putting on such steamers. But they may ask a subsidy which the Government may not feel inclined to grant."

"Do you think anything will result from the colonial conference?"

"Really it is hard to say, it will probably end in talk. The Imperial authorities seem to be trying to get Canada and the other colonies to contribute toward the maintenance of the army and navy. Canada replies that she has already made an enormous contribution in the construction of the Canadian Pacific Railway, and now asks that it may be utilized as a portion of the defence of the Empire and as an Imperial highway."

"Is there any truth in the published reports that the C. P. R. will apply to Parliament for financial assistance during the approaching session of Parliament?"

"None whatever. We have no right or justification in doing so. We settled up with the Government last year, and we have no right to apply to them. Did we require any such aid the Canadian Pacific would have to get it from other quarters."

"As a matter of fact do you require it?"

"Not at all. The finances of the company are in a most satisfactory condition."

"How are you satisfied with the first winter's through traffic?"

"Well, this has been, as you know, an exceptionally severe winter, but notwithstanding that, we have done better than our neighbors and we have nothing to complain of."

"Did you hear the rumors relative to the possibility of Sir John's being elevated to the peerage and assuming the control of the High Commissionership in London?"

"No one heard of it until it came from Canada, and I don't think anyone believed it."

"How are Canadian matters in general viewed in England?"

"Every year there is increasing interest taken in Canada, and so far as emigration is concerned it will be very large, the largest, in fact, for many years past."

"And what is the feeling in Government circles?"

"Oh they are very kind and civil and all that. You know an Englishman will do anything in the world for you, so long as you don't ask him to put his hand in his pockets."

"And what about Home Rule; do you think it will carry before long?"

"Well really, it is very hard to say. You can make as good an estimate of its chances on this side as you can in England. Time will show."—Montreal Star.

The Knight's of Labor.

QUEBEC, April 6.—A representative of the Montreal Star called at the Palace this morning and was courteously received. After congratulating the newly arrived Cardinal, he was told, in reply to questions, that the whole subject of the Knights of Labor was in statu quo, and that the future procedure in connection with the subject was not yet known. The authorities declined to make known what, if any, decision has been arrived at.

THE PARIS EXHIBITION.

BERLIN, April 6.—Germany and Austria will imitate the action of Russia in declining to take part in the Paris Exhibition of 1889. The Kreuz Zeitung and National Zeitung, referring to the Paris exhibition, declare it would be an act of impropriety and an act of danger to the monarchies of Europe to do anything tending to glorify the revolution.

NIHILISTS ACTIVE.

ST. PETERSBURG, April 6.—Revolutionary proclamations issued by the military section of the Nihilists have been seized at St. Petersburg and Gatschina. It is reported that a dynamite shell laboratory has been discovered at Cronstadt, the manager of which, a student, has committed suicide.

AN "INVINCIBLE" RELEASED.

LONDON, April 6.—Doyle, the "Invincible," has been released on a ticket-of-leave He complains bitterly of the treatment he received while in confinement and alleges that the prison authorities single out Irish convicts for especially hard punishment.

THE LANSDOWNE TENANTS.

DUBLIN April 6.—The attempts of the agent to compromise with the tenants on Lord Lansdowne's estate have failed, and the work of evicting all who refuse to pay the rents demanded will be resumed about April 20.

HYDE PARK MEETING.

LONDON, April 6.—The hand bills announcing the holding of a Radical demonstration against the Coercion bill in Hyde Park, on Monday, contain a digest of the Crimes Bill. A feature of the demonstration will be the wearing of green badges by the stewards. The promoters of the affair have been promised assistance from numerous sources and are sanguine of a great gathering. A mass meeting of Liberals will also be held in Liverpool next week to protest against the Coercion Bill.

A GERMAN OPINION.

BERLIN, April 6.—The Tageblatt thinks that if the British Government attempts to enforce the Coercion Bill civil war in Ireland will be inevitable.

A FIERCE ATTACK.

LONDON, April 5.—Lord Selborne, in an article in the Liberal Unionist, makes a fierce attack upon the Irish priesthood.

MEMBERS TAKING HOLIDAYS.

LONDON, April 5.—The House of Commons is practically taking a week's holidays, so many members are pairing. The Government insists that the debate on the Irish Criminal Law Admendment bill shall proceed; but will postpone the division on the bill till the 19th inst. The Conservative whips retain enough members to keep their majority secure in order to prevent surprise.

WANT PROTECTION.

GLASGOW, April 5.—At a conference of Scotch millers yesterday a resolution was adopted demanding that a duty be imposed upon foreign flour.

AN AGITATION ENDED.

BERLIN, April 5.—The Bourse was a shade firmer to-day under Russian advices that the Czar's interview with M. Katkoff had resulted in an entente between Ms. Katkoff and De Giers, and that there has been a cessation of the Pan-Slavist agitation.

THE AFHAN FRONTIER.

ST. PETERSBURG, April 5.—Gen. Komaroff, the Russian military organizer, says the work of the Anglo-Russian Frontier Commission is not likely to lead to any useful result, and adds the force of circumstances will inevitably impel Russia sooner or later to move forward into the oasis left to the Afghans until she reaches her only natural and proper frontier, the Hindoo-Hoosh mountains.

THE QUEEN'S TRAVELS.

CANNES, April 6.—Queen Victoria left here for Aix-les-Bains last evening. There was an immense crowd at the station to witness Her Majesty's departure. The English and French squadrons were illuminated.

THE MEER PREPARED.

LONDON, April 6.—A despatch from Allahabad says; "Afghan advices say that the Ghilzai rising is slowly developing. It is reported that the road from Cabul to Candahar is closed north of Khelat-I-Ghilzai. The Ameer, however, is full of confidence. The rumors that he has applied to the Indian Government for aid is unworthy of credence. The Ghilzais are in lack of good fire-arms, leaders and money, but they will probably fight desperately as the Ameer's troops close around them. The Ameer's enemies in India are busy spreading alarming rumors, but the latest report from Cabul show that he is fully prepared to deal with the rebellion.

New Coadjutor Bishop.

WINNIPEG, Man., April 6.—It is said here that Father Lefevre, superior of the Oblat Order, will be appointed Coadjutor Bishop of St. Boniface diocese, to assist Archbishop Tache.

A Reform Candidate.

LINDSAY, April 6.—At the Reform Convention held to-day, Mr. Wm. Needler, of Lindsay, was chosen as the Reform candidate for South Victoria. Mr. Needler accepted the nomination.

Convict Labor Advocated.

KINGSTON, Ont., April 6.—A strong deputation has been appointed to wait on the Minister of Justice at Ottawa to get the harbor improvements done by convict labor, and also to build a dry dock, which could be leased. There is plenty of work for it if completed.

Trade with Australia.

WINNIPEG, Man., April 6.—W. C. Woods, son of Agent General Wood, sent to Australia last autumn by the Dominion Government, has arrived from Sydney. He says that the Australian Government and merchants are eager to advance trade between the two colonies. His father has established an office in Sydney, and branch offices will be established in Melbourne and Brisbane. Mr. Woods will go east in a week or so to interview manufacturers, after which he will return to Australia.

THE ELECTION RETURNS.

REFORM journals are now slandering the Macdonald Administration for asserted interference with the Clerk of the Crown in Chancery as to the order of gazetting the returns of members elected to the House of Commons. Other Reform journals to vary their slanders are villifying the Returning Officers for asserted partizality and partizanship in making their returns.

Well, the Clerk of the Crown in Chancery has fully explained the matter to the Reform organ in Ottawa. The time of his gazetting the elected members depends, not upon any interference by the Ministers, but upon the degree of promptitude of the Returning Officers and the completeness of their returns. The very first case he mentioned as an illustration is that of East Peterborough, the returns for which arrived late though there was no recount. The second case he mentioned is that of West Peterborough, the returns for which arrived before those for the East Riding, though there was a recount. Both of these officers are Reformers; they are the Registrar and Sheriff of this County appointed by Mr. Mowat; they were the Returning Officers at the recent Provincial elections held under the direction of a Reform Administration.

It is evident that neither unfair partizanship in the Returning Officers nor improper interference by the Dominion Administration regulates the order in which the returns are officially published. The Reform journals had no reason to suppose that any wrong had been committed, they made no enquiry, which would have shown their calumnies to be unfounded, but after their habit they took any opportunity of villifying their successful political opponents and the officials appointed by them. As usual they knew they were uttering cowardly falsehoods, but they hoped that some of their readers might believe them. They eagerly slandered honorable men, many of them their own political friends, on the bare chance of some odium in the eyes of the people of Canada, being reflected upon the statesmen who are offensive to them because entrusted to administer the affairs of the Dominion.

A KIND OF PROTECTION.

THE following appears as an editorial note in the Brockville Recorder:—

"A kind of protection the booksellers object to is proposed, namely, a specific duty of 25 per cent. upon books. At a meeting of the trade in Toronto last week to protest against the proposed increase it was shown that the duty on such books as are commonly read, weighing from one-half to one and a half pounds would almost, if not quite, double their price, and one popular paper-covered work was exhibited, the duty on which would be 37½ cents, while it now retails at 30 cents."

There are two or three points in this extract that seem to require explanation. Some kind of protection is proposed, it is said, but by whom is it proposed? Not by the Government, at any rate, because they do not make known proposed changes in the tariff until they are brought down in the House. Then a "specific duty of 25 per cent." is a kind of protection that might reasonably be objected to, for who could tell how it would work? A specific duty, on some stated basis, might be understood, but what, in the name of Cartwright! is a specific duty of 25 per cent.? Whatever it is, it appears that it would operate strangely. To arrive at the amount of duty the book seems to be weighed, from which one might conclude that the "per cent." meant per hundred pounds. But that would be so light a duty that it would be no protection, and hardly worth raising a row about. Then the duty on a book worth 30 cents, it is said, would be 37½ cents; but just how a 25 per cent. (ad valorem) duty would more than double the price of the article is a deep mystery. Altogether it does seem that an explanation is necessary, and until it is forthcoming the booksellers should keep their armour bright and not cease protesting.

NOT long ago the Reform press was howling because every man of the North-West Mounted Police was not decorated with the medal for the campaign against Riel and the half-breeds under him. Now the same band of slanderers are abusing the Dominion Government and the North-West Police because the latter voted for representatives in the House of Commons, vociferating that their votes should not be allowed to weigh against the poor half-breeds of Batoche. Any dodge to stir up ill-will and antipathy among the people who will not trust them with power.

IN some remarks on the proposed exploration of the Yukon River, the London Advertiser says: "The boundary in that quarter follows a mountain." The boundary between Canada and Alaska, where the Yukon River crosses it, does not follow a mountain but a meridian. If the Advertiser were to obtain a little information as to the geography of Canada from any schoolmaster, however meagrely educated, it need not make such an exhibition of its ignorance.

THE statement published in the Canada Gazette of the revenue and expenditure for the current fiscal year up to March 31st, shows a surplus of receipts over expenditure of $1,215,934.

ONTARIO LEGISLATURE

THE FIRST SESSION OF THE SIXTH PROVINCIAL PARLIAMENT.

Drainage Loans—Distress for Rent—The Education Department and School Law—Text Book on Alcoholic Stimulants.

UNIVERSITY FEDERATION.

TUESDAY, April 5.—Two bills were introduced, one being a bill respecting the confederation of University of Toronto and University College. Several bills were read the third time.

MUNICIPAL DRAINAGE.

Mr. M. Ross moved the House in committee of the whole on the resolutions reducing the rate on all new drainage loans to 4 per cent., applicable to all payments yet to be made on past loans. The resolution was reported.

MINORS.

Mr. Hardy's bill respecting the guardianship of minors was passed through committee of the whole.

DISTRESS FOR RENT.

Mr. Hardy's bill respecting distress for rent and taxes was amended so as to leave goods received on hire, etc., in the same position as at present. Another amendment made was that the goods of sub-tenants should take the same position as the goods of tenants. It was also provided that when growing or standing crops are seized they may be advertised and sold in the same manner as other goods.

EDUCATION DEPARTMENT.

Mr. G. M. Ross's bill to amend the Act respecting the Education Department was read the second time. It empowered the department to make regulations for the study of agriculture and for scientific instruction as to the nature of alcoholic stimulants, and to authorize text books in each subject for the use of teachers and pupils; also to regulate for the establishment of kindergarten schools.

DRAINAGE LOANS.

The bill respecting drainage loans (Mr. A. M. Ross) was read the second time.

THE SCHOOL BILL.

Hon. G. W. Ross moved the House into committee on the bill to amend the Act respecting the Public schools.

Section 38 provided that when the ratepayers refuse to approve of a proposal for raising money for the school accommodation required by the Act, it shall be lawful for the municipality in which such school section is situated, on the report of the Public School Inspector that the accommodation is inadequate, on the application of the Trustees of such section to issue debentures in the manner provided in this Act, for any of the purposes in this section mentioned, without the approval of the ratepayers of such school section.

Messrs. Meredith, Creighton and Waters objected to the clause, and it was allowed to stand.

The committee rose and reported progress.

Mr. MOWAT moved that the House meet on Thursday at two o'clock, and adjourn at four o'clock until the following Tuesday. He thought then that the House could count on concluding the business during the remainder of that week.

The motion was agreed to, and the House adjourned at six o'clock.

THE COLONIAL CONFERENCE.

Naval Defence of the Australian Colonies Discussed in Secret Session.

LONDON, April 6.—The Colonial Conference met in secret session yesterday, when the question of the naval defence of the Australian colonies was discussed. The seven colonies were represented by sixteen delegates. Sir Henry Holland presided, and assisted by Lord George Hamilton, First Lord of the Admiralty; Admirals Hood and Hoskins, naval lords, and the Earl of Onslow, Under Secretary of State. Sir Alex. Campbell, representing Canada; Hon. Mr. Thorburn and Sir Ambrose Shea, representing Newfoundland, and the Hon. T. Upington, representing South Africa were also present. The official report states that the proceedings were necessarily of a confidential nature, and, after a full discussion, the further consideration of the question was adjourned until the 18th inst., to enable representatives to communicate further with their respective governments upon the proposals made by Her Majesty's Government. To-day the subjects discussed will be the loss of life at sea and the enforcement of colonial judgments in England and vice versa. The President and Parliamentary Secretary of the Board of Trade have been invited to take part in the debate. The proceedings at yesterday's meeting have given immense satisfaction, and English politicians and delegates express themselves as highly delighted. In the lobby the belief prevails that the conference will prove a lasting benefit to the British Empire. All the newspapers publish laudatory articles.

MOUNT PLEASANT.

From Our Own Correspondent.

OFF FOR DAKOTA.—On Tuesday, the 29th of March, Mr. Henry Ewing, of this place, left for Dakota, where he intended to make his home. He took with him all necessary farm implements, and three fine horses, which will be just what he will need to break up the prairie. Mr. A. J. McLean, of this place, left on the same train for Dakota also, where he intends to try his fortune. We wish both of them a pleasant trip, and after they arrive prosperity in that new country.

GONE TO TORONTO.—Mr. Robert McLean, of this place, left for Toronto on Friday, 1st of April, where he has obtained employment with Messrs. Flavelle and Sadler, who have lately gone into business in the Queen City.

SCOTT ACT.—There has been some talk of utilizing the Scott Act here, but as yet it has ended in talk.

ROBINS.—The first robin was seen here on the 2nd of April and he seemed to be welcomed by all.

SUGAR MAKING.—Quite a number of farmers in this locality are preparing these nice days to make maple sugar. I hope some of them will remember your humble scribe when they are making taffy.

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS

A YAWNING CHASM.

The Globe consoles itself with the reflection that "The the most hopeful of Tories do not now claim a majority of forty" in the House. But between that and the claim of a majority of one for the Opposition there is a yawning chasm, deep as the sea and wide as the church.—Toronto World (ind.)

ENGLISH DEMANDS FOR PROTECTON

Recently a meeting was held in Leicester, to consider the existing depression in agriculture and trades, and the best methods of bringing about a remedy. The attendance was large and influential, the Duke of Rutland, Mr. Ellis, M.P., Mr. Moreton-Frewen, and other gentlemen explaining their views on the question of protection and free trade; and it is evident from the reports of the meeting which have reached us that the sentiment of those present was almost unanimous in recommending protection as a cure for the depressed condition of affairs as existing in that country.—Canadian Manufacturer.

ONTARIO'S CUE.

Ontario is the milch cow of the Dominion. The other provinces draw, and draw, and draw, but Ontario has to pay the heavy end of the drafts. Such being the case, it should have been Ontario policy all along to "sit upon" provincial powers generally, and to stand up for Dominion powers and the protection of the Dominion treasury.—Toronto World (Indep.)

THE GLOBE'S TEACHING.

The people of Quebec and of the Maritime Provinces have been taught for years to regard the people of Ontario as their enemies.—Toronto Globe.

MERCIER'S VIEWS.

Is their no danger in this movement for M. Mercier's own Province? That gentleman, M. Mercier, in the year 1879 voted for a resolution which affirmed that Quebec "is satisfied with the form of Government which she enjoys in virtue of the British North America Act:" not that a federal system was his first choice; he only accepted it out of necessity. With the Hon. Alex. Mackenzie and Sir John Macdonald, he thought a consolidated government preferable. "I have," he said in the Quebec Legislature, Jan. 6, 1875, "already over and again declared that if we could have one government and one Parliament for all the Provinces, we should have the best, the least expensive, the most vigorous and the strongest."—Monetary Times.

A USEFUL CHECK.

There is no more wholesome discipline for a government or a people than the necessity of raising its own revenue. The government is obliged to consult the wishes, the capability, the wants and even the prejudices of the people, in the raising of the revenue. This necessity has its inconveniences, and even serious drawbacks, but these are more than counterbalanced by the beneficent influence of the check imposed on rash or ill considered expenditure. —Monetary Times.

NO INTIMIDATION.

Next to the popularity which each candidate was shown to possess nearest home, the most pleasing feature of the contest was the independence with which the votes were cast, showing that if bribery or intimation were attempted they were not very successful. Where there are many men there must be many minds, else there would be no need of election contests. And from the extreme north to the extreme south of of the district, the voter gave his name freely for the candidate of his choice whether there was one or a hundred against him.—Edmonton Bulletin.

AN INDISCREET DIPLOMAT.

BERLIN, April 5.—The North German Gazette, Prince Bismarck's organ, takes notice of the conduct of Senor Moencarini, the Spanish Consul at Hong Kong, who at a recent banquet in that city toasted the prosperity of France and expressed a hope that she would have a brilliant revanche. The Gazette says that the other diplomats at the banquet were unable to suppress their expressions of surprise at this speech, and adds:—"Germany will not fail to make to Spain proper and weighty comments on the occurrence. Spain must not permit her diplomats to forget with culpable frivolity what is due to their position."

A LARGE SCHEME.

We have got to the bottom of the Imperial Federation business. It is a deep-laid scheme of Sir John Macdonald's to annex the British Empire with all its dependencies to the Dominion, then hand it over to a syndicate as part of a scheme to be known as the consolidated earth. There are billions in it. J. J. C. Abbott will draw up the charter. Certain persons' ambition will satisfied, unless, like Alexander, they should want the firmament with the milky way thrown in for another gerrymander.—Montreal Post (Reform).

TWO YEARS AND MORE.

Mr. Mowat may propose his manhood suffrage scheme next session. In which event the "Reform" leader will be only two years behind the Conservative leader, Mr. Meredith, in the matter of this reform. —Hamilton Spectator.

PORT HOPE.

THE TOWN DEBT.—The deputation deputed to go to Toronto and wait upon the Ontario Government, with reference to a rearrangement of Port Hope's indebtedness, went up, accompanied by Mr. T. Dixon Craig, M. P. P., on Monday morning. It was composed of Mayor Smith, Messrs. D. Chisholm, J. G. Williams and H. H. Burnham, and Councillor Ross. Interviews had been arranged by Mr. Craig with Hon. Mr. Mowat and Hon. Treasurer A. M. Ross for the afternoon, but Mr. Mowat being engaged during the afternoon and early evening, the deputation was introduced by Mr. Craig to Mr. Ross alone. The claims of the town were laid before him, and the whole matter explained to him as fully as possible The representations of the deputation were received by the Hon. Treasurer in a manner, which, if not encouraging, was not, at least, discouraging. It was found to be impossible to meet Mr. Mowat until ten o'clock that evening, and Messrs. Chisholm and Williams were obliged to return and leave the other members of the deputation with Mr. Craig to interview the Premier. Mr. Mowat was gracious, and in that, was all that could be expected. The matter would be talked over by the members of the Government, and if they could do anything it would be done. The deputation having completed their mission, returned this morning. What will be the outcome?—Times.

HASTINGS.

HE GOT THERE.—Mr. Joseph Humphries, a former resident of Asphodel, and brother of Mr. Thos., Israel, Henry and Job Humphries, of that township, was returned for Vancouver, at the recent Dominion election. Unlike his brothers, Mr. Joseph is a believer in John A.—Star.

DUNN'S BAKING POWDER
THE COOK'S BEST FRIEND

"Great Oaks From Little Acorns Grow," and great benefits ensue from the use of Dr. Pierce's "Pleasant Purgative Pellets"—tiny, sugar-coated granules—which obviate the necessity of choking and "gagging" in the attempt to swallow some huge bolus of uninviting aspect and disagreeable effect. Their cathartic action is thorough, yet perfectly gentle, and unlike other pills, they never react towards constipation. In cases of sick-headache, and as a promoter of digestion, they are unsurpassed. By druggists.
